Thought Provoking Comment On Subjects Of Public Interest

Lest Folks Get Confused...

Wednesday's issue of the Times carried an article on the front page of the second section noting that the wastewater treatment plant in Thief River Falls was one of 41 in the state to receive commendation for achieving water quality objectives in 1986.

That use of the word "wastewater" may have been more than a little confusing. This time of year we're frequently made aware of the apperance of water flowing from taps in the city of Thief River Falls. It would be easy to confuse the story about wastewater quality with tap water quality. At least one of our readers did exactly that.

We received a letter Friday morning that commented on the award and then pointed out difficulties that the city has had with turbidity in its water supply. It soon became obvious that the writer had not drawn the distinction between the water plant (which filters and treats water going into the city's water mains) and the wastewater system (which handles disposition of the city's sewage flow).

When the writer was contacted and the difference explained, the letter was hastily withdrawn. But it is entirely likely that a number of other readers could have made the same mistake, and the record should be set straight. The city still has a problem with state compliance regarding turbidity of its water supply, but its sewage department did receive high marks for its wastewater treatment.

In one person's assessment of modern living, he said that 98 per cent of American homes have television and only 96 per cent have indoor plumbing, an indicator that there is more crap coming into American homes than is going out. It would appear that Thief River Falls is better able to successfully deal with what is going out than what is coming in.

The Governor Writes . . .

One of the more recently popular ways for politicians to attempt their campaigning and political maneuvering has been to send "letters to the editor." Congressman Arlan Stangeland has been doing a lot of that sort of thing since last fall and state legislators from all around the state have been active in letter writing lately as well.

There are a couple of very good reasons for the effort. First, readership of letters to the editor in community newspapers tends to be very high. There is intense interest by people in what other people think about a problem or situation. Second, they are published free of charge as a service to the public. Politicians like the combination of high readership and no cost.

Most recent joiner of the parade is Gov. Rudy Perpich who wrote the Times a letter dated April Fool's day. He is pushing his legislative bonding proposal and he wants a little more pressure put on the legislators by the folks back home. Because Thief River Falls is high on the priority list for AVTI and community college building program funding, it is also high on the list of political arm-twisting.

Well, it's not often that we get a personally signed letter from the governor of any state, especially Minnesota. It's too important an occasion to simply pass off without notation, and so we publish the governor's letter as follows:

Dear Sir:

Minnesota recently made the honor roll on an "economic report card" issued by the Corporation for Enterprise Development in Washington, D.C. We were one of few states so honored, and one of the reasons is that we invest heavily in education and infrastructure.

I want to keep us on that honor roll, and one of the ways is to keep on investing in needed buildings at our colleges, universities and AVTIs. That's why I've proposed a substantial bonding bill in the current session, but legislative leaders are telling me they may only pass about half of it.

That's not good enough. That means we may not get $1.7 million in building construction at the Thief River Falls AVTI, for new classrooms, cafeteria, child care facilities, library and instructor offices for the aviation training program. Also at stake is $3.7 million for a new student center, administration office, child care and storage at Northland community college.

Everyone who wants to keep these projects moving should get in touch with Senator LeRoy Stumpf and Representative Wally Sparby at the Capitol and let them know we need the full bonding bill this year. You can address them at the State Capitol, St. Paul, MN 55155.

New buildings are an investment in the future, an investment in education and an investment in jobs. And a strong construction program provides jobs for bricklayers, carpenters, painters and truck drivers. But we won't have those jobs unless the Legislature acts soon to pass the full bonding bill.

Sincerely,
Rudy Perpich
Governor

Parable Of Perspective

There was a Bill in the legislature of Minnesota that all users of unleaded gasoline in the state should have available to them only gasoline which contained 10 per cent ethanol. This bill was proposed during the reign of King Rudy of Perpich, because there was weeping and travail in the land that those who tilled the soil were in great need.

And it came to pass that the Bill was the topic of much discussion and the populace was exceeding divided over it, causing lobbyists and legislators alike to writhe and gnash their teeth.

Upon the scene came Merlyn Lokensgard, ruler of the tribe of Farm Bureau which had populated the farm lands from Lake of the Woods on the north to the land of Iowa on the south, and from the Lake of Superior on the east to the lands of Dakota on the west. Addressing the populace that would listen, he spake thus:

"If we have a law that says all unleaded fuel must have the ethanol blend, there would be a market for 80 million bushels of corn and we would hope that much of this corn would come from Minnesota farms." (This was spoken at a time when there was pestilence of great surpluses and grain storage bins bursting at the seams from bountiful harvests of prior years. Producers were plagued with overabundance so that they could not barter their produce for profit.)

"We want to emphasize that ethanol is tested and approved as a gasoline blend," saeth Lokensgard, "and has been unfairly blamed for causing damages in automobiles. We feel that ethanol is good, not only for cars but for the economy."

There was in the same state one Bob McFarlin Jr., a warrior of words with allegiance to the council of Minnesota Petroleum, and a defender of freedom for the masses. When he heard of the proposed Bill, he spake thus:

"Minnesota motorists, boaters, snowmobile owners and other motor fuel users would have only two product choices for unleaded fuel — premium or gasohol. Ethanol is different things to different people, but one thing ethanol should never be is mandatory."

Moreover, McFarlin Jr. of Petroleum railed against the tribute to be paid by the masses: "Proponents acknowledge that one objective of the bill is to have the mandatory increased demand for ethanol increase the price of corn and other grains," he saeth. "Along with the increased price of corn comes an increase in the price of ethanol — and an increase in the price of gasohol."

The rulers of the land of Minnesota listened to Lokensgard and those who joined at his right hand, and they listened also to McFarlin Jr. and those who came together in his camp, and they reasoned thus:

"What is good for the farmer is good for the land of Minnesota, and therefore Lokensgard speaks true. And what is best for the masses is freedom of choice and low prices, and therefore McFarlin Jr. also speaks truth." And there was continuing dilemma in the legislature of the land of Minnesota.

This then is the lesson to be learned, that it is not so much whereof a person speaks or whatsoever a person speaks but wherefrom a person speaks. For the perspective changeth from one vantage point to another, and the view is as clear from either position. One must simply choose where to stand.

Borrowed Nonsense

The insurance agent was interviewing the farmer. "Have you ever had any accidents?" he asked.

"None I can think of," the farmer replied. "A mule kicked in two of my ribs once, and a rattlesnake bit me on the leg when I was chasing cows through the brush and the old bull roughed me up another time."

"Good grief!" the agent exclaimed. "Don't you consider those accidents?"

"Guess not," the farmer said. "I reckon they done it on purpose."

YOUR TIMES

by David Eggenberger, President
Independent Business Association of Minnesota (IBAM)

When Minnesota's legislative process was crafted, our forefathers surely intended it to be a respectful give-and-take between constituent groups and legislators, as they work toward laws that will benefit Minnesota and its people.

But the plan has gone awry.

Minnesota's founders would be appalled at the disintegration of the legislative process if they could hear the derogatory and disrespectful remarks being made by some legislators this 1987 legislative session. Tape recordings are made of House and Senate committee meetings. These comments are taken directly from those tapes.

Rep. Joseph Begich (DFL-Eveleth) at a March 18 meeting of the House Fair Employment Practices Subcommittee. His opinion on how employers would treat workers if they could get away with it: "We'll pay everybody a buck and a half an hour, we'll house 'em in barracks, treat 'em like prisoners, if they get sick we take out a gun and we shoot 'em and we have 'em for target practice."

Rep. Paul Ogren (DFL-Aitkin) at the same March 18 meeting: Employers "eat the people that have lost their jobs in my community . . . they eat those people for breakfast." Ogren also said that the legislature needs to be the "conscience for corporate Minnesota . . . corporate America," because according to Ogren, the business community isn't capable of "fair treatment for the worker."

Rep. Jim Rice (DFL-St. Paul) at a Feb. 2 House Committee on Labor-Management Relations. His view on how employers treat workers: ". . . employers who'd steal the pennies off the eyeballs of their (workers') dead grandmothers to their own enrichment . . ."

Rep. David Battaglia (DFL-Two Harbors) at a March 23 meeting of the Unemployment Compensation-Workers Compensation Subcommittee meeting. His impression of the business community's efforts to reform one of the most generous unemployment comp systems in the nation: "I'm not going to watch industry rape the little people."

Sen. Karl Kroening (DFL-Minneapolis) at a March 19 Senate Employment Committee meeting. His response to a presentation showing that costs are increasing for business and that the Legislature should take action to make Minnesota more competitive: "I've read studies . . . generally they say that companies fail because of management. But a high percentage, 50 to 60 per cent, is due to white collar crime . . . that is the issue on the failure of businesses."

As president of the Independent Business Association of Minnesota (IBAM), an organization of some 2,000 Minnesota small business owners, I am outraged at these kinds of comments. The remarks clearly insult every employer in the state and insinuate that employers abuse workers and steal from them every chance they get. Personally, the business owners I know put in long, hard hours at their companies and treat their employees fairly at the very minimum. Often, a business owner is a friend of everyone at the company. Minnesota business owners do not deserve to be berated by legislators who can only see one side of an issue.

Legislators are elected to serve a wide range of people: workers, employers, students, teachers, families, the retired. To serve such a conglomeration, a legislator must be flexible and have the ability to listen and compromise.

Once a legislator rejects one whole constituency, such as the business community, it may be that the legislator is not fit to handle the powers he or she has been vested with.

To The Editor:

Here's to the lady who has spent the last 20 years working for the youth of this community. No one person has volunteered more time and talents working with our children.

As a volunteer for our 4-H program she has spent hundreds of hours helping to train their animals for competition, helping with demonstrations, setting up special events, encouraging everyone to take part and making them feel proud of their accomplishments. Along with 4-H she shares her creativity with her church, the garden club, her classmates, the fair board, and the list goes on and on.

The parents of our high school students would like to express their thanks to her each and every day as she tries to provide safety for hundreds of students traveling between schools for classes. In the cold, rain and storms we depend on her to provide protection for our young.

It saddens our hearts to know and see the disrespect these students have for an individual who puts up with verbal abuse, discourteous conduct and mental anguish for their own safety. Many times she has risked her life as a child decides to cross at an inappropriate time. And the best part — she asks for nothing more than a smile or a word of kindness.

Thanks Beattie!!

From a group of thankful and concerned parents.

Pork Producers Renew Effort To Interest Consumers

Renewed effort by the nation's pork producers to get consumer's more interested in purchasing pork products is not confined to television commercials in major metropolitan areas and colorful advertising pages in many of the major consumer magazines.

The National Pork Producers Council (NPPC), which planned and executed the industry's new national promotion and advertising program "Pork. The Other White Meat" is increasingly taking pork's message direct to the retail meat counter, and behind it to the retail meat manager.

A recent allocation of $397,000 in pork producer checkoff funds by the National pork board will be used by NPPC to help translate growing consumer awareness of pork's good nutrition, versatility and taste into increased retail sales. The additional funds will also be used to obtain better information, through research, about current practices and future plans of the nation's food retailers in terms of case space allocation for fresh pork and its competitors for space in the meat case.

"That's an area we never feel we know enough about, and this ad*ditional checkoff funding will allow* us to better track the decisions that are being made by retail meat managers and how we can position pork to take advantage of these decisions, now and in the future," said Russ Sanders, NPPC's Executive Director. The research will be cooperatively funded by the American Meat Institute and the beef industry.

Another major part of the expanded retail merchandising program will be aimed at increasing meat case allocation for pork and more frequent featuring of pork by retail stores through cooperative promotions. Under such arrangements, the NPPC shares promotional costs with selected retailers in making consumers aware of special pork sales. NPPC will also provide retailers in targeted retail markets with training sessions conducted by NPPC's own experienced pork merchandisers. Such sessions alert retailers to unique ways to market fresh pork at the meat counter, and demonstrate how better profits can be obtained as a result.

"The overall goal of this special co-op effort is to increase case space allocated to pork by 15 per cent in targeted stores, and to increase featuring of pork by 25 per cent in those same stores," according to Sanders who expects that to translate into significant increases in retail sales volume.

The additional checkoff funding to NPPC's retail merchandising efforts will also be used to obtain more extensive promotion of pork by the nation's food retailers during National meat month, an American meat institute-sponsored annual retail promotion.

The funds will also be used to develop and test an in-store advertising program that will integrate the new "Pork, The Other White Meat" campaign into the traditional NPPC Porkfest promotion effort in October. This in-store project, which will involve over 5,000 stores in targeted cities, is especially significant in that research has shown that well over 50 per cent of all meat buying decisions are made after the consumer is inside the store.

"With the traditional channels for consumer advertising constantly rising in cost, and the spectrum for that advertising becoming increasingly cluttered, retail promotion and merchandising techniques of the type this additional producer checkoff-funded program will provide, is assuming increased importance in our overall marketing plans involving pork," Sanders said.

Nat.'l Dairy Board Notes Consortium Of U Of M And SDSU

National dairy promotion and research board (NDPRB) announced recently that the consortium between the University of Minnesota and South Dakota State University will be one of six applicants throughout the United States to receive funding for a new dairy food research center.

During each of the next five years, the Minnesota-South Dakota research center will receive $400,000 from the NDPRB, $200,000 from the Minnesota dairy promotion council, $67,375 from the American dairy association of South Dakota, and $421,180 as matching funds from the University of Minnesota and South Dakota State University. Additional funding support has been pledged by Minnesota dairy processors and food companies.

The objective of all six centers is to increase the health of the U.S. dairy industry through dairy foods research and educational programs. The specific focus of the Minnesota-South Dakota consortium will be to improve the processing, quality, and safety of dairy foods through biotechnology.

The new center will initiate research which could lead to many new developments including:

— accelerated cheese ripening which could result in improved cheese products;

— new low-cholesterol dairy foods through development of special bacterial-starter cultures;

— rapid methods for detection of salmonella bacteria in dairy products;

— new uses for milk components and derived ingredients; and — solutions to the problem of lactose intolerance.

According to the center's administrator, Dr. Joseph Warthesen, professor of food science and nutrition, the Univeristy of Minnesota department of food science and nutrition is internationally recognized for its research work on the genetics of dairy starter cultures which are used in the manufacture of dairy products such as yogurt and cheese.

The other five centers to be funded nationally are: Cornell University of Vermont; University of Wisconsin; Utah State University-Oregon State University-Brigham Young University; University of California, Davis-California Politechnic State University; and North Carolina State University-Mississippi State University.

PERA Hearing On Survivor Option Set In St. Paul

Public Employees Retirement association (PERA) will hold a public hearing to formally adopt a new joint and survivor annuity option table that the PERA trustees approved last October. The public hearing will be held on Monday, May 4, at 1 p.m. in Room 300 South, State Office Building, 435 Park, St. Paul. Administrative law Judge Jon L. Lunde will preside over the hearing.

The trustees' action and the upcoming rule-making proceedings were made necessary by the discovery last August that the current option table was producing annuities that were not "actuarial equivalents" of normal annuities as required by law and was costing the PERA funds millions of dollars each year. The new survivor option table will take effect July 1, 1987, and will apply to PERA members retiring after June 30.

The current table was adopted by the old PERA board of trustees in 1983; the old board was turned out of office as a result of action by the state legislature in 1985. The new board of trustees has been in place since April of that year.

Like the current table, the new one will be used to compute the amount by which a retiring member's monthly annuity is reduced to provide survivorship protection. But the new table will result in a reduction in the member's monthly annuity amount that is greater than the reduction made by using the current table.

Since the current table went into effect July 1, 1983, the PERA funds have sustained successive fiscal year-end "mortality" losses that have cost the funds more than $30 million to date. Had the new board of trustees not decided to switch to the new and less generous table, the PERA funds would have incurred extremely large long-term liability costs that could have placed the funds in deficit.

The problem with the current option table was first identified by PERA's new actuarial consulting firm, Gabriel, Roeder, Smith & Company of Detroit, in August of last year. Said board president Arne Carlson, Minnesota's state auditor, "By approving the new table in October and having it take effect July 1, 1987, following formal rule-making, the board is trying to balance the need to curtail further losses while not moving so swiftly as to disrupt the retirement plans of the thousands of PERA members who have been relying on annuity estimates derived from the current table."

PERA has undertaken extensive efforts to notify its members of the coming change in order to avoid any possible surprises or litigation. Public comments are encouraged at the May 4 hearing.

Highway Funding Included In U.S. Transit Package

U.S. House of Representatives, in a 407 to 17 vote, approved the conference agreement reached on a major five-year highway and transit bill.

"This legislation demonstrates the determination of Congress to get the nation's highway program moving again. This package will not only make our roads safer for our children, but it will also avert the loss of some 700,000 construction jobs," said Rep. Arlan Stangeland, a member of the public works and transportation committee, which drafted the House bill.

In a separate vote, the House accepted an amendment, authored by Idaho Senator Steve Symms, which permits states to raise the amximum speed limit from the current 55 miles per hour to 65 miles per hour on rural Interdtate segments, defined as those segments outside urbanized areas of 50,000 or more. It will now go to the Senate with the conference report.

The highway bill authorizes $68.5 billion for the nation's federal-aid highway program and $17.8 billion for mass transit asstance over the five years of the bill.

Determined to act without delay in the new Congress, the House-Senate conferees have sought to prevent a recurrence of delays that have accompanied past failures to approve in a timely manner the interstate cost estimate, on which interstate construction funds are apportioned to the states.

In reaching the conference agreement, the House accepted the Senate's proposal that each state receive half of one per cent interstate construction funding.

Seventh district projects include the cities of Moorhead, Fosston and Bagley at a total price tag of $2.5 million, approximately $1.5 to the city of Moorhead.

HORSE RACING
IT'S GOOD BUSINESS FOR MINNESOTA

The real story behind the need for pari-mutuel take-out revision.

The Thoroughbred industry is a vital force in Minnesota's economy.
Since the legalization of pari-mutuel racing, horsemen in Minnesota have created thousands of jobs and generated millions of dollars of economic activity.

JOBS

Between farms and jobs on the racetrack, Thoroughbred horsemen employed over 2,600 people in 1986, with a total payroll in excess of $10 million. This does not include jobs created by suppliers of goods and services to horsemen or employees of Canterbury Downs.

SPENDING

Expenditures by Thoroughbred horsemen in 1986, both at the track and on farms, totalled approximately $40 million (including about $5 million in agricultural products). These dollars are in turn spent by recipients and flow into every industry in Minnesota creating a total economic impact in excess of $250 million.

AND THIS INDUSTRY IS ONLY BEGINNING.

IF ALLOWED TO GROW TO ITS FULL POTENTIAL, THE THOROUGHBRED INDUSTRY COULD BENEFIT THE MINNESOTA ECONOMY TO THE TUNE OF ONE BILLION DOLLARS A YEAR.

HOWEVER, this industry may not be given a chance to grow.

Money earned in purses at the race track is the heart of the industry and purse money in Minnesota is currently lower than at all comparable race tracks. This situation must be changed for the industry to survive and flourish!

Because the track and the activities of the horsemen are all privately financed, the state has no investment in racing. Nevertheless, the state takes more of the available revenue than is allocated to horsemen. From every dollar wagered at the track, about eighty cents is returned to winning bettors. Of the remaining twenty cents, horsemen (who have the greatest investment) receive only a nickel. HBPA Minnesota, which represents the Thoroughbred owners and trainers who race in Minnesota, is co-sponsoring legislation which will reduce the amount taken out by the state and increase the horsemen's percentage to eight cents of every dollar wagered. This will allow the industry to continue to grow while the state will continue to receive millions of new dollars in tax revenue from the industry. This has been portrayed by some as the track seeking a "tax break". It is not a tax break - either for horsemen or the track. We only ask that the state tax us like any other business.

We thought you would like to know the facts.

Northland Community College Hockey . . .

Steve Wiskow Sets NCC Scoring Record

Post-season statistical research has revealed that Steve Wiskow completed the 1986-87 hockey season as the new Northland Community College career scoring leader.

A Thief River Falls high school product who spent a year playing at DesMoines, IA in the United States Junior Hockey League before enrolling at Northland, Wiskow collected 90 points in his two years with the Pioneers, netting 34 goals and 56 assists. The point total and assist figure are both school records.

Previous career scoring record was shared by Mark Hughes and Gary Usitalo with 85 points each. Hughes (East Grand Forks) had 33 goals and what was a record 52 assists during the 1971-72 and 1972-73 seasons. Usitalo (Laurium, MI) had a record 52 goals and 33 assists during the 1980-81 and 1981-82 seasons.

Wiskow led Northland in scoring as a freshman with 22 goals, 19 assists and 41 points in 1985-86. This winter his goal production dropped to 12, but he wound up with 37 assists and a team-high 49 points.

Those 37 assists rank just behind a single-season record 38 set by Bob Lundbohm (Roseau) in 1971-72. Wiskow's 49 points ranks sixth on the school signle-season scoring chart, just behind current head coach Scott Bergland, who had 19 goals, 35 assists and 54 points during the 1979-80 season.

Lundbohm and Leo Marshall (Warroad) share the single-season Northland scoring record. They both netted 65 points during the 1971-72 season — the second year the school fielded a hockey team. Lundbohm, who would later serve as Northland head coach from 1976-77 through 1979-80, had 27 goals to go along with his 38 assists that year. Marshall had 33 goals and 32 assists. The 33 goals tops the school single-season goal scoring chart, a figure that was matched by Doug Dallmann (TRF) in 1978-79 and by Bob Martin (East Grand Forks) in 1984-85.

Behind Wiskow, Northland featured a balanced scoring attack this winter. Thief River Falls products Joe Blankenfeld, Bill Desrocher and Chad Bottem scored 31, 30 and 29 points, respectively, while Chad Swendseid of Grand Forks Central had 26 and Al Erickson of Thief River Falls netted 22. Blankenfeld, the team-leader with 17 goals, Desrocher and Erickson were freshmen this year. Bottem, second behind Blankenfeld on the goal scoring chart with 16, was a sophomore transfer student from an NJCAA national champion NDSU-Bottineau squad, and Swendseid was a returning sophomore letterman.

Those kind of scoring figures, plus the 91 per cent save percentage by goalies Dean Hanson and Kurt Chaffee, enabled Northland to come up with back-to-back winning seasons for just the second time in school hockey history, and the first time since Northland went 13-11 in 1971-72, followed by a 14-9-1 finish in 1972-73.

Hanson, a returning sophomore letterman from Grand Forks Central, carried a 3.75 goals-against average this year. Chaffee, a freshman from Fargo North, posted a 4.16 figure.

Bergland began his third year as Northland coach in outstanding fashion as the Pioneers won 13 of their first 16 games, including a 9-1 start in the Minnesota Community College Conference.

The season began with wins over the University of Minnesota-Crookston 6-3, Brainerd 9-3 and 5-2, Fergus Falls 8-6, and Rainy River 8-3, 5-1.

A post-holiday trip to the Chicago area produced an 8-5 win over a Franklin Park Junior A team, but also included 4-3 and 10-5 losses to the College of DuPage.

When MCCC play resumed in mid-January Northland started with a split against Hibbing, losing 5-4, but winning 4-3 in overtime. The Pioneers then swept Rainy River 5-0, 5-3 and Vermilion 15-2, 8-2 to go along with a 4-2 decision over Fergus Falls on Jan. 28 that put the team at 13-3.

But a string of late-season MCCC losses took some of the luster off the Pioneers' earlier accomplishments and threatened to knock them out of the four-team post-season playoffs.

A four-game losing streak included a 6-3, 5-2 sweep at the hands of Itasca, a 10-3 loss to UMC, and a 6-5 setback at the hands of Mesabi.

Northland interrupted the losing streak with a 5-3 win over Mesabi in the second half of a Feb. 6-7 weekend series, but lost a regular season-ending 3-1 contest to UMC in a weather-forced make-up game that appeared to end the Pioneers' playoff hopes.

However, results elsewhere in league play opened the playoff door for the Pioneers, putting them into the MCCC two-game, total-goal semifinal series against rival UMC. The Trojans' 4-2, 7-4 wins produced an 11-6 series triumph.

Ironically, Bergland said the Pioneers played some of their best hockey of the year during those late-season losses. But an attack that produced goals in bundles earlier suddenly came up dry.

"It got to the point where we couldn't put the puck in the net," Bergland explained. "We played our best hockey all year, but we couldn't put the puck in a soccer net."

While there was disappointment in the way the season ended, there was still a sense of accomplishment, said Bergland. "We're satisfied with what we accomplished. We're definitely on the right track. We're getting better every year," he said.

Bergland expects 13-to-14 members of this year's team to be back in uniform in 1987-88, which will be a big plus, he said, because the overall caliber of this year's group of high school hockey seniors is down somewhat.

Record-wise it wasn't one of the better finishes in Northalnd Community College men's basketball history. But a near-record ninth straight state tournament appearance that produced a second consecutive Minnesota Community College Conference state runner-up trophy made the 1986-87 season an unqualified success for the Pioneers and head coach Chet Engelman.

Northland bounced through a 12-11 regular season schedule, but gained a state tournament berth with a 7-4 second place finish in the Northwest Division. And the Pioneers did more than just make a post-season appearance as they upset Willmar 75-73 in the opening round state tournament quarterfinals and surprised Normandale 113-103 in the semifinals before losing to top-ranked Itasca 100-79 in the finals.

"The only goal we set was to qualify for the state tournament," said Engelman. "Reaching the finals was frosting on the cake."

Nine straight state tournament trips pulled Northland within one of matching the state record 10 consecutive appearances by Northwest Division rival Fergus Falls, a streak that ended in 1985-86. "We hope to match that record next year, and beat it the following year," said Engelman.

And with the runner-up finish, the Pioneers became the only team in the state to bring home trophies from each of the past five tournaments — two second places, a third place, and two consolation championship efforts.

Northland did it this winter with a roster that wasn't loaded with individual stars who have made the school a perennial MCCC power.

"I think this team probably came closer to reaching its potential than any team I've had at Northland," pointed out Engelman. "We had some ability, of course, but we weren't as strong overall as some of our teams in the past. We figured to get there (state tournament) we had to work hard and get a couple of breaks along the line. And that's what happened. The kids did a nice job; they worked hard."

Northland's 14-12 overall record included the most losses the Pioneers have had since they went 7-15 in 1972-73. They've had 14 straight winning seasons since then.

Part of the reason for the dozen losses was the fact the Pioneers faced what Engelman said was one of their toughest schedules ever. Four of the losses came against Itasca, the No. 1-ranked team in the MCCC; two of the losses came against Fergus Falls, the No. 2-ranked team in the MCCC for much of the year; and one of the losses was an early season setback to Iowa Lakes, a team that was voted the Pioneers' toughest opponent by team members, who said Itasca was No. 2 and Fergus Falls was No. 3.

The season started with a victory over an alumni team. Then came an appearance at the Austin Invitational where the Pioneers beat host Austin 90-69, but lost to Iowa Lakes 99-66. A stop in Willmar the same weekend resulted in a 55-52 Northland setback. December ended with back-to-back invitational tournaments at Rainy River, where Northland lost to Itasca 96-94 and beat Waseca 93-84, and at Itasca, where the Pioneers beat the University of Minnesota-Morris junior varsity 72-63 but lost to Itasca again, 102-79.

January started with a 100-82 loss to NDSU-Bottineau and an 86-63 win over the Grand Forks Air Force Base before the Pioneers began MCCC play with a 72-52 victory over Rainy River and a 73-67 triumph at Hibbing.

"A key game for us was that win at Hibbing when they were ranked No. 3 in the state," pointed out Engelman. "We knew we would have to play well to beat them, and we did. That game gave us a lot of confidence."

Grand Forks Air Froce Base beat Northland 73-62, but the Pioneers then collected three straight MCCC wins over Vermillion 84-66, Mesabi 85-76 and Brainerd 100-81. The one-sided win over Vermilion was also a confidence-builder, said Engelman, because the Ironmen were fresh from an upset victory over Itasca at the time.

The confidence was shaken a little, however, by four straight losses to Itasca 94-69, University of Minnesota-Crookston 80-74, NDSU-Bottineau 67-66, and Fergus Falls 91-66. The Pioneers bounced back to beat Brainerd 94-69, but lost to Fergus Falls 96-82 to set up a regular season-ending showdown with rival UMC. The winner was guaranteed a state tournament berth. Northland won 72-66.

"When we lost four in a row we could have died," Engelman said, "but we didn't. The kids came back."

The state tournament produced the season highlights. "The kids really did a nice job in the Willmar game. That was the key," pointed out Engelman. "Willmar has the best inside game in the state, and we used four different defenses to force them to shoot the three-pointers. The Normandale game was one of the better games Northland has ever played. It was as good a game as I've ever seen at the state tournament, and I've seen lots of them."

Even in losing to Itasca in the finals the Pioneers played well, according to Engelman. "They're tough, no doubt about it. We stayed with them most of the game until we gave them some free throws while we tried to catch up at the end."

Greg Campbell, a 5-11 sophomore guard from Canton, OH, led the Pioneers this winter with a team-leading 18-point scoring average, 102 assists and a team-high 83 loose ball recoveries. His efforts earned him a bundle of post-season honors in the form of all-division, all-state, all-state tournament, and all-region recognition.

Anthony McCullough, a 6-4, 235-pounder who will be playing football at the University of North Dakota next year, gave basketball a try this winter and showed his outstanding athletic talents by scoring 13.2 points per game and grabbing a team-leading 329 rebounds. He was also showered with post-season honors.

Ray Daivs, a 5-9 product from Inkster, MI, was the team's top freshman with a 12.4 scoring average and a team-high 108 assists. He joined Campbell in Northland's state tournament backcourt and gave the Pioneers an almost unstoppable combination at the guards.

"I probably worked harder this year than I have in a long time," said Engelman about his 1986-87 coaching chores, "but it was worth it. It was fun."

Consistency has been a Thief River Falls trademark in boys high school basketball for several seasons, and the Prowlers have been consistently better the last couple of years with back-to-back 13-9 finishes. Before that were 7-12 records in both 1981-82 and 1982-83, then near-identical marks of 6-15 in 1983-84 and 7-14 in 1984-85.

Last time the Prowlers had back-to-back winning seasons came in 1978-79 and 1979-80 when they were 11-10 and 13-6, respectively.

"I really feel strongly that we had a nice season," said Thief River Falls coach Tom Hunt. "We played a strong schedule, and we were only out of two ball games all year."

It was close to being a dandy season record-wise for the Prowlers, who lost a pair of one-point games, and lost two more by just three points each.

"A little luck, and we'd be looking at 17 wins," acknowledged Hunt.

It started like Thief River Falls would be looking at a big season when the Prowlers won seven of their first eight games. They opened with a 66-64 win over a strong Kennedy team that went on to win District 32A honors, then lost to Moorhead 69-45 in one of the two blow-outs the Prowlers stumbled through, according to Hunt. The Spuds went on to win Region 8AA honors.

Thief River Falls rebounded with an 80-41 victory over Roseau, then swept through the Prowlers' fourth annual Holiday Classic with wins over Middle River 71-44, Hallock 58-53 and Kennedy 52-48. A 68-51 win at Bemidji Jan. 3 put the Prowlers at 6-1.

But they struggled at mid-season, winning just two of their next nine games. Five of those seven losses were by five points or less, however, as the Prowlers fell to Detroit Lakes 67-62, lost to Crookston 52-51, beat Marshall County Central 70-63, and lost to East Grand Forks 50-49 in two overtimes. The Prowlers' second one-sided loss of the year was a 55-35 drubbing at Warren Jan. 23. They came back to beat Tri-County 69-59, but lost to Crookston 47-44, Fergus Falls 54-41 and Bemidji 67-64 to stand 8-8 on Feb. 13.

Thief River Falls turned things around, though, and finished the regular season with four straight wins over East Grand Forks 72-50, Middle River 70-36, Argyle 63-45, and Warren 41-40 — handling the eventual District 31A champion Ponies just their second loss of the year.

Late-season success continued when the Prowlers eliminated Detroit Lakes 58-48 in the first round of the North Sub-Region 8AA tournament, but the season ended in the semifinals when the Prowlers lost a 59-48 decision to No. 1-seeded Bemidji.

"We beat some good teams along the line, and we lost some close ones," pointed out Hunt. "Turn a couple of those games around and you're looking at 15, 16, 17 wins."

A pair of juniors led the Prowlers offensively this winter, with 6-4 forward Chris Nelson averaging 16 points per game and 6-1 guard Chris Bjorgaard averaging 14 points. Bjorgaard lost some playing time because of an ankle injury and the

Prowlers Will Open 1987 Tennis Season Tuesday

Rain, snow or sunshine, Thief River Falls boys will open their 1987 high school tennis schedule Tuesday when the Prowlers meet Crookston in a 6 p.m. dual meet inside the weather-protected confines of the Grand Forks Tennis Center.

Thief River Falls' 19-member squad includes seven returning lettermen, but no seniors. A veteran group of juniors features lettermen John Dondelinger, Troy Hanestad, Bret Haugen, Sean Krepp, Grant Larson, and Troy Peterson, plus Bryan Inglis. They're joined by sophomore Kent Holmes, already a two-year varsity regular.

There's also approximately 19 players who are ready to participate in the Franklin Middle School tennis program when the weather warms up.

"We're looking forward to a very good year," said Thief River Falls coach Whitey Olson. "We've got some good talent there if we get it channeled in the right direction."

High school tennis will be a two-class Minnesota Stae High School League sport in 1987, and the Prowlers will be grouped in the familiar surroundings of North Sub-Region 8AA, along with Fergus Falls, Moorhead, Detroit Lakes, and Bemidji.

"We should be right in the thick of things," predicted Olson. "It's going to be pretty well-balanced, but we think we're capable of winning it."

Thief River Falls is also scheduled to play Thursday at East Grand Forks, a double-assignment that will have the Prowlers meeting the Green Wave at 2 p.m. before playing Moorhead at 3:30. Thief River Falls' home opener is Thursday, April 23, vs. Mahnomen-Waubun.

Pacesetter Basketball Camp Slated In TRF June 22-26

Pacesetter Basketball Camp will make a return visit to Thief River Falls this summer for a June 22-26 session in the Lincoln High School gym.

Boys and girls who will be in grades 5-12 next year are invited to participate in the instructional program. Girls will meet from 8:45 to 11:30 a.m. each day. Boys in grades 5-8 will meet from 12:15 to 3 p.m. Boys in grades 9-12 will meet from 3 to 5:45 p.m.

Cost of the program is $40.

More than 30 Pacesetter Basketball Camps will be conducted throughout Minnesota this summer. Designed by camp director Jeff McCarron, the program offers local players a chance to receive instructions and to compete for awards without the higher cost and travel involved in attending the various one-site camps.

To register for the Thief River Falls Pacesetter Basketball Camp, send a $10 deposit to Pacesetter, Box 222, Paynesville, MN 56362. Include your name, grade in school (1987-88), and mailing address.

Bemidji Rated No. 1

First-year Thief River Falls high school baseball coach Tracy Wensloff is still preparing his team for the upcoming 1987 season, but the Prowlers already find themselves facing a challenge with the announcement that long-time rival Bemidji is the No. 1-rated team in the first Class AA Association Press poll of the year.

Bemidji was given the top spot after reaching the Class AA championship game last spring before falling to a St. Paul Cretin team that was hit by heavy graduation losses.

Apple Valley, St. Louis Park, Hill-Murray, and Roseville rounded out the top five. Bemidji was the only northern team rated.

Defending Class A state champion Greenway drew the No. 1 vote in the first Class A poll of the year. Park Rapids, loser in Coleraine in last year's title game, was No. 6.

Panthers Lose Coach

Park Rapids is looking for a new football and boys track coach following the sudden resignation of Andy McCarty last week. McCarty asked the school board to be relieved of both coaching posts after 17 seasons at the helm. His Park Rapids football teams compiled a record of 103-63-1, including 14 straight winning seasons and five state Class A state playoff appearances. His track teams won five Mid-State Conference titles and two Region 8A crowns. Every record at Park Rapids except the shot put has been set since McCarty took over the track program.

TRF Runs In Moorhead Meet

Thief River Falls had just two place finishers Friday night at the Prowlers opened their 1987 boys high school track season by participating in the ninth annual Shocky Strand Invitational at the Moorhead State University Fieldhouse.

Moorhead won the event with 110 points, followed by Detroit Lakes with 90, Bemidji 68, Park Rapids 67, Hibbing 52, International Falls 31, Perham 22, Thief River Falls 11, Fergus Falls 6, and Bagley 4.

Thief River Falls' Paul Brandt won the 55-meter dash in 6.61 seconds, and the Prowlers' Brian Christianson was sixth in the long jump, where Moorhead's Jamie Hagness claimed one of his three individual wins with a jump of 21-4. Hagness also won the intermediate hurdles and triple jump while placing second in the high hurdles to account for 38 points.

Thief River Falls boys and girls will be in Crookston Thursday for the annual Northwest Indoor at the Winter Shows Building.

Greg Campbell Named NCC MVP

Greg (Soup) Campbell was named the most valuable player on the 1986-87 Northland Community College men's basketball team by a vote of the Pioneers, it was reported by head coach Chet Engelman.

The Canton, OH, native scored 18 points per game this winter, mostly from long range. He was 34-for-116 from the three-point range (29 per cent). Nobody else on the team attempted more than 37 three-point shots.

Randy Henrickson, a 6-4 freshman from Goodridge, was named the team's most improved player, while Scott Groven and Ray Davis shared the hustle award. Groven is a 5-10 sophomore from Goodridge and Davis is a 5-9 freshman from Inkster, MI.

Northland players also voted on an all-opponent team that included Donald Thompson and Steve Blackmon of Itasca, Von McDade of Iowa Lakes, Tony Davis of Fergus Falls, and Kentt Habben of Willmar.

DNR NEWS

Steel Shot Reminder

Department of Natural Resources (DNR) Division of Wildlife reminded waterfowl hunters, of the requirement for the use of steel shot statewide beginning this fall. The new requirement was first announced two years ago, and has been published in the state's waterfowl hunting synopsis and other publications.

"We are requiring steel shot statewide in 1987 rather than phasing it in over the next four years for two reasons," said Roger Holmes, DNR Section of Wildlife Chief. "First, because lead poisoning is such a serious problem we wish to implement the use of steel shot as soon as possible. Also, going to steel based on the number of waterfowl killed per county as originally intended would cause a patchwork of counties all across the state to be phased-in beginning in 1987. This would be extremely confusing to waterfowl hunters and enforcement nightmare for our department."

Holmes pointed out that Iowa and Nebraska have already gone statewide with steel shot for waterfowl and that Wisconsin, Mississippi and several other states have indicated their intentions for doing so as well in 1987.

Fishing Licenses Available

Department of Natural Resources (DNR) Division of Enforcement announced that, effective immediately, DNR Conservation Officers are resuming their normal checking of sport-fishing activities.

"Resident Combination Angling licenses are now available for sale at all county auditors' offices and should be in the hands of our license agents as well," said DNR Enforcement Division Director Gerald Kittridge.

Combination licenses had been temporarily delayed due to a printing error.

Officers Honored

Minnesota's 180 conservation officers were honored Monday, March 9, at the State Capitol in St. Paul for the 100 years of service they have performed in protecting the state's natural resources. A proclamation from Governor Perpich was read by Lieutenant Governor Marlene Johnson and other awards were received, including the WCCO Radio "Good Neighbor" Award.

It was 100 years ago this month that the Minnesota Legislature, responding to the concerns of sportsmen, enacted a law appointing an official state game warden.

Although enforcing game and fish laws is the prime responsibility of conservation officers, they also:

+Enforce all Department of Natural Resources laws and regulations.

+Enforce all snowmobile, 3-wheeler, 4-wheeler and water safety laws (trespassing, aeration, etc.).

+Administer the firearms safety, snowmobile and all-terrain vehicle programs.

+Control nuisance animal problems.

+Dispose of car-killed deer.

+Assist other law enforcement officers when necessary.

+Do public relations work, such as informational speeches and radio and TV talk shows.

On the average, each officer is responsible for more than 480 square miles, plus an increasingly complex scope of activity. Division Director Gerald Kittridge said the success of the state's enforcement program depends on the cooperation and involvement of all state residents — sportsmen and non-sportsmen alike.

Fisheries Meetings

Minnesota Department of Natural Resources (DNR) has scheduled a series of public meetings to hear the views of fishermen. DNR Fisheries Chief Richard Hassinger, said the meetings are aimed at obtaining the opinion of sportsmen regarding fishing regulations and fisheries management, as well as "giving us a chance to explain the reasons for our policies, management measurers and rules." Of special interest this year is the status of the Game and Fish Fund and the need for an increase in license fees, and current legislation.

Meetings, all scheduled for 7 to 10 p.m., and will be held in these cities:

Bemidji — Hagg-Sauer Hall, Bemidji State University, April 30;

Long Prairie — Todd County Courthouse Annex, Room 1 at 2nd Ave. & 3rd St., April 23;

Marshall — Southwest State University, Room LC217, Lecture Center, April 28;

Rochester — Department of Transportation building, Hwy. 52 North, April 21;

Artificial Items Banned

Department of Natural Resources Fisheries Chief Richard Hassinger, announced last week that the use of any artificial product, such as the plastic "Fish 'n Tree," will be prohibited in Minnesota waters.

Hassinger's announcement came following widespread criticism of the objects, which are causing nationwide concern. The Fish'n Tree is an artificial plastic plant weighted at the bottom and dropped into the water to attract fish. "We cannot accept the use of an artificial plastic products to alter the natural environment in this way and it will not be allowed in Minnesota," Hassinger said.

DNR officials are also concerned about the potential safety hazards to boaters, swimmers and skiers from such unmarked subsurface objects. "They apparently are designed to be dropped into open water areas where no natural structure exists, such as river channels and sand bottom flats — heavily used by recreational users in their path," added Hassinger. "These structures could cause serious injury, especially with the fluctuations in water depth."

Hassinger said the state's policy with regard to placing new structures in waters will continue to be limited to "natural materials," such as rock, wood and trees, which require a permit from the DNR to place in lake beds. While a small amount of artificial fastening material may still be used, other prohibited materials include plastic weeds, plastic sheets, concrete, tires, car bodies, railroad cars, steel, and the disposition of any construction materials, like old concrete or black top.

"We will not develop any projects of artificial material, nor allow it to be used here by private organizations," added Hassinger.

RIM Funding

Reinvest In Minnesota (RIM) Coalition applauds the support shown for permanent funding of RIM by the Perpich Administration, and a number of state legislators.

In a continuing effort to designate some permanent funding source for RIM, Sen. Bob Lessard of International Falls, has introduced legislation that would create a state lottery and use 25 per cent of the proceeds to fund RIM on an annual basis. Another 25 per cent would fund a RIM Endowment Fund until the trust reaches $500 million and becomes self-sustaining.

Remaining 50 per cent of the funding would be used for economic development to fund the Greater Minnesota Corporation, a rural development concept proposed by Senate Majority Leader Roger Moe of Erskine.

"While the coalition has not adopted a position on either the lottery or container deposit legislation, it is very appreciative of the efforts being made to provide financing for RIM," said Dorothy Waltz of the RIM Coalition.

"During the 1987 legislative session, members of the coalition are concentrating their efforts on development and passage of the RIM bill, seeking both interim and permanent funding for initiatives to develop and preserve wildlife habitat, restore fishing capability and improve Minnesota's tourism and outdoor recreation industries," Waltz added.

Original Governor's Citizens' Commission to Promote Hunting and Fishing in Minnesota called for using a portion of the sales tax revenues generated by hunting, fishing and tourism to fund RIM. The RIM Coalition has consistently supported this concept of re-investment of tax-generated dollars to maintain the natural resource base necessary for a vital outdoor industry.

"RIM enjoys widespread support throughout Minnesota with groups joining the RIM Coalition ranging from the Minnesota Conservation Federation to the Land Stewardship Project to the Aggregate Ready-Mix of Minnesota, the newest member," Waltz said.

Conservation Officer of the Year

Tim Bremicker, Private Land Development Coordinator for the DNR Section of Wildlife, recently was named Conservationist of the Year by the Minnesota Waterfowl Association.

Bremicker has been involved with the Waterfowl Stamp Program since becoming private land coordinator. The rules of this contest have also served as a model by other states. In addition, Bremicker has administered the Pheasant Stamp Program, which affects many other waterfowl species.

He has coordinated agricultural programs in the state, and has provided leadership on a range of DNR Wildlife-Farmland Committees, and he worked with the Federal Farm Bill to increase the number of conservation reserve acres in this program.

Bremicker also has played a crucial role in the development of the Reinvest in Minnesota (RIM) program, and was one of five state officials who drafted the original legislation creating RIM. He continues to put a lot of time and effort into promoting that program as it is presently being implemented.

According to the DNR's Wildlife Chief, Roger Holmes, "the contribution that Mr. Bremicker has made to waterfowl habitat improvement is not well known outside of the profession but is is hard to match and is having monumental effects."

Coordinator Appointed

A coordinator has been named to head the state's Sentencing-To-Service restitution program for non-violent offenders in southwestern Minnesota.

Martha Minchak will direct the project, created last year under a joint plan between the DNR and State Department of Corrections.

The project will be headquartered in Nicollet and is currently being funded with a $30,000 grant from the Mardag Foundation of St. Paul. "We want to demonstrate the feasibility of this project so we will be able to approach the Legislature for its support," Minchak said.

An outgrowth of the Governor's Strive For Excellence In Performance (STEP) initiative, Sentencing-To-Service is designed to provide community service as an alternative to jail for non-violent offenders. Offenses range from crimes like DWI or welfare fraud to shoplifting, Minchak explained. A similar program is underway in northeastern Minnesota.

"Some new projects I foresee are such things as prairie grass seed collections, and aiding in the Swan Lake Wildlife Management Project," Minchak said. "Under the Swan Lake project, workers would be used to clean-up old farm sites, clear away brush and help in roadside and grassland seeding and habitat restoration."

The program remains greatly in need of additional financial support to hire crew leaders to supervise these additional tasks, she added.

Minchak is experienced in her new role, having coordinated similar job programs for the Youth Conservation Corps in Rhode Island and with the Minnesota Conservation Corps here. "I like working on natural resources projects that benefit both the state and have a positive effect on these offenders," she said.

"Sentencing-To-Service is a unique program for the state to get behind because it involves two separate state agencies working together on something that benefits everyone involved — state taxpayers, non-violent offenders and, best of all, the protection of Minnesota's natural resources."

Hearing-Impaired Information

Department of Natural Resources Information Center recently installed a special Telecommunications Device For The Deaf (TDD) to provide better DNR information service to Minnesotans with hearing impairments.

TDD machine transmits a message via a telephone modem and screen by use of a standard keyboard located both at the hearing impaired person's location and at the Information Center in the DNR's St. Paul facility.

The device will be used by the approximately 8,000-9,000 Minnesotans with hearing impairments who have these devices and have questions for the department regarding wildlife, hunting, fishing, recreation, and other sources or programs.

Hearing impaired individuals who have questions of the DNR may call the new TDD phone number between 8 a.m. - 4 p.m. at (612) 296-5484. Their call will be handled as quickly as possible.

Twins Plan 1987 Baseball Clinics In Upper Midwest

Longtime Twins' scout Angelo Giuliani, founder and coordinator of the Twins' youth baseball clinics, announced that the clinic staff is gearing up to begin their 29th year on Friday, April 10, in Estherville, Iowa.

The clinics will visit 30 communities stretching into five states in 1987. This season, the clinic staff will make their annual Metrodome visit on Saturday, May 23. All those attending on that date will be invited to stay as guests of the Twins for the game that evening against the Detroit Tigers. Gametime is 7:05 p.m. Entrance to the Dome that afternoon will be through Gate A, and all attendees are asked to be there by 4. The clinic will begin at 4:30 p.m.

Clinic director Glenn Gostick and his assistants Mike Casey and Bobby Johnson form one of the top instructional teams anywhere, focusing their 90-minute session on the eight basics of baseball ...throwing, fielding, baserunning, sliding, catching, pitching, hitting, and bunting. Youngsters 6-18 years of age participate in these fundamentals in drill form, which has been developed through the years. It is estimated that over one-half million youngsters have taken part in the clinics in five states and portions of Canada since their 1961 inception.

There are no Twins clinics planned for northwestern Minnesota this summer.

Prowlers felt his loss.

But they also had weapons in seniors Brian Stark, Jarrod Kalsnes, Todd Solsten, and Griff Newland. The 6-4 Stark spent the winter at center and might have been the most overlooked Thief River Falls performer, indicated Hunt, who was very pleased with his contributions both offensively and defensively. The 6-2 Kalsnes, the 6-2 Solsten and the 5-9 Newland also played key roles for the Prowlers.

"We'll lose four fine seniors who all made quite a contribution to our program," pointed out Hunt. "We'll miss them."

But with the likes of Nelson and Bjorgaard coming back, plus a promising group of underclassmen, the Prowlers figure to have a shot at 15-16 wins next year, figured Hunt. "I'm confident with our program," he said. "We do play a tough schedule, but we should be okay."

Reason for Thief River Falls' success this year, said Hunt, was an improved offense that scored the most points the Prowlers have netted since 1979-80, averaging 58 points per game. "Our goal was to average 60 points per game," according to Hunt. "We didn't quite make it, but we were close. Offensively we played well most of the year. We were concerned with our defense, but we felt we really improved defensively at the end of the year, and that's one of the reasons why we won five in a row."

In other categories, Nelson also led the Prowlers with 222 rebounds; Kalsnes led with 68 assists (Bjorgaard had 65 and Newland had 60); Newland led with 43 steals; and Stark led with 50 blocked shots.

"We should be competitive next year," said Hunt. "And as a coach that's all you can ask for — to get your program solid enough to be competitive year in and year out."

Twenty-seven students have participated in the 1986-87 Red Lake "On-Reservation" outreach courses offered through Northland community college. The courses offered include: Freshman English 111, 112 and 113, Computer Utilization, Basic Programming I, Basic Programming II and General Psychology I.

Nine of the 27 part-time students who were enrolled registered for six credits or more. Seven of those nine students participated in fall, winter and spring quarter classes. There were five males and 22 females enrolled and the average age of the student was 27.

The overall GPA (to date) for the year for the on-reservation students is 3.2; with a 3.4 average for fall quarter and a 3.0 for winter quarter. These students received financial aid from PELL and the Minnesota state Indian scholarship program.

Legal Services In Northwest Minn. Earn High Marks

A recent report by the Washington-based legal services corporation indicates that legal aid to the poor and elderly is being delivered in a highly effective and equitably distributed manner in rural northwest Minnesota.

The report is the result of a routine on-site monitoring visit to Northwest Minnesota Legal services, based in Moorhead. NMLS provides civil legal services without charge to low-income and senior citizens in 23 counties in the northwestern corner of Minnesota. About 75 per cent of the cases are done by private attorneys who are reimbursed at a reduced rate by NMLS for their services. This delivery system is referred to as judicare.

The remaining cases are handled by in-house attorneys and paralegals. Cases accepted by NMLS include public benefits appeals, tenant problems, certain consumer issues and a wide variety of family law cases involving children and domestic abuse.

The LSC report cited NMLS as an "exemplar of accessibility," having one of the best records in the Midwest for equality of percentages of clients served from distant counties. LSC considers this to be highly noteworthy given the rural spread and the 25,397 square miles of the service area. The presence of judicare attorneys in every county and toll-free WATS lines are big factors in the equality of access.

LSC notes that the rate of participation by area attorneys in the judicare panel is one of the highest in the country.

Other aspects of the program receiving high marks were the volunteer outreach and referral service by other human service agencies, active board of directors involvement, staff expertise and dedication and general administration of the program.

NMLS receives about half of its funds from LSC, which receives appropriations of federal funds from Congress. Other funds come from the area agencies on aging for services to the elderly, and from various state and private sources.

Foreign Student Exchange Program Seeking Homes

High school students from around the world will be coming to America this fall through the Educational Foundation for Foreign Study program to live in and learn about America first hand. This gives host families a chance to share their home and culture with an eager young person and learn a great deal about the student's culture as well.

They arrive in mid-August, attend school for one year and return to their homes in June. All their fees, travel expenses, insurance and spending money are provided by the student. Host families are to provide a loving family environment.

Paul and Rita Englund of Karlstad have recently returned from attending the central area regional convention and have a variety of student files from 14 foreign countries.

Those who feel they have room in their home and lives for such an experience are encouraged to call about the possibilities at 436-3123 or write P.O. Box 1, Karlstad MN, 56732.

Grass Fire Sunday Serves As Good Safety Reminder

Thief River Falls fire department responded to a grass fire in North township along Johnson drive Sunday afternoon. Fire Chief Dave Bjorkman said a grass fire got out of control and burned off a couple of acres.

Bjorkman said the area is just getting into the burning season and he asks those who do burning to never burn grass or wood when the wind gets over 10 miles per hour and to have plenty of help around when they do start the fire. The wind can be a problem especially this time of year.

Aanenson Named Coordinator For RSVP Program

Julie Aanenson of Climax has been named program coordinator for the Retired Senior Volunteer Program (RSVP) for Norman, Polk, Red Lake, Pennington and Marshall counties.

As program coordinator she will assist with the planning, development and maintenance of the RSVP and help with the recruitment and placement of RSVP volunteers.

Her other responsibilities include follow-up with inactive volunteers, contact with the volunteer stations, work with community organizations and agencies, and public relations functions. Aanenson will work with over 500 volunteers serving in 60 volunteer stations.

CORRECTION:

The cost for non-members to attend the Minnesota association for the Education of Young children to be held at the Best Western inn of Thief River Falls should be $4.75 not $7.75 as listed in an article printed in the Times last Wednesday. The Times regrets any inconvenience this may have caused.

Heart Association Raises $2,800 In Thief River Falls

American Heart association volunteers working on the residential campaign in Thief River Falls raised nearly $2,800 to further the work of the Heart association, and donations are still coming in.

Those volunteer block workers who have not turned in their campaign kits will receive reminders and should still turn them in at Norwest bank. Appreciation is extended to those who responded to the request for funds.

Kathleen Rux, who has chaired the American Heart association residential campaign in Thief River Falls the past three years, said donations have increased each year in Thief River Falls and added that "enough thanks cannot be given to everyone who made monetary donations, volunteered to be block workers and phone-callers and to Norwest bank and two of their employees — Carol Johnson and Suzanne Walton. The combined support from everyone in the community involved, was the key to the campaign's great success."

To join the battle against heart disease, or for more information, call Kathleen Rux at 681-8122.

Audubon Sanctuary Annual Banquet Set At Warren

Auto Insurance Important Part Of Family Vacation

A lot of people look forward to their vacation all year long. So, says the Insurance Information Institute, they ought to take some steps to make sure that a mishap doesn't ruin their holiday time.

First, remember that burglars are always on the lookout for unoccupied dwellings. Put lights on timers, suspend newspaper and postal deliveries, and turn down your telephone. Prolonged ringing could be a tip off to thieves that no one is home.

If you plan to be gone more than a couple of weeks, it's also wise to arrange to have the lawn mowed. Have a friend or reliable neighbor check your house or apartment frequently and notify police if anything looks suspicious.

For extra peace of mind, the I.I.I. suggests that you put your valuables in a safe place, such as a safe deposit box, and that you make sure your home or tenant's insurance coverage is up to date.

Thousands of homeowners are under-insured simply because they don't take the trouble to keep their coverage up to date.

The Dire Results

Unless you check with your agent or company representative at least once a year to make sure you have adequate coverage, a fire or other catastrophic loss could leave you in a serious bind.

Some policies have escalation clauses tied directly to the changes in local residential construction costs. If construction costs go up while your policy is in force, coverage for your dwelling, personal property and additional living expenses will be adjusted upward at the same rate.

If you don't have this clause in your policy, the I.I.I. suggests you ask your insurance agent or company representative about an "inflation guard endorsement," which many companies offer.

Amount of Coverage Important

Vacationers who plan to travel by car or van should be sure they have adequate auto insurance coverage. Even a short trip could result in an accident that may trigger thousands of dollars in claims against you.

Your liability coverage will protect you to the limits of your policy. However, the minimum liability required by most states may not be enough to protect you if you have a serious accident.

The I.I.I. advises motorists to check with an insurance agent or company representative before they embark upon a trip to determine if they have adequate liability coverage. This type of coverage is relatively cheap.

Ask how much it would cost to raise your coverage limits to $300,000 or $500,000, or buy separate umbrella liability coverage for even larger amounts.

Be sure your van or car is ready for the road. Have a tune up, if necessary, and be sure to check the cooling system, brakes, tires and fan belts. These are the most common causes of breakdowns.

Make sure all luggage is secure and that it won't block the driver's vision. Use seat belts and child restraints at all times.

Don't forget your vehicle registration, driver's license, auto insurance card and the name and telephone number of your next of kin. Carry an extra set of car keys, just in case they get lost or stolen.

After you have made sure your house or apartment is secure and have checked to see that you have adequate auto insurance, keep in mind these additional travel tips:

+ If you are traveling with small children, make sure poisons or hazardous items are kept out of their reach.

+ If you plan to stay in a hotel or motel, find out where the nearest exit is and the quickest route from your room, in case of fire.

+ If you plan to camp out, keep all fires a safe distance from your tent.

+ If you are going boating, don't overload the boat and always wear a flotation device.

+ Do not carry large sums of cash. Use traveler's checks whenever possible.

Landscape Adds Value To Property

A tree in your yard may be like money in the bank — or, more accurately — like a high-dividend mutual fund. That's a conclusion to be drawn from a number of studies conducted by real estate groups, the nursery and landscape industries, and the U.S. Forest Service.

The research project published by the Forest Service found that a well-landscaped home will sell for as much as 20 per cent more than a similar house without trees, shrubs, plants, and a healthy lawn. Not only will a house sell for more if it is landscaped properly, but it will sell more easily. In about 200 examples, it was found that a home with an abundance of trees had a much greater sales appeal than others.

It is good to know, says the American Association of Nurserymen, that landscape plantings increase in their value as they grow through the years, and increase the value of the property where they are. It's hard to name many home purchases that don't depreciate instead...and add so much to the beauty of your home surroundings.

Five Easy Steps For Proper Lawn Care

Lawns are injured as often by over watering as by failure to apply enough water. Many people sprinkle too often thinking they are helping their lawns when they may not be. Knowing when and how to water is one of the most important ways to maintain an attractive yard and garden.

A free booklet from L.R. Neslon Corporation, "How to Get the Most For Your Water," offers the following five tips .

Water Less Frequently

Spending less time watering could actually produce a healthier and better looking yard. Too much water either above or below the ground can damage your plants. Roots need oxygen which they get through the soil. If the soil and air spaces around the roots are clogged with water, there is no path for this vital oxygen to enter the root system.

An inch of water once a week is generally the proper amount for average soils and climates. However, if you have clay soil, water more slowly so the ground has time to absorb it. If you have sandy soil, water more often because the ground cannot hold moisture. Keep in mind, these are guidelines. You will want to experiment with your soil for best results.

Water Deeply

Most healthy plants have strong, deep roots. Long, thorough soakings encourage them to grow downward in search of water. Shallow waterings may mean shallow roots or that water is wasted because it evaporates before it even reaches the roots.

Deep watering can also help get rid of crabgrass which thrives in moist soil at the surface level because it has shallow roots. Your lawn, however, does its best when its root system absorbs moisture at the 6" - 12" level. If you water deeply once a week, your grass flourishes even when the surface dries out — yet crabgrass can't draw moisture from lower levels so it shrivels and dies.

Water Early

Late night watering can leave grass damp and a prime target for growth of molds and fungi which spread in darkness and high humidity. Early morning watering prevents this. After you sprinkle, your lawn will dry out as the sun and temperature rise. In addition, less evaporation occurs in the cool morning air than in the heat of the day.

Water Regularly

Consistent sprinkling will discourage insects — they thrive in hot dry weather. For example, mites lay eggs and complete a whole life cycle in a single month if the weather is hot and dry. A regular watering schedule will keep plants healthy and less tasty to bugs, and may even wash them away in the process.

Water After Fertilizing

For fertilizer to be absorbed by the roots, it has to be dissolved in water. If you apply it yourself, follow the package directions for proper sprinkling. Or, is you have a professional company spray your lawn, water thoroughly after the chemicals are applied to send the elements directly and deeply into the soil.

The complete 12-page booklet of lawn and garden watering tips is available free from L. R. Nelson Corporation. "How to Get the Most for Your Water" encourages homeowners to save time and money, and make watering more effecitve. # Motorcycle Club Is Looking For People To Share Interests

National RMTC (Rider Motorcycle Touring Club) has appointed Mavis V. Huddle, Brooklyn Park, the first state director of nearly 1,000 of Minnesota's 75,000 registered cyclists who are affiliated with the organization.

Huddle began riding in the early 50's while a student at Anoka Senior High School; her first machine a 1948 Harley-Davidson '74. Marriage and children brought an extended absence from the sport while being a very active woman involved in some combined 29 years of leadership activity in Bluebirds, Campfire, 4-H Clubwork and Naval Jr. ROTC through the growing years of two daughters. Even more unlikely "biker occupation" was 22 years as parish secretary for a 2,300-member Brooklyn Center congregation, and also some 20 years' activity in local and state politics. She is presently Secretary-Treasurer of C-TEK Limited Partnership and DYNEX Research, Inc., located in St. Anthony, Northeast Minneapolis.

Huddle is now "back in the saddle again", this time on a 1977 Harley FLH 1200, another "big one," gift from mate, Walter Misjak, the fall of 1985. It was Walter's sudden death that December which prompted her investigation of RMTC. Faced with solo riding, the RMTC Emergency Road Service provided to all members was a key factor in her immediat enrollment in the organization.

RMTC is open to all cyclists, however its strength lies in the adult tour riders. As State RMTC Director, Huddle seeks to provide opportunity for establishing greater rapport between all cyclists, and also between all bikers and non-bikers as both share the Minnesota and USA Highway systems, enjoying the scenery and landscape, campsites and rest stops together.

Resort and tourist area restaurants, motels and campsites who would be able to handle groups of 20, 40, 60, or more for breakfasts, luncheons, overnights, etc., are urged to get in touch with Huddle and advise her of the size group your facility could handle on 4-24 hours' notice, and on one or two weeks' notice. Such facilities will be in great demand as the RMTC Chapters individually and collectively take to the roads this 1987 riding season. This information, as well as a listing of all cycle and accessory shops who are members of the RMTC Discount Program will be provided all members on May 2nd.

For additional information on RMTC, or to make your business facility's availability known, write Mavis V. Huddle, P.O. Box 18505, Minneapolis, MN 55418.

Gardening Is One Of America's Favorite Pastimes

Your garden should be a beautiful reflection of your personal style.

One of the most enjoyable aspects of gardening is the pure physical work that is involved. This, coupled with being outdoors among the flowers and trees, makes gardening one of the most relaxing and therapeutic pastimes imaginable.

Nothing clears your head of the everyday trivialities and problems of life better than getting out in the air, working with the soil, and being able to enjoy the fruits of your labor.

The ultimate retreat

For many, a garden is the ultimate retreat. It is an expression of nature that is at once peaceful, beautiful and pure.

And, whether you are a city or country dweller, you can have a garden in some form or another.

The other wonderful aspect of having a garden is that you can create your own. Whether it be a flower, vegetable, herb, rose, Japanese or English cottage garden, it can be a true expression of your own individual style.

Factors to consider

When deciding what type of garden you will create, a few factors should be taken into consideration. Climate, type of soil, drainage, position, and access to direct sunlight are all important factors.

Consider how large you would like your garden to be, being careful to note how much time you have to devote to it. You can then draw a diagram of your garden on paper, noting the space you wish to assign to each flower or vegetable. This will enable you to decide how much seed and how many plants you need to buy.

Protecting your garden

To avoid damage by small animals such as dogs, rabbits or moles, protect your garden with a fence that is fairly high and tightly woven.

The time you will need and the method of preparing a garden for planting will depend heavily on the type of soil you have and the geographical location. However, there are a few hard and fast rules pertaining to soil preparation that work for most all areas.

Soil that is fertile with organic matter, well-drained and relatively free of rocks is necessary for a successful garden.

Good air and drainage — that is, free movement of air to lower levels — are necessary to lessen the damage that can be caused by frost.

There are many things that you can do in the spring to protect your seedings from frost.

If you are able to, plant your garden on a high spot; a south-facing slope or a spot along the south wall of a building is warmer than most places and will provide some protection for your plants.

Coverings for plants — whether they be old blankets, buckets, baskets, sheets or black plastic — will trap heat that rises from the earth while allowing some air to circulate, discouraging the formation of ice crystals.

A myriad of possibilities

The varieties of gardens you could plant are endless, but one of the prettiest, most natural and easiest to create is the English cottage garden.

Informal, colorful and fragrant, this type of garden provides a natural environment for flowers and shrubs. Wisteria, climbing roses, delphiniums, bachelor buttons, daisies, daylilies, basil, mint, lavender and sunflowers are just some of the flowers and herbs that make an English garden special.

Very often these gardens look as though they must have been very carefully planned, given the overall harmony of the flowers and the resemblance to an Impressionist watercolor.

Natural beauty

The truth is that nature, more times than not, is a better orchestrator than we are, allowing the natural beauty of wild flowers to come through.

Whichever method of gardening you choose and whatever type of garden you create, enjoying the creative process and the beauty of the flowers and plants is the true purpose of this wonderful pastime.

Remind Consumers Of Energy Crisis

Higher cooling costs in the summer and heating costs in winter are on the way back. According to the U.S. Department of Energy and experts from the nation's top oil and gas companies, the lower energy prices we have been experiencing recently won't be around for long. In fact, the cost of fuel oil is expected to double by the year 2000 as U.S. dependence on foreign oil continues to climb yearly. Electricity prices are expected to grow at an even higher rate than inflation.

The Future

From a supply standpoint, the country is in better shape with its domestic natural gas reserves than with its oil. U.S domestic production of oil has been steadily slipping, even with the addition of the Alaskan oil fields.

Electricity for cooling and heating purposes has climbed steadily between 1975 and 1985 by approximately 11 per cent. Electricity World, a utility trade magazine, estimates that through 1990 the average price of a kilowatt-hour will increase by two per cent a year above the rate of inflation.

What can a homeowner do to combat high cooling and heating costs? "The best insurance against volatile prices is an efficient heating and cooling system and a well-insulated house," says George Hoffman, senior vice president of marketing at CertainTeed Corporation. "Start with a simple inspection to see how energy efficient your home is."

In the attic, check your insulation levels. If they're not up to the energy standards for your geographic area, upgrade them. Next, check to see if the caulking and weatherstripping around your windows and doors is adequate.

If you don't have storm windows or double-or triple-pane windows, consider installing them. Lastly, if buying a new heating and-or cooling system keep in mind the following terms: AFUE (Annual Fuel Utilization Efficiency) which measures the efficiency rating for a furnace and boiler and SEER (Seasonal Engergy Efficiency Ratio) which measures the cooling efficiency of many central air conditioning systems and heat pumps. Look for AFUE ratings over 80 per cent and SEER's of nine or greater.

For more information on keeping your home cooler this summer and warmer this winter write for a free copy of "Insulation Facts," CertainTeed Home Institute, P.O. Box 860, Valley Forge, PA 19482.

Working With Light Key In Outdoor Photography

The term photography means, literally, "light-written." With today's sophisticated cameras that automatically calculate exposures, it is sometimes easy to forget that, when we take a picture, we are working with light as a raw material — an extremely important ingredient in the recipe for making good photographs.

The fact that our cameras may automatically react to light and set the lens opening and shutter doesn't mean we shouldn't take notice of lighting conditions. In reality, all the camera is doing through its light-sensing equipment is reacting to the intensity of light.

It's up to the photographer to work with the light, to be sensitive to its direction, sharpness, color and the other lighting factors about which cameras — including the "smart" new cameras — are dumb.

Here are some lighting tips offered by professionals:

— Avoid taking pictures around mid-day. The reason for this rather strange sounding bit of advice has to do with the direction of the light available at that time. It's from more or less directly overhead.

Photographs are usually improved if light strikes subjects from a low angle, permitting shadows to form. It's shadows that give objects shape. Overhead lighting is flat lighting; side lighting provides definition, texture and a more interesting appearance.

— Ignore advice you may have received to place the sun directly behind you when you are taking pictures. "Front lighting" subjects like this tends to result in flat, uninteresting pictures. The problem is especially noticeable in portraits. People lighted in this way tend to squint and have a flat or washed-out appearance.

"Side lighting" is far more effective. When possible, place your subject in a position which allows sunlight to rake in from the side. Light from an angle helps to mold or give definition to your subject.

— Also ignore admonitions not to place the sun behind the subject. The silhouette effect that results from "back lighting" can create a very powerful image.

— Another reason to avoid taking pictures at midday has to do with the color of light. You've probably noticed that sunlight seems warmer — more red and orange — in the early morning and late afternoon hours.

This warmer light — caused by light traveling through additional layers of atmosphere when the sun is low on the horizon — makes for much more pleasing color photographs than the harsher, bluer sun in the middle of the day.

— Develop an awareness of the sharpness of light. Direct sunlight is a sharp light source which can create intense areas of light and dark, giving good definition of a subject and creating texture. On a cloudy day, however, the sunlight is diffused or soft. And softer, more pastel-like images can be created.

Your camera should be viewed as a tool designed to help you work with light. And, like a hammer or any other tool, a camera is only going to be as effective as the person who wields it.

Learn To Tie Boating Knots

A century ago a man wasn't a sailor until he had "learned the ropes."

Today we refer to the ropes used in boating as "lines," and learning about them is a lot less complicated. But it's still a good idea to "know the ropes," advise the Mariner Outboards boating experts.

Useful Knots

Two of the most useful knots for the small boat skipper to know are the cleat hitch and the clove hitch, because they enable you to do something essential — tie up your boat securely at the dock.

Both are shown in the accompanying illustration, with the cleat hitch on top.

To tie the cleat hitch, first take a single turn with the line around the base of the cleat. Then drop an inverted loop around the horn of the cleat, as shown in the illustration.

The clove is slightly more complicated. First, drop a loop over the upright post with the short end below the long end. Pull it taut. Repeat the first step to form a second loop, then drop the second loop over the first one and pull taut. The free, or loose, end of the line should be underneath the long line which runs to your boat as you fashion each loop.

A clove can skip, so it's a good idea to tie a half hitch in the line as well if you plan to be away from dockside for any length of time.

Fish Smell, Taste

One of the least understood concepts in fishing is the use of fish scents and attractants. Some attractants have a strong scientific basis, whereas, others claim to be magic potions.

According to Dr. Keith Jones, fisheries scientist, "Most fish have excellent senses of smell and taste. When fish feed, favorable odors provide a strong stimulus. Fish attractants, by appealing to the fish's senses of smell and taste, provide an added incentive for fish to take a bait."

Dr. Jones continued, "Foreign odors can easily contaminate a bait. These may be transferred from tackle boxes or from the anglers hands to their baits. Fish attractants mask most contaminating odors so that fish can no longer smell them."

Attractants can substantially increase the fishermen's chance to catch fish. This is particularly true in slow presentations, such as jigging or worming techniques.

It is also true in most cold water situations, when fish metabolism is slowed.

Fishermen who are conscious of a fish's ability to smell will put more fish on the stringer. Of course, you must first find the fish. And, as yet, science hasn't found a guaranteed way to do this.

Important Tips For Vacation Trip Packing Plans

For many people, it takes more time to pack one bag than it does three. Why? When limited to one suitcase or backpack, a lot of eliminations and wardrobe judgment calls are necessary.

Whether you're planning a trip to Europe or are hit with a case of weekend wanderlust, it's hard to know how to pack lightly. You don't want to let a large wardrobe slow you down or let a small one cramp your style. What's the secret to packing a fashionable minimum? The world's largest apparel manufacturer offers a few rules of thumb:

— Make sure every item goes with at least two others;

— Bring lots of accessories;

— Stick to basic colors and durable fabrics.

(1) Basic blue jeans — Comfortable blue jeans are everyone's weekend essential. Dress them down for a hike in the woods; dress them up for a day of shopping in town.

(2) Oversized sweater — Depending on color or pattern, it can look rugged or ritzy. Belt it over the jeans and add jewelry for a dressed-up look.

(3) Black — A perfect travel color, because of its versatility. Black jeans and a black top with gold accessories can take you out on the town. Or, leave off the accessories and you have a casual, yet sexy look for Saturday afternoon.

(4) Walking shoes and low-heel pumps — Unless you're going to a fancy restaurant, leave your high heels at home. Your most comfortable walking shoes will be indispensible during the day and, at night, the pumps can dress up the blue jeans or be worn with a skirt.

(5) Belts and scarves — These accessories don't take up much room and can really add zing to an outfit. Large printed scarves can be knotted around the neck for day-time, or worn like a shawl for evening.

(6) A big, white shirt — In cotton or a poly-cotton blend (fewer wrinkles), an oversized, man-tailored shirt looks casual yet chic belted over blue jeans or a skirt. Tuck it in if you prefer a cleaner look.

(7) Costume jewelry — Leave your expensive pieces at home and bring along your "fakes." Pearls and rhinestones are especially versatile.

(8) Finally, when you've got all your clothes packed away, run down this checklist to make sure you haven't forgotten your . . .

— Hairdryer;

— Umbrella;

— Cosmetics;

— Contact lenses - eyeglasses;

— Travel curlers-curling iron;

— Plastic bags for soiled clothes;

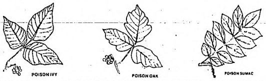
— Travel alarm;

— Toothbrush;

— Socks-underwear;

— Directions to your destination! Have a great trip!

Poison Ivy, Oak, Sumac Is Spread Across United States



While many plants thrive only in rarified climates, the hardy poison ivy, oak and sumac exist in almost every state of the U.S.

Exposure to these plants results in an estimated 18 million annual cases of severe plant dermatitis — an extremely annoying, painful and persistent skin rash caused by contact with poison ivy, oak or sumac.

Proper Attention Important

For gardeners and others who are exposed to poison ivy or other strains of the pesky allergy-causing plant, proper and immediate attention can alleviate much of the discomfort, according to Charles Zugerman, M.D., assistant professor of clinical dermatology, Northwestern University Medical School, and consultant to Blistex, Inc., makers of Ivarest: The Poison Ivy Expert.

Poison ivy and poison oak rashes consist of varying amounts of redness, weeping and blistering. All or one symptom may be present. Itching is always intense and unbearable. The classic lesion is a linear stripe of rash due to brushing against the leaf.

Dr. Zugerman advises gently washing the affected area with plain soap and water immediately following exposure to remove the plant oil, applying a medicated cream or lotion, and washing all exposed clothing as soon as possible. Use separate and thorough cleaning methods for clothing.

Long-Lasting Relief

A non-prescription medication such as Ivarest provides long-lasting relief of itching and inflammation, reduces the rash and helps prevent secondary infection.

Travel Light On Bike

Biking is a sport quickly gaining in popularity. It's a great way to get cardiovascular exercise, take in nature's beauty and it's quicker than walking!

Increase your enjoyment by starting out prepared. A small knapsack can be easily attached to the bike at the rear of the seat for comfort and convenience. Some handy items to bring along include:

— First aid kit;

— Canteen filled with fresh water;

— Flashlight;

— Folding rain poncho;

— Pocket knife;

— Comb;

— Mosquito repellent;

— Portable food;

— Disposable washcloths.

Dress in layers to remain comfortable throughout the day. A warm midday sun means simply subtracting a flannel shirt — but a cool breeze may suggest adding it along with a sweatshirt. A hat is helpful to keep the sun from obstructing vision and to keep sunrays from burning your scalp.

A delicious lunch to go along for the ride is a sandwich, a piece of fruit, and a warm thermos of soup. Regardless of weather, nothing beats this warm, mid-afternoon lunch or snack for extra energy and good taste.

Soup has a rich, flavorful broth brimming with ingredients. For "on-the-road eating emergencies," tote a box of dry soup and recipe mix along. It's easy to mix and heat when you reach your destination.

So remember, travel light, but eat right with good planning and good food.

Safe, Sensible Driving Key To Happy Vacation Plans

Taking to the open road has always been a quintessentially American activity. The forebears who crossed the vastness of the Atlantic Ocean to found a new land, little knowing what they would find, gave way to land-bound pioneers, who set off across uncharted territories, heading ever westward.

Today, the 50 states which make up the United States, and the nine provinces and two territories of which Canada is composed, are the destinations for a different kind of exploring, as families set out in car, or motor home, or van, on their annual pilgrimage to admire and enjoy the majesties and glories of the Great Outdoors.

While they are not likely to face the dangers and hardships which beset the early pioneers — hunger and thirst, wild animals, extremes of weather — they should be careful, nonetheless, to avoid exposing themselves to a different sort of danger.

When traveling by car, the safe driver is the one most likely to shepherd his or her family through a vacation which is memorable . . . for all the right reasons.

Sensible precautions should be taken — the car should be examined and, if necessary, overhauled, prior to setting out, and the rules of the road should be followed scrupulously at all times.

Neither of these are matters of convenience, to be disregarded at whim; rather, they are serious considerations upon which your safety, the safety of your family and friends, and the safety of countless strangers may ultimately depend.

Before setting forth on your journey of exploration, make sure the vehicle you will be using is up to the trip. Check its various systems, change the oil and the water, check the tire pressure (inflating as necessary), and make sure the spare is serviceable.

It's also important to plan your route in advance: Study maps carefully, gauging the distances you can comfortably cover in a day, and planning your overnight stops accordingly.

Also — particularly if you will be traversing unfamiliar territory — know your exits in advance, and determine, if possible, those areas where you will be hitting heavy traffic, detours due to construction or potentially confusing interchanges. Knowing your route in advance can save you time as well as helping to ensure a safe trip.

On the road, be a defensive driver. Always remain aware of the other cars around you, watching for someone who's in too much of a hurry to get to his or her destination, or someone who's daydreaming and dawdling along, or someone who's simply careless.

If you can spot potential problems, you're in a far better position to avert them.

If you're tired, pull over and rest till you're feeling better. Do not force yourself to remain behind the wheel if you need a nap, or a cup of coffee, or simply to stretch your legs. Again, prevention is nine-tenths of the cure.

If you realize — too late — that you're passing your exit, do not attempt to get over to it, or to go back. Go on to the next exit, turn around and return. It's slower — but safer.

Whether the speed limit is 55 or 25, observe it. Local authorities know far better than you do what the safest speed is for the road you're traveling on. It's easier — and safer — to gain half an hour by setting out earlier, than by speeding.

On the other hand, observe minimum speed limits, as well. The scenery may be breathtaking but, on a superhighway, don't slow down to admire it. If you want to linger along the way, stay off the superhighway and opt for the local road, instead.

Our ancestors traveled because of necessity; we travel for pleasure. Today, the country they traversed so laboriously is ours to enjoy, crossing it at speeds the pioneers never even imagined. We'll all enjoy it more if we keep safety uppermost in our minds while we're on the road.

Camping In The 1980's

by Roy Rogers

I know Americans like to go camping, but I did not realize just how popular this enduring pastime has become.

Studies over the past 10 years show that camping is consistently among the favorite recreational activities in this country. Last year more than 60 million Americans went on camping trips.

A high percentage of those who camp out use recreational vehicles, popularly referred to as RVs. About eight million families own RVs, and many others rent them for weekend trips and vacations.

A recent study says that by 1987, two households out of every five will either own or rent an RV. That could mean more than 30 million RVs on the road in two more years.

What inspires so many people to become RVers are all the great weekend and vacation camping opportunities available throughout the country.

One way to enjoy recreational vehicle camping is to join a membership campground organization. For example, Dale and I are part of the Thousand Trails family. Thousand Trails develops and operates membership campground resorts throughout the United States. There are 43 resorts, and new ones are added each year.

The resorts are located in every type of outdoor environment imaginable. There are rolling hills, quiet forests, beaches and deserts. And every resort blends the best of the outdoors with the comforts of civilization.

Membership campground resorts not only offer the opportunity to experience the great outdoors, they also provide a full range of resort features. Depending on its location, it might have a beach, a lake or swimming pool. There are opportunities to play softball, shuffleboard or tennis.

Members can attend arts and crafts classes, go for a hayride, do some hiking or go fishing. There are barbecues, live music, square dancing and movies; and there's always the opportunity to make new friends who share the same interests you do.

RV owners point out that campground resort vacations are very affordable. As one fellow says, he and his family save on air fare or train fare, have no hotel bills or high priced restaurants and they don't have to take taxis. On top of that, it's like belonging to a private club.

To become a member of a campground resort, such as Thousant Trails, all you do is pay a one-time membership fee and annual dues of about $270. For this a member family is entitled to use any existing or future campground in the system for an unlimited number of visits of up to two weeks at a time. And the membership is good for a lifetime.

Once you're a member, the choices for weekend and vacation travel are limitless. As one member, who lives near three different campgrounds, says: "We feel we've purchases lakefront property and oceanfront property, and it's all within 90 minutes of our house."

If you want more information on membership campground resort vacation opportunities, write to me. Address your letter to Department K, Thousand Trails, 15325 S.E. 30th Place, Bellevue, WA 98007.

Many Minnesota Fishermen Go To Manitoba Waters

The ice is out. Summer is just around the corner. It's springtime and the thoughts of all devoted Minnesota anglers turn to rods and reels, boats and motors, leeches and minnows, walleyes and northerns. It's also the time many fisherman start thinking about their annual trips to the crystal-clear lakes of Canada.

Less than half a day's drive away for most Minnesotans is Manitoba, the province offering what many believe is the best fishing in Canada.

Manitoba is literally a paradise for anglers. Its 251,000 square miles are laced with tumbling rivers and dotted with literally thousands of lakes, many of which have seldom been fished. More than 5,000 trophy-sized fish are caught each year in this Canadian province's waters. 30-40 pound lake trout, 70-80 pound sturgeon and 20-30 pound northern pike are not uncommon.

Most Minnesotans head to the popular fishing areas of Whiteshell Provincial Park, Gods Lake and Gods River, and the area between The Pas, Cranberry Portage and Flin Flon.

Whiteshell, the biggest park in Manitoba, covers just over 1,000 square miles and lies 100 miles east of Winnipeg. Picturesque lakes, joined by rushing rivers, dot the forest and the stony outcrops of this precambrian area. The Winnipeg River system and the park itself yield many prize-winning northern pike, walleye, smallmouth bass, perch and strugeon every year.

A vast network of lakes and rivers in northern Manitoba also provides excellent fishing. Road, rail and jet air service can carry the fisherman 400 miles northwest of Winnipeg to the fishing area of The Pas-Cranberry Portage - Flin Flon. The lakes and rivers provide tackle-smashing northern pike, lake trout, walleye and other species. One of the better-known lakes is Athapapuskow from which a Flin Flon woman took a lake trout weighing 63 pounds in 1930. The fish remained a world record for 22 years. (The current record-holding fish, weighing 65 pounds, was caught in Great Bear Lake, Northwest Territories, by Larry Daunis in 1970.)

From The Pas, a train travels 500 miles northeast to Churchill on the shore of Hudson Bay. The railway passes through the remote, sparsely-settled northland of Manitoba, past deep lakes and fast-running rivers, where a fisherman can pursue his quarry free from competition.

Below Limestone Rapids in the Nelson River, where the tributaries join the main stream, the angler will find excellent brook trout waters. On Deer River and other tributaries to the Churchill River, he can catch the rare and beautiful Arctic grayling, the "sailfish of the North." And, in most waters, northern pike, walleye and lake trout are found. Gods Lake, a fly-in area in the east, yields species such as brook trout, lake trout, northern pike and walleye; and rivers such as the Manigotagan, Wanipigow, Saskatchewan and Nelson are deservedly famous for northern pike and walleye.

Highways lead to towns as far north as Thompson, Gillam, South Indian Lake, Leaf Rapids and Lynn Lake, providing access to exciting fishing. Lakes and rivers easily-reached by car yield a good number of trophy fish every year.

The immense inland lakes a few miles north of Winnipeg (Winnipeg, Winnipegosis and Manitoba) and the rivers draining into them also produce fine catches.

There is good fishing in the Whitemud River (northern pike and walleye), the Red River (goldeye, walleye, perch, freshwater drum and channel catfish) and the Assiniboine River (walleye, northern pike and channel catfish).

Duck Mountain Provincial Park is particularly noted for its rainbow, brook, brown, lake and five other species of trout as well as splake, a hybrid of brook and lake trout.

The Master Angler Award program, instituted in 1958 by the provincial government, is an added incentive. Fisherman can determine, from the lists of trophy fish caught each year, where the big ones are found. Also listed are the all-time record weights of 28 different species of fish. Badges and certificates are awarded for the winning fish.

The ice is gone from all but the northernmost waters by mid-May. The sport fishing season opens Saturday, May 9.

As in most of Canada, June is regarded as one of the best months for the fisherman, but July and August also produce superb catches worthy of the Master Angler lists. In June and July the Southern lake trout seeks the cooler, deeper waters. But in the far northern lakes, the ice often does not break up until June and the fish are still at the surface much later than in the south.

Several fishing publications are distributed by Travel Manitoba, including the Manitoba Sport Fishing Guide, which contains information on licenses, regulations, good fishing areas, angling limits, etc.; the Master Angler Awards booklet, referred to above; and the Manitoba Fishing Guide, an annual publication describing various fish and their locations, and listing more than 110 fishing lodges in the province.

For these publications or other information on fishing, contact Travel Manitoba, Department 6145, 7-155 Carlton Street, Winnipeg, Manitoba R3C 3H8.

Remodeling Homes Popular

Are you thinking of adding on or remodeling your present home? The high cost of new housing has prompted many families to think of upgrading or renovating their present residence — adding rooms, modernizing bathrooms and kitchens, enlarging family rooms, etc.

Making the best use of space is, of course, one of the major considerations whenever remodeling is undertaken. Smart homeowners look for every possible way to squeeze more usable space out of every square foot.

Pocket doors can help you do just that! Pocket doors are so named because they do not swing on hinges, but slide completely hidden from view into a wall (pocket) when not in use. Conventional doors can take up to 8 square feet of floor space for "swinging" room. Pocket doors on the other hand, allow the floor to be used right up to the door opening.

The average handyman should be able to install pocket doors using common tools. You must plan ahead for their use, however, as the framing must be in place before drywall or paneling is installed. Pocket door frames come in all popular sizes and many of them are universal (marked for cutting to fit your needs).

When selecting pocket door frames, be sure to check such things as: Is the track removable? Is the track designed so the rollers cannot jump the track? Will the rollers handle my door smoothly? Will I be able to remove the door easily?

Before installing the door into the frame, make absolutely certain that you seal the door, especially around the edges to prevent absorption of moisture and possible warping. Check with your local paint-building supply dealer for materials and correct procedures.

For more information on pocket doors and a free brochure on how to install them, write L.E. Johnson Products, Inc., P.O. Box 1126, Dept. HT, Elkhart, Indiana, 46515.

Clean Air Act Has Significantly Improved Air Quality

The quality of our air has improved significantly since the Clean Air Act was passed more than a decade ago. However, the country remains plagued by a lethal array of chemical air pollutants — many of which have been largely ignored by federal regulators.

The 1970 Clean Air Act gives the federal government authority to control all airborne toxic chemicals. But according to the National Wildlife Federation's annual Environmental Quality Index, only six out of approximately 2,000 substances have been regulated. The others are spewed largely uncontrolled into the environment.

Studies show that more than 62 million pounds of highly toxic chemicals are released annually into the air from some 300 manufacturing plants in 34 states. The list includes more than 8 million pounds of methylene chloride and some 3 million pounds of benzene and butadiene. All are known or suspected cancer-causing substances.

Acid rain, too, remains a serious problem in many parts of the country. Although the Reagan administration announced last year that action on acid rain is necessary, the levels of the pollutants that cause it — sulfur dioxide and nitrogen oxides — continue to edge upward.

According to the Environmental Protection Agency, the amount of these pollutants in the air increased 2 per cent each in 1984 over the previous year. The sulfur and nitrogen emissions are essentially caused by automobile exhaust and industries using coal and other fossil fuel-burning boilers and power plants. They are known to be hazardous to humans, particularly to individuals with respiratory diseases.

Acid rain also is taking a heavy toll on the environment. New evidence shows that at least 75 per cent of the lakes in New Hampshire and Rhode Island and at least 60 per cent of those in Massachusetts and Maine will be seriously damaged if acid rainfall continues.

In the upper Midwest region, EPA researchers found that 43 per cent of the lakes could become devoid of all life as a result of high acidity. In addition, a Brookhaven National Laboratory study indicated that acid rain can cause accelerated weathering of homes, buildings and other structures. As a result, some people may have to repaint, replace rusted fences and do other outdoor maintenance more frequently. Such maintenance can cost each resident of Chicago an estimated $45 annually, each Cleveland resident $28, and each Lousiville resident $15.

Another pollutant threatening metropolitan areas is ozone. According to Janet Hathaway, legislative representative with the National Wildlife Federation, "Unlike ozone in the upper atmosphere, which absorbs destructive solar radiation, ozone produced at ground level is harmful — and millions of people are affected." Lower atmosphere ozone is formed when gasoline vapors and other hydrocarbons and nitrogen oxides react in the air with sunlight.

Regulated since 1970, ozone levels declined nationally by about 10 per cent between 1983 and 1984. However, EPA Administrator Lee M. Thomas announced last summer that more than a third of the 84 metropolitan areas being monitored will fail to meet the law's Dec. 31 deadline for reducing ozone pollution to safe levels.

Ozone is considered a serious human health threat, and at present nearly 80 million Americans are breathing unsafe levels of the gas. Recent studies have found that even if cities meet federal requirements, the current ozone standard does not provide sufficient protection.

Other research shows that plants are also at risk from ozone. A University of Wisconsin study discovered that typical summer ozone concentrations can reduce the growth rate of soybeans and wheat by as much as 25 per cent. The study also noted that ozone can slow tree growth anywhere from one to 10 per cent a year, depending on the severity of the pollution.

Inspection Tips For Outboard Motors

For the boater in search of a used outboard motor, officials recommend the following "inspection" steps:

+ Start with the powerhead. Is the cowl fitted tightly so it can protect the engine from the elements? Pull the starter rope slowly. Does it seem more worn than one would expect, based on the age of the engine? If so, it may betray hard-starting characteristics.

If you're inspecting an electric start model, see if the teeth on the starter and flywheel are rounded. If they are, it indicates either hard starting or a starter engagement problem. Check gaskets for signs of oil, gas or water leakage. A leak means a gasket should be replaced.

+ Look at the ignition. Potting materials are poured into component cases to seal out moisture. Is the potting material cracked or bulging out? If so, suspect an internal short to develop.

+ Visually inspect wires and electrical connectors; they should be clean, free of corrosion and not showing excessive wear.

+ Check fuel line connections. Are the hoses tight? Any cracks? Lines that are pliable, rather than stiff, are probably in good shape.

+ Next, take a look at the gear case. Are there hairline cracks in the casing? Oil seeping from a crack is easy to detect. Avoid an engine with cracks or leakage. Is the skeg straight? If not, the boat won't track properly. With the engine in neutral, try to wobble the propeller. If there is motion, the bearing may be worn out.

Pull the lower unit lube fill screw. See if you can find any metal filings stuck to it. Any large particles could indicate internal problems.

Also check around the propeller for oil leaks. A leak may indicate that monofilament line cut the propeller shaft seal.

Keep America Clean

Do you remember the first vacation you spent in the Great Outdoors? Your awe at the splendid scenery, your pleasure in the feeling of the sun beating down, the coolness of the waves in ocean or lake, the gentle rocking of a fishing boat on a shady river?

All of these memories are beautiful, doubly so because they are memories of youth, a time, perhaps 10 years ago, perhaps 50, of carefree enjoyment, endless wonder.

But even then, your parents took the time and care to inculcate in you not only an appreciation of natural beauty and the nation's scenic wonders, but an understanding of the importance of preserving them! Not only loving them, but helping to make sure that they are there for future generations to appreciate and enjoy.

If you are bringing your children to experience the pleasures nature bountifully provides, for the first time or the 50th, be sure to instill in them these same feelings of love and respect.

Explain to them the importance of not littering, of leaving the landscape as clean as they found it or, if they spy someone else's litter, to pick that up, and leave the countryside even cleaner.

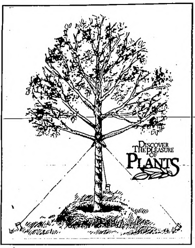
If you are camping in a location where trash receptacles are provided, use those. If none are available, bag all your rubbish, preferably in paper (which is biodegradable; plastic isn't).

Of course, if you're out boating, do not pollute lake or stream by propelling rubbish overboard. Store it all up in a garbage bag — plastic here makes sense, to keep your trash bag from itself turning into trash.

If you've built a campfire, it is essential to make sure that it is completely out before abandoning it or going to sleep. One errant ember can cause a forest fire of mammoth proportions, and destroy acres of scenic countryside.

If there are Boy or Girl Scouts in the family party, encourage them to share the "tricks of the trade" they've learned on hikes and overnights. You will not only provide an atmosphere in which leanring can flourish; by asking them to continue learning more about the natural wonderland both you and they love.

If you're visiting an enclosed park (national, provincial, state, etc.), make sure you and everybody in your party know the ground rules, what the authorities permit and what they prohibit.



The small fee you may pay for the privilege of visiting these natural preserves does not entitle you to take advantage of them, but rather encourages you to share the responsibility for their preservation, so that not only you and your children, but your grandchildren, great-grandchildren and an endless stream of future generations can enjoy, appreciate, love and respect the inspiring natural beauty of the Great Outdoors.

Traveling With Kids

Traveling in a car with kids for extended periods of time can stretch one's patience to levels even Job would flinch at.

Short of setting your kids in plaster of Paris, you can count on some trying times while riding with them in an automobile, with the noise and commotion level being directly proportional to the number of children along for the ride.

There are some things you can do, none of which involves the purchasing of handcuffs or thumbscrews, to make this time more enjoyable for everyone. The key to as peaceful a ride as possible with kids is to keep them occupied. One way is with games.

Some of the more popular ones to play are:

+ Car bingo;

+ Who can spot the greatest number of different states' license plates (either by state or color) in an allotted amount of time;

+ If you are traveling though the countryside, see who can spot the most different types of animals;

+ I Spy (making sure the spyer spys the spyee inside the car and not on an object six miles past);

+ Take along a piece of wood approximately 2'x2' so the kids can play their favorite card or board game.

Counting games can also make time go by pretty fast. Favorite items to count are bridges, billboards, trucks, certain color cars, police cars, even disabled cars.

Another time-passing game is looking for designated colors, numbers or letters in signs, license plates or wherever these items can be spotted.

After exhausting both your supply of games and the kids' attention span (with a little luck this could stretch as far as 25 miles into your day's journey), you can sing songs, tell riddles and stories (the same stories you loved as a child, or let them make up their own, or add key parts to the ones you're telling), read books or comics, color or draw (preferably not on the car seat or each other), or even write letters to grandma and grandpa.

If you've gone through all this and are getting desperate, don't forget the ol' stand-bys...tic-tac-toe and rock-paper-scissors. Only as a last resort is it suggested you break into a chorus of "100 Bottles of Beer On The Wall."

Depending on your budget, you may want to invest in radios with individual earphones for each child. They can find peace and enjoyment listening to their own likes, at any volume, in the privacy of their own ears.

If only one radio is in the budget, buy it for yourself and shut the back seat noises out. (Be advised, if you do go the radio-for-every-child route, bring spare batteries.)

If after trying these tips, you still find getting there comparable to traveling with Attila the Hun, seriously consider one final piece of advice...put the kids on a bus to camp and stay home.

Rose Generally Considered National Flower In U.S.

When spring's gently-warmed earth brings forth the rosebush's first colorful, fragrant blossoms, you are reminded why this ancient flower has remained a perennial favorite for centuries . . . and why it was recently named the National Flower of the United States.

The most common of flowering shrubs, the rose's popularity is accounted for, in part, by the variety of species available. It's a rare garden which does not have some rose-bearing plant: a miniature, a bush, a tree, or a climber. The color selection is a slice out of the rainbow's spectrum . . . yellows, creams, pinks, reds, whites . . . and other, more exotic hues. When properly cared for, roses are easily grown almost anywhere, and are always an attractive addition to any yard.

The three major requirements for the location of rose in your yard are: plenty of air circulation, lots of sun, and good drainage. Specific planting instructions are available from your local retail nursery.

If rose-bearing plants are already growing in your yard, now is the right time for pruning and feeding. To prune, cut away all dead, broken, or scraggly shoots, leaving the bush open for healthy growth of strong canes. New green shoots will soon appear on your plants as the spring un warms the earth.

Roses need nitrogen, phosphorus, and potash as basic nutrients, which are available from commercial fertilizers (such as 5-10-5) or natural materials. Sow fertilizer two to three inches into soil surrounding perimeter and water afterwards. For the healthiest rose, good feeding practice is to repeat this process three times per year: once in early spring, once about the time of heavy June bloom, and once in early August.

Watering requirements vary with the climate, but a good rule of thumb is to make sure that the roses receive the equivalent of one inch of rainfall weekly.

There are certain common diseases, such as a black spot, and insects, such as Japanese beetles, which may be readily controlled by the use of properly timed sprays or dusts. Get advice and materials for pest control from your nearby garden center.

The American Association of Nurserymen advises that dormant rosebushes can be planted in late fall or early spring in most parts of the U.S. and some areas of southern Canada. And potted roses, growing in various kinds of containers — clay or plastic pots, pressed fiber or metal cans — can be planted almost any time from spring to fall.

Ask your retail nursery professional for advice. And remember, anyone can successfully grow roses — and grow them almost anywhere.

New Batteries Popular

Alternative Energy System Proves More Economical For User

There are over one billion battery-operated products in the United States today. And, according to industry figures, Americans are spending roughly $2 billion dollars a year on all kinds of batteries to keep these products running.

However, notes John T. Gray, president and chief executive officer of Philips Home Products, Inc., the development of alkaline and carbon zinc disposable batteries has not kept pace with the development of rechargable nickel-cadmium (Ni-Cd) batteries. The latter category has grown over 50 per cent in retail sales during the last two years.

"Research indicates that with the increased usage of high-drain devices, such as portable radio-tape players, televisions and computer toys, it is too expensive for consumers to keep all these products operating with costly 'throw-away' batteries," notes Gray. "Rechargable batteries, which can be used over and over again for approximately 1,000 chargings, are more economical for repeated use."

Indeed, compared to disposable batteries, the savings can be astronomical, as the following chart, which approximate purchase prices for equivalent energy use with the three common battery types, indicates:

Ni-Cd: 1 Mo. - $15, 1 Yr. - $15, 3 Yr. (1,000 charges) - $15; Alkaline: 1 Mo. - $53, 1 Yr. - $530, 3 Yrs. (1,000 charges) - $1,750; Carbon Zinc: 1 Mo. - $48, 1 Yr. - $480, 3 Yrs. (1,000 charges) - $1,600.

In addition, rechargeable batteries provide a more constant and stable power during use, last several times longer and provide more power during use than disposable batteries.

'AA' batteries, used primarily in small flashlights, radios, toys, photo equipment, calculators and electronic games, are the largest sellers in both the disposable and rechargeable battery categories. The are followed by size 'D' (Primary usage: flashlights, portable TVs, radios, recorders, toys, photo equipment), '9-Volt' (Primary usage: calculators, smoke alarms, electronic games, transistor radios) and size 'AAA'. (Primary usage: small flashlights, radios, toys).

Gray anticipates 1986 sales for rechargeable systems and batteries to reach $120 million. "With more battery-powered items being introduced every day and increased consumer awareness about the usage and economic benefits of rechargable systems, the category, as a whole, will continue to grow. I wouldn't be surprised to eventually see rechargeable batteries capture the majority share of the battery market.".

Clean Boats, Trailers Have Greater Resale Value

By Cliff Shelby

At today's prices for quality boating products, the wise marine buyer looks at the purchase as an investment: An investment in fun and enjoyment and an investment that should return as much of the original price as possible when it becomes time to sell or trade-in on a newer model.

This same smart boat buyer purchases a top-quality product whose reputation in the marketplace is for high trade-in or resale value. And he keeps his rig in top condition...inside and out.

Just how do you get the most for your boating rig when you sell? That answer starts when you first start to care for the product.

Clean, sharp boats and trailers naturally sell best. But it is too late to start after the boat and trailer have been improperly stored in the sunlight or have been a "plushy" carport maternity ward for the family cat (and family).

Folks at companies have some ideas that will help to improve your pride of ownership as well as assure that, when you want to sell or trade, your boat and trailer will bring top dollar.

Keep the boat clean! This means the hull as well as the carpet and windshields. Sunlight is the enemy of boat gel coat color and finish, and utmost care should be given to boat storage.

A quality boat cover should be used even if the boat is stored indoors. This will keep out pests (such as the squirrels that came into my open rod locker and munched all my emergency snack crackers!), as well as dust and damaging ultraviolet rays from the sun.

The eaisiest way to keep the hull free of slime and waterline scum is to wipe the boat hull completely with a soft towel or rag immediately upon pulling the boat from the water on the trailer after each use.

The drain plug should be pulled and stored in the same place each time, and any condensation and accumulated water drained from the hull interior.

There are many fine commercial hull and deck cleaners available to help ensure longer life to the boat's gel coat finish. Care should be taken with unknown household cleansers as some are abrasive and damaging to the boat's finish.

Consult with your marine dealer for preparations that help prolong the life of the finish and upholstery.

Extra special care should be given to the upholstery, particularly if the boat is stored without a cover. The sun's rays are very drying and damaging to even the best of materials.

Do not neglect even minor maintenance! The big jobs ...such as engine repair that should be necessary...always get the attention, while small repairs often go undone.

In the long life of your boat and trailer, the small things can amount to very shabby appearance indeed if not repaired and maintained with some regularity.

It is a good idea to wipe down your trailer when it is pulled from the water and an easy thing to do while wiping the hull. Special attention should be paid to lubrication of the wheel bearings as they are constantly in and out of the water.

Most wheel bearings should be repacked with quality grease periodically and all grease fittings checked for rock or dirt plugging or damage.

When you are checking your boat and trailer, consider what you would be looking for if you were thinking of buying your rig. And do all the little things...it doesn't take much time and means dollars in your pocket later!

Repellent Jams Mosquitoes' Senses

ZZZZT! Slap! You're finally outdoors on a beautiful morning. And then they hit — some of the outdoorman's greatest enemies: mosquitoes and other biting insects.

The next time you're planning for a good time outdoors, carefully packing your gear, including a quality insect repellent you might consider some facts about these pests to help make your trip more fun. Knowing more about them may help us better avoid them.

Mosquitoes are by far the most common outdoor pest that annoy humans. With over 150 different species in the United States, chances are that few of us have avoided an unpleasant meeting with at least one.

Contrary to what we've heard for years, mosquitoes don't really bite, but penetrate their victims with a hollow, flexible snout composed of six parts. Four parts cut your skin so the mosquito can get to your blood. With the other two, the mosquito gorges on her meal and spits saliva into the wound to thin your blood and keep it easy to draw. Mosquito saliva, not the mosquito stab, irritates your skin and causes that familiar itch, redness and swelling.

Only female mosquitoes attack. She does it for her kids. The blood they suck, and the protein it provides, nourishes her eggs. Male mosquitoes are vegetarian — feeding off the nectar of flowers. Although a female mosquito needs a male mosquito to impregnate her only once, she needs blood 40 to 50 times from her victims to lay all her eggs, about 100 after each meal.

Most mosquitoes are very tiny — ⅛ to ¼ of an inch long and about the same size wing-to-wing. They are part of the fly order of the insect family because they have two wings instead of four. In fact, the name mosquito is Spanish for "little fly." In place of hind wings, mosquitoes have two rodlike parts with knobs at the tops called halteres. They help mosquitoes keep their balance as they dart through the air.

In flight, mosquitoes beat their wings about 1,000 times a second, reaching speeds of eight miles per hour and making the familiar humming sound. Mosquitoes are like helicopters in that they don't run to start or stop flying; they lift immediately after their wings start beating and must flap their wings constantly to stay aloft.

Though their eyes are large in proportion to their bodies, mosquitoes have very poor vision. Until they get within a few inches of an object, they can only make out movement. They rely on their antennae, located near the center of their heads between their eyes, to smell and hear.

It's mainly these senses that lead them to you. Mosquitoes fly into the wind so they can sense a potential dinner. Attracted to warmth, moisture and carbon dioxide, the mosquito's potential animal or human victim exudes a "host beam" of these substances. When the mosquito, following a random flight into the wind, encounters such a beam, it keeps flying straight until it leaves the beam, then turns back into it. Zigzagging back and forth, the mosquito homes in within a few inches of its victim. Then its senses of sight and smell can determine whether or not the creature would make a good meal.

These senses also make it easier than you might think to fool a mosquito and keep it from biting you. Many people use an insect repellent which works by confusing the mosquito's sensor. That way, the mosquito can't tell whether you're worth biting. It could help you have a better time outdoors this biting bug season.

Check Tires Before Vacation

Although most motorists have their automobile's oil changed and their cooling and electrical systems checked before taking a long vacation trip, many do not check their tires closely.

Tire technology engineers suggest auto owners spend a few minutes assessing their tires before leaving on a trip.

The tire checklist inclues:

— Making sure the tires have the vehicle manufacturer's recommended air pressure;

— Looking for cracks, snags, tears or bubbles in the bead area near the wheel rim, the sidewalls or in the tread grooves of the tire;

—Checking the tires' valve cores to ensure no air is escaping;

—Observing tread wear for any indications of vehicle alighment problems.

Help Your Landscape Recover From Winter Wear

From the American Association of Nurserymen, the national organization for the professionals who grow, sell, install, and care for environmental plantings, comes timely information and advice about the winter's effects on landscape.

Their first word of counsel is this: wait. Nature has remarkable healing gifts if you'll only be patient. Don't uproot a tree or shrub or plant just because it appears to be an invalid. Be a little patient, because Dr. Nature is at work, and the best recovery room is right there in the ground where the roots are recuperating.

There are a few things you can do to help nurse things along, say nursery industry professionals. Some special foods may be required. This varies from region to region and from plant to plant, so you should check with your favorite garden center or landscape firm. In most places, a fertilizer which is lower-than-usual in nitrogen will be needed, but don't guess at this. Let the proper authority prescribe the diet.

Water, of course, is needed, but don't over-water. Your green, growing friends are thirsty after a long winter, but their roots will have trouble taking on a lot of water at this stage. A good schedule is this: if you have not had a soaking rain in about ten days, apply your own.

Another point to keep in mind is that more plants suffer from over-watering than from under-watering. In dry places, the little bit of water actually needed by plants is more than compensated by the many benefits they provide.

One more thing: don't sprinkle. Instead, put the needed water right down at the base of the plant.

Mulching is a major consideration to reduce evaporation, keep water in the soil, eliminate weeds. If weeds do appear, pull them up by hand so they won't rob the good plants of needed nutrients and water.

As you prune, remember that a brown leaf does not necessarily mean a dead plant. At this time of the year, don't cut away just because you see some ill-looking growth. Nature may be working on recovery, so wait until new growth begins. To determine dead growth, scrape the bark off with your fingernail a little above the suspect area. If you see a bit of green there, the branch is on its way to health, so on't cut it off.

One more point about pruning. When you cut away dead branches, you divert additional growing strength to the root system where it is most needed right now. That fact is sufficiently important to justify your reducing the size of the plant, or accepting a slightly misshapen plant for a season. At the same time, if the necessary pruning will mean a lifetime of deformity for the plant, it will be just as well to replace it now.

There may be some plants which are beyond hope. You will be wise to remove them now so their replacements will have the spring to grow on. The problem, of course, is to know for sure the plant is "clinically" dead, because there can be life you can't see.

If the main stem is split down near the soil line, that is a fairly sure indication that the Grim Reaper has taken his toll. Other signs may be harder to read, so if it is a valued member of your landscape, it is best to call in professional counsel before taking drastic action.

Bikes Part Of Trip

By Fred Teeman

It was our first attempt at family camping. We'd just arrived at Arkansas' Bull Shoals State Park after an all-day drive from Chicago.

My wife was trying to open the beans without an electric can opener; I was attempting to force tent posts together; and my pre-school daughter was wound tighter than a spring after the 11 hour car ride.

About the time my wife had the beans and hot dogs ready for the picnic table, my preschooler announced — as preschoolers are prone to do — "I have to go to the bathroom now!"

That was the first time I made a mental note to bring our bikes the next time we went camping. Neither my wife nor I wanted to trek a half-mile to the community building on foot, but the station wagon was still hopelessly surrounded by half-unpacked gear. Besides, the beans were getting cold.

Before we broke camp at the end of the week, I'd made the same mental note a dozen times more. With our bikes, we could have explored new campground sites with less time and effort — an important consideration for a guy like me who spends most of his time behind a desk.

With a bike, I could have ridden five miles up river — where I know the fly fishing's better — and my family wouldn't have been stranded without a car.

After that very first trip, never again did we forget our bikes. In fact, since then, we traded them in for an exciting new bicycle developed just for campers like us.

It's called the All-Terrain Bike (ATB), and it's the industry's version of a four wheel drive type vehicle.

On those first camping trips we were restricted to using our bikes on paved roads or smooth paths. With All-Terrain bikes, we can go just about any place we can walk.

Compared to conventional bikes, the ATBs have fatter tires to help cushion road shock and provide better traction. They've got wider, softer saddles and cushion handlebar grips that keep you comfortable no matter what the road.

And they're even equipped with a wider selection of low gears that make it possible, and even enjoyable, to pedal through soft dirt or tall grass.

The ATB's engineers took into account all the jars and jolts that off-road riders face, then they designed the bicycle so you don't have to worry — even if you hit rocks or tree roots.

Better yet, All-Terrain Bikes aren't just for camp-outs or off-road outings. In fact, I wouldn't be surprised if most ATBs spend more time on the road than off.

All the features that make it such a great off-road bike add up to more comfort and reliability for on the road riding as well. I use mine for commuting to the train station in the morning, doing road work with my hunting dogs, and getting my legs and lungs in shape for the hunting season in the fall.

So, when spring breaks and you're thinking about additional equipment that will add enjoyment to your outdoor life, put an All-Terrain Bicycle at the top of the list.

We're warning you though, you could be starting a trend. You may end up with the entire family wanting one before the season ends!

Americans In Love With Outdoor Barbecue Cooking

Sixty-six million consumers and 98 million outdoor grills — 1.4 grills per user — prove there's nothing quite so American as the barbecue. And like so many distinctively American habits, the grill itself has changed and improved over the years.

Accessories, colors, sizes: Grill options today are almost limitless. However, consumers must make one key decision before considering any options — that is, whether to buy a traditional charcoal or newer gas unit?

Charcoal vs. Gas: How It Was

Charcoal grilling is and always has been associated with the number one reason consumers barbecue — outdoor flavor.

The familiar kettle-shaped grills, developed in the 1950s, accommodate two cooking methods: Direct and indirect. As its name suggests, for direct cooking, meats are cooked directly over a single layer of hot coals, absorbing the full heat of the coals. Cooking with the lid on helps food retain natural juices and prevent flare-ups.

For indirect cooking, a drip pan is placed under whole poultry, ham and roasts and charcoal arranged on either side. With the lid on and vents open, natural convection is created — ensuring faster cooking and juicier meats.

Most gas grills have been designed to cook with gas-heated lava rock or pumice stone. But there have been problems associated with these materials. Lava rock can heat the food unevenly; while foods on one part of the grill may be perfect, foods on another spot undercook. Too, frequent flare-ups of the lava rock-pumice stone system can ruin food.

Today: The Future Is Now

Both charcoal and gas grills have been improved, yet the basic technology remains the same. Today's grill operates much like the grill of yesteryear, whether heated with charcoal or gas.

Until now, that is. A new technology gas barbecue has virtually eliminated greasy lava rock and its associated problems, while retaining that true outdoor flavor.

The new system replaces lava rock with easy-to-clean porcelain-coated, extra-high temperature steel bars, positioned two layers deep within the grill's cooking chamber.

Basically, fats from meats fall onto bars, vaporize and produce enough smoke and sizzle to create the outdoor taste. To virtually prevent flare-ups, remaining fats travel quickly through the bars to the specially designed catch pan.

The Cooking Genesis

As with charcoal grills, the gas grill offers direct and indirect cooking. The direct cooking method is used for searing meats such as steaks, chops and hamburgers. Depending on the food's fat content, the burner control knobs will be turned to different temperatures.

The indirect cooking method is used to complete the cooking of food after searing and for cooking roasts, poultry, game, vegetables, breads and foods that are high in fat, such as sausage, ribs or duck. Place the food in the center of the grill with front and back burners ignited, the center burner is off. All cooking is done witth a closed lid, providing uniform, evenly circulated heat.

For a saucy finish: Non-sweet glazes can be applied during the entire cooking process or during the last 30 to 45 minutes. Sugar in sweet sauces will burn if cooked for a long time — these sauces should be applied during the last 15 to 20 minutes.

For a finished "glaze" on foods, the front and back burners should be turned to high, leaving the center burner off. Food should then be cooked covered, five to 10 minutes, or until the food is well browned and the sauce has a glazed appearance.

The Future?

Man has always looked to the future with curiosity. And many have looked to the future for the features they really want in a gas grill: Revolutionary technology, superior design, unmatched durability, even heat, no flare-ups.

Fishing Hooks Should Be Sharpened

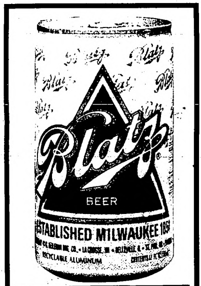
Most anglers will agree that fishing equipment is only as good as the person holding the rod and reel. If you are using the wrong bait, fishing in the wrong areas, tying weak knots, and forgetting to put the drain plug in the boat, your chances of coming home with a full stringer are pretty slim. And to make matters worse, you probably won't have as much fun, you'll be wet, and you won't have anything to brag about.

So what's an angler supposed to do? According to the fishing experts, get to the point. First off, make sure your hooks are sharp. It will help in penetrating a fish's mouth, and in turn put more on your stringer.

And by using hooks in which the hook's shank is offset, you'll catch more fish per strike by forcing the point into the fish's mouth. It's like stepping on a rake. It pops up and . . . Wham! Another one for the stringer.

Now that you've got sharp, penetrating hooks to help with your fishing adventures, you can turn your attention to all those other reasons why you came home empty-handed again. You can always blame it on the weather. That excuse works for everybody, no matter where you live.



Taste the heritage of Milwaukee.

Protect Trophy Fish

We've all heard the fish story about the "one that got away."

But, this time it has a different twist, and it's even more disheartening. It's about the big one that was caught, but didn't make it to the taxidermist.

Let the fishing experts give you some advice to ensure that your "wallhanger" makes it to the taxidermist, then home to you, in true trophy form.

It is important to keep trophy fish calm and undamaged when first caught. Missing scales and broken fins are hard to repair.

Refrain from putting the fish on a stringer or in a live well with other fish. Fish should be transported gently, wrapped in a wet towel and protected by a cooler or box. Never gut the fish. Such damage is virtually irreparable.

If there is a competent taxidermist near where the fish is taken, delivery of a fresh trophy is easy. However, if it will be some time before the fish reaches the taxidermist, some precautions should be taken.

Though freezing the fish while wrapped in a wet towel prevents freezer burn, it can also result in extensive loss of color.

Many taxidermists recommend dusting the fresh fish with four or five ounces of powered borax, and then allowing the uncovered fish to freeze solid overnight.

Handling the frozen fish gently, protect the tail with two pieces of cardboard and tape. Then double wrap the fish securely in a heavy duty plastic trash bag and place it back in the freezer. That's all there is to it.

During your initial meeting with the taxidermist, be sure and discuss concerns as poses, panels, completion time, cost and deposits. It will prevent surprises later.

Most fishermen prefer their trophy in a fighting position with the mouth open and the gill covers flared. The amount of sweep or bend in the fish and the direction the completed mount will be facing depends upon personal preference.

The majority of mounted fish will hang on a wall without the help of a panel. Depending on the fish, however, panels can do much to enhance the finished product.

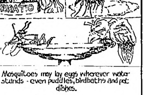
Most shops offer a good selection of finished panels in various woods and styles. Wood grained, vinyl-covered panels cost less, but finished hardwood adds a more distinctive touch.

Some folks leave fish at a taxidermy shop, then never show up again. For this reason (and to cover material costs), most taxidermists require a deposit of one-third to one-half the total cost.

Deposits are a common request, so don't be surprised or concerned about paying for services not yet rendered. Just get a deposit receipt, and request a written estimate of the total charge.

Luck may play a part in the catching of a trophy, but has no place in the mounting.

Take care in field preparation. Cover everything in detail with the taxidermist, and the chances of disatisfaction will be greatly reduced.



Mosquitoes may lay eggs wherever water stands - even puddles, birdbaths and pet dishes.

Insect Spray Works

Mosquitoes and other biting bugs have roamed the world for 200 million years. Only recently, modern technology has made it possible . . . no more bites!

Products developed in the last 20 years can virtually promise that you will be invisible to biting buts when you follow these simple rules:

— Cover all exposed skin with cream or stick.

— Don't miss a spot! Mosquitoes home in on warmth, moisture and carbon dioxide exuded from the skin. They'll find the spot you've missed.

— Spray clothing with aerosols, or non-aerosol pump spray.

— Don't wait for the first bite. Wear insect repellent when you start out, and reapply it often if you get wet, perspire, or if it is a windy day.

That certainly sounds better than the remedies that early American settlers used, like smearing your body with mud or bear fat. Or using more recently developed products that include pine oil, stearic acid, champhor or citronella.

For those who prefer a scented product, insect repellent is available in Evergreen Scent, a fragrance as pleasant as the whole outdoors. And both original and Evergreen Scent are available in all the forms needed — aerosols, pump sprays, creams and sticks — to make your out-of-doors free from biting bugs.

Directions For Good Quick Compost For Family Garden Plot

Want some pretty darn quick compost to enrich your garden?

The American Association of Nurserymen recommends the following for making a small amount of compost in a fairly short time.

Crumble a bushel of leaves into a clear polyethylene bag, add two gallons of water, and five or six pounds of high-content nitrogen commercial fertilizer (20-10-5 works well). Place the bag in a sunny spot and turn it over every other day. In three or four weeks, you'll have a good quality compost which can be stored until ready for use.

Outdoor Enthusiasts Warned To Avoid Cold

For the millions of people who enjoy the outdoors, Nature can be a generous friend but sometimes an unforgiving adversary.

Most people will think twice about going out in a blizzard or a downpour without proper protection. But a cool, sunny day is a different and often deceptive matter.

Too often, folks are caught up in the excitement of the day's outing and fail to heed warning signals that can save them from discomfort and even danger.

Experts point out that hypothermia is a serious threat to anyone who enjoys the outdoors. Prolonged exposure to the cold can have serious debilitating and sometimes fatal consequences.

Hypothermia literally means, "low temperature." Under normal conditions, the human body functions best at around an internal temperature of 98.6 degrees. When this temperature begins to slide to the 95 degrees level, a person can be in serious danger.

As its internal temperature drops, the body automatically takes steps to resist this heat loss. Blood vessels just below the skin constrict, reducing the flow of warm blood near the surface, thus decreasing further heat loss.

If heat loss continues, muscles tighten, causing shivering which burns sugar and generates additional heat.

If the body can't produce more heat than it is losing, its temperature will continue to drop and the symptoms become severe. Shivering increases. The skin grows pale and may show irregular blue or pink splotches.

If the condition continues, muscles tighten even more and coordination deteriorates. After longer exposure to the cold, a person can become disoriented and phusical energy drops to an alarming level.

Generally speaking, people in good physical condition are better able to withstand the cold. But even for the physically fit, dressing properly for the cold is essential.

Officials recommend clothing that is warm yet lightweight. They believe that using the layering approach is the most sensible way to achieve maximum protection without sacrificing comfort or mobility.

A clothing "system" allows a person to combine layers of clothing — undergarments, middlewear and outerwear — that are both warm and comfortable.

In the event someone does succumb to hypothermia, care must be taken in treating the person. In all cases, trained medical help should be sought immediately.

But until a doctor can be reached, there are some basic steps that will help:

A) The victim should be wrapped in warm blankets, especially around the head, neck and shoulder area.

B) Avoid elevating the feet and take care in giving the person warm food or drink. If the body temperature has dropped too low, the introduction of warm fluids or food can cause shock and heart failure.

C) As a further step, warm the person with your own body. Handle the person gently and have him or her rest until trained medical attention can be given.

The signs of hypothermia can begin rather quickly, especially on windy days when an apparently moderate temperature can be intensified by the wind. So dress properly and pay attention to what your body is telling you.

Better to cut a day short in the woods and return for enjoyment at a later time than to suffer the pain of Mother Nature's "cold shoulder."

Save Fuel, Money

While gasoline is plentiful again, it's also expensive, so it makes good economic sense to conserve fuel whenever possible. Fortunately, a boater who follows a few simple rules can reduce his gas bills a lot and not sacrifice any pleasure and enjoyment during a day on the water.

The boating authorities offer these 10 commandments on getting better fuel economy during your boating activities:

1) At the start of every boating season get your outboard tuned up by your dealer. He'll inspect your spark plugs and make sure they're not fouled, and he can check your engine idle and carburetion. A tuned engine uses less gas.

2) Don't load your boat with unnecessary gear. The more weight you haul around, the more gas you'll use.

3) Get your boat up on plane quickly by opening up the throttle. Once on plane, throttle back to about two-thirds or three-fourths of wide open, which is the most economical throttle setting. Running wide open uses a lot more gas.

4) Balance your boat's gear and passengers fore and aft, and side to side. A planing hull, like a small airplane, is sensitive to load distribution. A boat with an evenly distributed load will get on plane quicker and skim over the water surface — saving fuel in the process.

5) Keep the bottom of your boat clean and slick. A clean hull means reduced underwater drag.

6) Check your propeller from time to time to be certain it's not bent or broken. A damaged propeller is a real fuel thief.

7) Avoid excessive idling. Whenever you have to stop, turn off the ignition. A warm engine restarts easily without choking.

8) Check your car and trailer tire pressure. It's pointless to try to save fuel on the water if you're wasting it by driving down the highway with underinflated tires.

9) When trailering a boat, reduce your car speed. It's safer and it saves fuel.

10) Learn to use the proper trim angle for your outboard. Consult your owner's guide if you aren't sure at what angle your outboard motor is most efficient.

Trees, Shrubs Add Beauty To Landscape Design

Trees and shrubs form the basic framework of nearly every landscape design. Without these plants, properties seem barren. With them, landscapes become beautiful outdoor living spaces.

To get full value from trees and shrubs, they should always be planted for a specific purpose. Use fast-growing varieties to create privacy screens or to block unattractive views.

Thick-growing shrubs can be massed together to form energy-saving windbreaks or impenetrable hedges.

In summer, shade trees can cool patios or shield southern exposed windows from harsh mid-day sun.

Trees and shrubs also can serve as dazzling garden ornaments. Their colorful flowers, rich foliage and wonderfully textured bark make dramatic accents in the different seasons. Many provide the added bonus of delicious fruits or nuts.

It takes several years for newly added landscape plants to attain a mature look. The keys to fastest, healthiest growth are proper planting techniques followed by regular and accurate fertilizing.

The Right Way To Plant

Roots of young trees and shrubs need plenty of room in order to develop quickly. A planting hole should be twice the width of the root ball and half again as deep. When digging the hole, make separate piles of topsoil and bottom soil.

Mix several heaping shovelfuls of peat moss into the bottom of the hole and also into the topsoil pile. Backfill with enough topsoil mix so the top of the root ball is even with the surrounding soil line.

Center the tree or shrub carefully in the hole and fill it halfway with more mix. Water thoroughly and finish filling with remaining soil. Finally, work the surface into a saucer-like depression to retain rain water and fertilizer.

Quick And Easy Fertilizing

Trees and shrubs absorb nutrients through the leaves as well as the roots. For fastest results, feed regularly with a liquid fertilizer, thoroughly soaking the foliage and the soil around the base of the plant.

Selecting Sites And Specimens

Permanent plantings should be attractive from all angles. A trick used by professional landscapers is to place tall stakes at selected planting sites. Evaluate placements from various viewing spots, and try to envision what the plantings will look like when trees and shrubs are full grown.

A common mistake is to plant young trees too close to the house. Learn the ultimate spread of a tree and place it accordingly.

A properly situated small maple, oak or other tree may look out of place at first, but this is preferable to being forced to ruin its lovely symmetry later through drastic pruning.

An effective way to frame the front of a house in greenery is with an evergreen foundation planting. The goal is to conceal the cement foundation without blocking windows, entryways or attractive architectural features.

Among the finest plants for foundations are rhododendrons, hollies, yews and other compact-growing evergreen shrubs that provide year-round beauty without requiring drastic pruning to remain in bounds.

For interesting variations in height, taller varieties can be planted at the corner of the house or between windows.

Set all foundation plants far enough from the house so that when they are full grown it is still possible to walk behind them to do painting or other maintenance work.

Quick, Slick Decal Removal

Ever have trouble removing decals from your boat, tackle box or other piece of gear? Even price tag stickers can be tough to get off and most decals leave that sticky goo that attracts dirt and grime. This tip can make sticker and decal removal and cleanup quick and slick ... use a common hairdryer and gradually heat the entire decal. Check an edge or corner frequently to determine when the adhesive is releasing and apply no more heat than is necessary depending on the surface you are working on. After the decal peels off, use simple kitchen white vinegar or WD-40 to remove any sticky residue. Wash with mild soap and water and the job is done. Works great to remove even those old "no slip" decals from the bottom of a bath tub.

Conservationists Proven Right On Acid Rain Threat

For years, opponents of acid rain controls have denied two claims made by conservationists: that acid rain causes widespread environmental damage and that the chief culprit is sulfur dioxide emissions from coal-fired power plants, smelters and factory boilers. Today, mounting scientific evidence is proving conservationists right on both points.

An article in the February-March issue of National Wildlife magazine reports on a plethora of scientific studies that document acid rain's extensive damage to the nation's lakes, forests and buildings and confirm a connection between smokestacks in the Midwest and acid rain in the Northeast. National Wildlife is a bimonthly publication of the National Wildlife Federation.

Recent studies by the Environmental Protection Agency reveal that more than 9,000 lakes in 15 eastern states and nearly 7,000 lakes in the West are sensitive to the continued deposition of airborne acids. Sensitive lakes have a limited ability to buffer or neutralize acid rain and are therefore subject to sudden shifts in acidity which can harm aquatic life.

Acidic pollution also has been identified as one of the probable causes of the decline in the nation's forests. On some northeastern mountains, more than half of the red spruce trees have died during the past 15 years.

The scars that acidic air pollution leaves on buildings, monuments and statutes are even more obvious. A study conducted for EPA estimates that in 17 states east of the Missippi, acid rain and the deposition of dry sulphate-containing particles are corroding buildings to the tune of $5 billion a year. The recent face-lift given the Statute of Liberty was necessitated in part by the acid corrosion of her copper skin.

Scientists also have assembled compelling evidence linking acid rain to sulfur dioxide emissions from smokestacks. Michael Oppenheimer, an atmospheric physicist at the Environmental Defense Fund, was among the first researchers to show the link. He compared the patterns of emissions from copper smelters in the Southwest to the concentration of sulfate falling in the Rockies 600 miles away. His finding: the sulfate levels closely mimicked the emissions patterns.

Oppenheimer's study, however, did not actually follow the emissions from tall smokestacks to mountain lakes. Atmospheric chemists Kenneth Rahn and Randall Borys of the University of Rhode Island firmly established the connection between smokestacks and dead lakes by "finger-painting" air pollutants.

For 18 months in 1983 and 1984, the researchers took air samples at sites in the eastern United States, ran them through a vacuum pump and a cellulose filter. The particles collected on the filters were then made radioactive so the trapped chemical elements could be identified by their radio-emissions.

Rohn and Borys found that half the sulfate present in such Northeastern locations as Underhill, Vermont, originated in the Midwest and traveled East.

The new evidence has piqued the public's interest in acid rain and created a new sense of urgency in solving the problem. A poll conducted last year for the National Wildlife Federation by Opinion Research Corp. found an overwhelming majority of Americans believe acid rain is a serious national problem that is not being adequately addressed by Congress or the Reagan Administration.

Acid rain, indeed, has risen in public consciousness since 1980, when a mere 30 per cent of Americans indicated an awareness of acid rain and its effects. By 1985, nearly 94 per cent were aware of the problem, according to pollster Louis Harris.

As public concern has mounted, the political winds have begun to shift. Last year, for instance, the Acid Deposition Control Act of 1986 became the first acid rain control measure ever approved by a House subcommittee. Although the bill languished in committee, it gained close to 170 cosponsors by the year's end.

Nonetheless, the political wrangling continues. Those in favor of protecting the environment for future generations believe emissions are a deadly force. Those motivated by economic concerns will keep arguing for more research. And while the debate continues, the problem gets worse.

Gardening For Beginners

When it comes to horticulture, beginners are lucky because nature is on your side. All the brown-thumb myths, however, suggest otherwise: some people when it comes to plants, are born losers...or so it would seem.

But the reality of the world of growing things is contrary to the myth. Nature's basic zest is to sprout and push and probe and sneak through sidewalk cracks, and take over lattices, and climb fences...to re-forest and rejungle, and if possible, repatriate so-called civilization into a wilderness.

So the notion that one must possess special power or wisdom or luck in order to succeed as a gardener — is simply not the case. To care enough about plants to work at the job of growing them is the vital secret.

That's the view of the American Association of Nurserymen.

You can begin simply and inexpensively with the space available — a tiny plot in the side yard — some pots in the living room — a windowbox. You can plant a tree or shrubs or flowers or vegetables. Your local retail nursery can provide the necessary materials, and can also give you the advice and literature that will guide you in your new adventure.

With just a bit of persistence, you will have much more success than you expected, and your new failures will be turned into learning experiences. And you will have hit on a hobby that can be made to fit into your schedule while providing personal satisfaction and adding beauty to your surroundings.

So try your luck, beginner. Remember...nature is on your side.

Drivers Questioned On Car Care Quiz, Information

"How often should the muffler bearings be lubricated?" "Where does one add exhaust fluid?" "How often should the air in your tires be changed?" "How hot can your engine get before it is considered overheated?"

If you recognize the first three of the above as trick questions and are not sure about the answer to the fourth, you are like most of the 66 drivers tested by University of Michigan Transportation Research Institute's Paul Green.

Dr. Green's goal was to determine how drivers might respond to various types of instrumentation being considered for cars of the future. His first step: To find out how much people know about the workings of their cars.

He learned that most of the people in his test group did not know much about their cars' mechanical functions. Most of them could not correctly answer questions about the operating temperature of their cars' engines nor tell how much anti-freeze-coolant their radiators held.

Although 10 people attemped to answer the trick questions, most realized these were "put-ons" by the time they reached the third.

If you recognized the first three questions as tricks, and stated 250-275 deg. F. as maximum temperature before over-heating, you're ready for a few more legitimate questions from Car Care Council about the cooling system:

(1) For improved engine efficiency, cooling systems are pressurized. Normal range of pressure is 8 to 10 p.s.i. True or false?

(2) You're stuck in a traffic jam on a hot day. Your car overheats. Until you can safely pull off the road to get help you should: (a) Close all the windows and turn on the air conditioner to MAXIMUM; (b) Open the windows and turn the heater to its hottest setting with the fan on high; or (c) Turn on the headlights and emergency flashers. Choose one.

(3) Cooling system hoses circulate up to: (a) 500 gallons per hr.; (b) 1,500 gallons per hr.; or (c) 7,500 gallons per hour.

ANSWERS TO CAR CARE QUIZ

(1) False. Typical cooling system pressure ranges from 14 p.s.i. The boiling point of coolant increases three degrees for every pound of increased pressure. The radiator cap, which regulates pressure, should be tested as part of seasonal cooling system maintenance. A weak pressure cap will cause coolant loss and engine overheating.

(2) You'll have to bear some discomfort to help your car through this crisis, says Car Care Council. Turn off the air conditioner and turn on the heat. It will increase circulation of coolant, thereby helping dissipate engine heat.

Also, shift the car to neutral whenever possible, and "rev up" the engine to fast idle speed.

(3) The answer is (c), 7,500 gallons per hour. Hoses must survive under-the-hood temperatures of up to 280 deg. F. and are subject to pressures nearing 18 p.s.i., a good reason to be sure hoses and connections are up to the task.

For further information on cooling system maintenance, write for an informative booklet offered by the Automotive Cooling System Institute. Send 50 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Cooling, 222 Cedar Lane, Teaneck, NJ 07666.

Iceberg Lettuce Tasty, Healthy

Ever wonder why the words "salad" and "Iceberg Lettuce" are practically interchangeable for American families everywhere?

Crispy, crunchy Iceberg Lettuce is a tasty and nutritional base for any type of salad, blending perfectly with any combination of simple or exotic ingredients. It's an excellent source of dietary fiber and has less than 20 calories per serving. With all this going for it, it's easy to see why Iceberg Lettuce is an important factor in the continuing increase in salad consumption in the U.S.

That's not all. The versatility of Iceberg Lettuce seems to appeal to the creativeness of the family chef — even to those who boast they can't boil eggs!

From the simple to the sublime, it starts with Iceberg Lettuce. By adding ingredients from the four food groups: meat, fruits and vegetables, milk, and breads and cereals, a balanced full-course salad can be created. If calcium needs are a vital concern, extra amounts of cheese can be added. For high fiber meals, just add foods extra high in fiber content. And for protein, try a tostada or a taco.

Yet another important reason for the popularity of Iceberg Leetuce is its availability year round. During the winter, it's grown in the desert areas of California and Arizona, which produce 90 per cent of the nation's supply. Modern technology assures you of an ever-present supply of crisp, fresh lettuce as close as your neighborhood grocery.

Share Fishing Fun, Enjoyment With Youngsters

Sharing an experience increases its pleasure many times over, and fishing is no exception. What better way to enjoy one of your favorite activities than to take youngsters out for a day on the water?

"The only thing better than hooking into a big bass," says Bill Dance, long-time fishing great and a member of a pro fishing team, "is hooking a child on the enjoyment of fishing. For me, it's one of life's greatest satisfactions."

To help kids get the most of their early fishing experiences, there are three simple rules to follow: Keep it simple, make it fun and keep it short.

When a youngster is first starting out, don't confuse him with a lot of complicated fishing jargon or gear.

Remember that, while young minds are usually hungry to learn new things, they do it best in small portions, so go at it slowly.

"I suggest starting out with just a cane pole, a good length of line, a bobber or float and a small hook. This way the youngster can begin to understand the basic principles of the sport, without getting all wrapped up — sometimes literally — in a lot of fancy gear."

Forget about casting, Dance suggests. Just show the kids how to bait the hook and how to keep the line still in the water.

"Patience is probably the first fishing lesson they should learn. Not only is it an important fishing rule, but also it's something they should learn to develop as part of their lives. And remember — teach by example."

Dance emphasizes that these early experiences should be fun. And that means catching at least one fish.

"Fish for bluegills, or sunnies, or any other small species that are plentiful in your area.

"Just remember that the positive reinforcement of actually catching a fish can go a long way in getting the little angler to try his or her hand again."

Dance also points out that while you might be content to spend an entire day on the lake, younger folks have a hard time keeping still. So, for the first few times, keep the outing short and enjoyable.

"Little ones get 'antsy' real fast. So plan on coming home early after they have caught a fish or two.

"Remember that their enjoyment of fishing, and their eagerness to devote more time to what may be your favorite activity, will take a little time to develop. So give them a little bit at a time, with a promise of coming back again soon."

Dance has one final thought to add.

Just keep in mind that this is an ideal opportunity to teach kids a real appreciation of nature and our natural resources. It's a valuable lesson they can keep with them for the rest of their lives.

"And you can feel real good about having helped your children learn to appreciate some of the truly important things life has to offer."

Fishing can be a wonderful experience for youngsters. But it holds even more enjoyment for the adult willing to take the time and effort to teach them.

Remember The Old Days

Outdoorsmen love to recall the "good ol' days." There were always more and bigger fish, game was more plentiful and the lakes and forests were less crowded, at least in memory. But if one reflects honestly on the equipment available to outdoorsmen in the not-too-distant past, we have to admit that the "good ol' days" were not that great.

First recollection of a sportsman's boat is vivid still, if you helped to push, drag and coerce that tar caulked, lap straked old sponge of a wooden boat over acres of mud marsh on several duck hunts. We also tried to fish from this same heavy hull but it was impossible to scull, and so highsided that it sailed before the slightest breeze. The seats were so low that passengers sat with their knees beneath their chins, however, the low seats added real incentive for keeping the water bailed to a reasonable volume.

Today's modern fishing boat is a far-cry from those of the "good ol' days." Built of modern materials and with design refinements and technology unavailable just twenty years ago, the so-called "bassboat" represents the ultimate in comfort, safety and functional utility.

In times past, fishermen relegated themselves to fishing very small areas of large rivers and lakes simply because they lacked engines of sufficient size to risk open water or to cover much of a distance. The modern bass-boat, hydrodynamically and aerodynamically designed for higer speed operation, can carry larger capacity loads, bigger horsepower engines and provides a fisherman or water sports enthusiast an operating range not imagined in the days when we fished within sight of the dock.

Old time boats offered little or no safety features. Should the boat fill with water it sank. The hull designs were so tippy that "don't stand up in the boat!" was the rule of the day and boats that rowed or paddled well, often performed poorly when outboard power was added.

Today the U.S. Coast Guard requires that boats be provided with flotation so that they will not sink should they become filled with water. Boaters should make sure that all equipment is kept in the best working condition and thet they wear, not just own, Personal Flotation Devices (life jackets) whenever they are operating their boats. The emergency engine stop switch lanyard should always be securely attached to the driver whenever the boat engine is running. "If today is to become the "good ol' days" of tomorrow, then we have to practice safe boating now!"

Stop Weeds With Plastic

Love to garden? Hate to weed? Here's a hint from commercial growers and landscapers: Mulch film, a type of polyethylene plastic sheeting, will keep any size garden weed-free safely and economically.

Simply lay the mulch film down on the soil, anchor the sides and ends with a bit of dirt, and punch holes with a scissors where seeds or plants will grow.

Mulch film will keep weeds from reaching the surface for the easiest gradening ever. It is unaffected by most garden chemicals, so there's no need to change your gardening practices.

Look for mulch film in hardware stores, home centers or wherever garden supplies are sold. The mulch film should be 1 to 1.5 mil thick and black in color.

Black mulch film blocks the light, so weeds don't have a chance to grow. Black also retains more moisture than white or clear plastic sheeting, and blends in with the soil better.

Some gardeners toss a bit of dirt over their mulch film to conceal the film; others leave their weed-free garden as is.

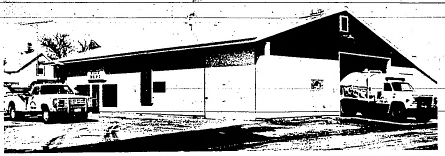
Goodridge Fire Hall Open House Set Saturday



OPEN HOUSE will be conducted for the public at the Goodridge fire hall on Saturday from 10:30 a.m. to 3 p.m., according to Dale Hanson, fire chief, and Rodney Wayne, chairman of the Goodridge Area Fire department board of directors. The former Manderud Standard station in downtown Goodridge has been cleaned and painted inside and remodeled to handle the department's fire trucks and equipment. The open house is planned in conjunction with the Goodridge community auction Saturday and is intended to permit the public to see the facilities and equipment. The department provides fire protection for the city of Goodridge, all of the townships of Cloverleaf, Goodridge, Highlandings, Kratka, Reiner, Star, Grand Plain and Moylan and the part of Agdar lying south of Ditch 20.

Goodridge Area Fire department will hold an open house at its new fire hall Saturday from 10:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. in conjunction with the community auction to be held that day. The hall is the former Manderud Standard station in Goodridge which has been remodeled and repainted on the interior.

Members of the fire department will be on hand during the open house hours to show visitors around the building, explain fire procedures and answer questions about equipment and fixtures. The department provides fire protection for the city of Goodridge and the townships of Cloverleaf, Goodridge, Highlanding, Kratka, Reiner, Star, Grand Plain, Moylan and two-thirds of Agdar (the portion south of Ditch 20).

"We want to encourage everyone in the fire department area to stop by and visit the hall during the open house," stated Dale Hanson, fire chief. "This will be an opportunity for them to see the facility and equipment we have to provide fire protection and how the funds provided by the city and townships are used for fire fighting."

The city of Goodridge and participating townships operate the fire department under a joint powers agreement completed last April. The building was purchased for the fire department by the Goodridge Area Development association for $37,000. The department operates on an annual budget of about $14,000.

Purchase of the building took place in January of 1986

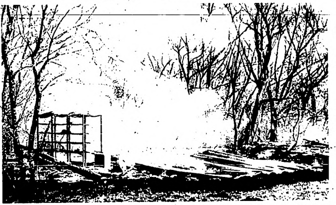
Thief River Falls
THE TIMES

Volume 76, Number 28 Wednesday, April 8, 1987 324 Main Avenue North; Thief River Falls, MN 56701 Twenty-Five Cents



FIRE QUICKLY SPREAD and destroyed a shed and garage at the Steve Meyer residence, route four Thief River Falls, Wednesday noon (April 8). The fire started when a family member began burning garbage. Wind carried sparks along a wind row and eventually destroyed the shed and garage. Mrs. Steve Meyer said neighbors responded quickly when they heard of the fire from her young son who ran about one-quarter of a mile to the neighbor's house. By the time the fire department reached the site they were only able to keep the fire from spreading to other buildings and the woods. Fire Chief Dave Bjorkman said grass fires have been a real problem across the state recently. He reminds anyone who plans to do some burning to have plenty of help on hand and plenty of equipment to put out the fire if it gets out of control. Bjorkman said it is also a good idea to have the phone number of the fire department close at hand. Fires spread quickly this time of year especially when the wind picks up. Bjorkman said not to burn when the wind velocity is more than 10 miles per hour.

Assessments For East Greenwood Stir Debate

by David Hill
Times Reporter

Tuesday night's public hearing on the East Greenwood improvement project in Thief River Falls drew a group of less than a dozen people, but stirred up a great deal of debate as to what assessments to charge abutting land owners.

East Greenwood street project, east of Spruce avenue to highway 59, was accepted and then incorporated into the 1987 street and utility project Tuesday night by the Thief River Falls city council after the public hearing was adjourned. A third resolution adopted by the council, with a dissenting vote from Alderman Kenneth Murphy, set a limit not to exceed $14 per front foot along the project.

Alderman Murphy anticipated the possible objections of landowners who were assessed higher rates for projects much less encompassing in purpose than the East Greenwood project. Murphy said that to charge $14 per front foot on such a major project when landowners just last year were charged $14 per front foot for just a bituminous overlay and curb and gutter replacement, was a gross inequity and very difficult to justify.

When the public hearing opened Mayor Bob Carlson noted that the city has attempted to improve this stretch of road three times. He said he hoped the project would be completed this time. But at the same time, Mayor Carlson said he recognized that the project was unique and the council may have to set a precedent in recovering its costs to get it done.

The estimated total cost of the improvement is $285,000. Ron Lindberg, advisor to the city from Stewart and Walker engineering firm, said if the city were to recover approximately $50,000, the assessment to property owners along the street would be $28 per front foot which equates to about 19 per cent of the total project.

However, the project is abutted by few city landowners. A large portion of the project, in fact, is abutting property lying outside the corporate limits of Thief River Falls and not assessable. The council also recognized receipt of a letter from three local businessmen, which stated that they were against the project if the assessment was set at $28 per front foot. If the assessment were set at $10

Reading To Children Helps Them To Read

Studies indicate that children who are read aloud to daily and are coached by their parents become successful readers. That's why it's important for parents to be partners in helping their children learn to read, according to the National PTA.

"Parents can instill in their children a desire to read by helping them understand that we read for information and pleasure," says Gloria Ryan of the National PTA in the March 1987 issue of the association's magazine. She offers practical suggestions to help children develop an interest in reading even before they are school-age.

The article recommends that parents talk with children more often and make it a part of everyday life. Encourage children to respond orally because oral language is the foundation for reading. It also notes that fathers especially need to make more of an effort to spend time talking to their infants.

Another way to encourage children to read is by letting them see you read and by reading aloud to them. Both promote a good attitude about reading that children can carry with them throughout their school years.

"An important finding among studies of good readers and early readers is that one person coached them in reading," says Ryan. Usually the parent is the one to do this, but siblings, other relatives and babysitters have proven to be good teachers. While reading to children, ask questions about what has been read to encourage thinking skills and stimulate the imagination.

The article points out that even when children are in school and are being taught to read formally, it's important to continue one-on-one teaching at home because a busy teacher cannot give the time needed every day for individual attention in reading.

Child development experts say it's important to make prereading activities for preschoolers fun, not formal. Keep activities short enough for the child's attention span, and stop reading before the child loses interest and begins to focus on playing with toys. Parents should stay away from workbooks and workbook-like materials because they are not appropriate for preschoolers and, in fact, may not be helpful for children under age eight, Ryan believes.

The author concludes that, "By reading stories, discussing what you and your child read, encouraging writing and independent reading, and presenting reading as a pleasurable activity, you can help your child become a successful reader."

Older People Can Make Their Lives More Healthy

by C. Everett Koop, M.D.
Surgeon General

During the past year, I've written a number of columns aimed at improving the health of older Americans. All of the columns have carried a common, important theme: Older people can do many things to maintain or improve their health.

More than 49 million people in this country are 55 or older. In the next four decades, that number is expected to more than double. While most older Americans consider themselves to be in good health, nearly 80 per cent have at least one chronic health condition, such as heart disease, diabetes or arthritis.

The good news for older adults, which I hope my columns have been spreading, is that older people can prevent or better manage chronic health conditions by adopting healthier lifestyles. To benefit, all you have to do is follow some simple, healthy habits, like eating right, exercising regularly, quitting smoking, using medicines safely and preventing injuries. Let's review some of the key points of these important behaviors.

Eating nutritious, well-balanced meals can lower your risk of cancer, heart disease and other chronic conditions. It can help you reach and maintain your proper weight and help you look and feel better. Eat a variety of healthy foods — fresh fruits, and vegetables, low-fat dairy products, whole-grain breads and cereals and lean meats. Remember, too, that calcium is important for strong bones and fiver is needed for healthy digestive tracts.

No matter what age you are or what shape you're in, there's an exercise that's right for you. Regular exercise can improve your mental health and physical appearance. It may also help you sleep better and make it easier for you to lose weight. Vigorous, regular exercise appears to have a role in increasing and maintaining overall cardiovascular health. There is also some evidence that it helps reduce high blood pressure, stress and strokes.

A recent study, however, found that many older people believe there is no need for them to exercise and that exercise can even prove harmful. The fact is that exercise, if done properly, benefits older people just as it does other age groups.

It's never too late to quit smoking. New research shows that no matter what your age, or no matter how long you've been smoking, if you stop now, you'll reduce your risk of cancer, chronic bronchitis, emphysema and even heart attacks.

The evidence is overwhelming. A recent study showed that the effects of smoking are at least partly reversible within one to five years of quitting — even among people who have smoked for decades. Another revealed a decline in the death rate for men over the age of 50 who stopped smoking. Quitting smoking is not easy and many people may need a program to help them quit, but more than 35 million Americans have done it. And there are more good reasons to quit every day.

Medicines can ease pain and discomfort and improve the way you feel. They can help speed recovery when you're ill. But medicines work only when used as directed and when coordinated properly with what you eat and drink and the other drugs you take. Because older people generally take more medicines than other age groups, they may have greater problems complying with their medicine schedules. Make sure you, your doctor and your pharmacist know as much as possible about all the different medications — perscription and nonprescription — that you take.

As people get older, they become more vulnerable to injuries. Many inuuries can be prevented by practicing proper safety habits and maintaining good physical health. The Centers for Disease Control estimate that 90 per cent of all injuries are preventable. The most common causes of injury among older adults are falls, auto-related accidents and burns. Safety-proof your home by providing adequate lighting and removing obstacles that might cause a fall. Install devices like handrails, grab bars and nonskid rugs. Be careful when cooking to avoid burns. Drive during the time of day when you feel most confident, with your safety belt fastened.

Healthy older people follow these simple words of advice. Why? For a better life.

Fargo VA Center Accredited By Joint Commission

Veterans Administration Medical center, Fargo, ND, has been awarded a three-year certificate of accreditation by the joint commission on accreditation of hospitals (JCAH) in both its hospital and long-term care programs, according to David C. Engstrom, M.D., center director. JCAH accreditation is evidence of the VA's efforts to provide quality health care.

Working Taxpayer Can Get Deduction For Buying IRA

Any working taxpayer can design his own savings plan for retirement and for 1986 get a tax deduction for the entire amount he deposits in his retirement account, up to a maximum of $2,000 per year, until he reaches age 70½.

The deducation is permitted whether or not the taxpayer itemizes because it is a direct deduction from gross income.

The retirement plan, commonly known as an IRA (Individual Retirement Account), will earn tax-deferred income. Amounts withdrawn are taxable. Withdrawals may begin at the age of 59½ or earlier if the owner is disabled or dies.

A special tax filing status called Head of Household is often overlooked by unmarried taxpayers who may benefit from a lower tax bracket if they qualify.

An unmarried taxpayer who provides a home for a son or daughter is one of the most common examples of taxpayers who qualify as Head of Household.

The child must reside in the home for over half of the year. Temporary absences of the child due to illness, school or vacations will not deprive the taxpayer of the Head of Household status, as long as the parent contnues to maintain that household during the child's absence.

H&R Block also points out that for the entire year, the taxpayer must pay over half of the costs of maintaining the home where the taxpayer and child live.

Household maintenance includes such expenditures as property taxes, mortgage interest, utility charges, rent, upkeep and repairs, domestic help, property insurance, and food. The cost of clothing, education, medical treatment, vacations, life insurance, and transportation are not included.

April 15 Deadline Date For Federal Crop Insurance

April 15 is the last day to apply for federal crop insurance for barley, beans, corn, flax, grain sorghum, oats, soybeans, sunflowers and wheat in Pennington county. According to Ray Eggleston, a representative of the Federal Crop Insurance corporation (FCIC).

Crop insurance covers unavoidable loss of production resulting from adverse weather conditions, wildlife, earthquake or fire.

"Three coverage levels (50, 65 or 75 per cent) are available for insurance protection. Additionally, FCIC offers three optional price elections for valuing production lost or damaged," Eggleston says.

Actual production history (APH) is available to producers of soybeans, wheat, barley and oats in addition to corn, grain sorghum and other crops. Producers of these crops may qualify for higher yield guarantees by proving their yield history. Rates have been developed to offer reduced premium for producers with above-average yields. "With the increased cost of producing a crop, it makes good sense to take a look at this new concept," Eggleston says.

To find out how crop insurance can fit individual needs, producers should contact a local, authorized agent. To select an agent, producers may check the list of agents at their local ASCS office.

Letters to the Editor

To The Editor:

In response to the letter concerning our water: A specialist should come to test the water. It's high time we as citizens stand up to see that our rights and concerns are considered.

I know many people go out of town for their drinking water. Others have invested in water purifiers. A lady I know uses a dialysis machine. She runs her water through five filters of her own before it can be used.

I have toured the water treatment plant and wish everyone would. Go to see how our water is prepared for our consumption. I know you'll have second thoughts.

An article was noticed by a relative of ours that stated, "Thief River Falls has one of the highest death rates of leukemia.". Could this be from our water?

It is our tax dollars that pay for the rebuilding and repair of the water treatment plant. Can well water be gotten cheaper? If so, why should we spend our money on this disgusting water, that I feel is not fit for drinking, swimmng or fishing?

R. Scholin

To The Editor:

I have long thought that for all of your insistence that letters to the editor cannot be anonymous, you print far too many letters with the names withheld. If the letters are not anonymous to you, they are to us, so it is difficult to understand what great advantage they have over strictly anonymous letters. The practice of withholding names may be legitimate at times, but too often it simply provides a forum for the gutless.

The letter by "Name Withheld On Request" in the March 30 paper makes the case better than I can. Shorn of all context and accountability by its anonymity, it refers to happenings that I and probably most everybody else know nothing about, and freely trashes everyone in the community.

For what purpose does "The Times" offer its skirts for the writer to hide behind as he insults us? It is meaningless except as insult, because there is no verifiable information in it. The only evaluation we can make of it is by its unbearably self-righteous tone. So why create the conditions for what is at best meaningless insult? If he wants to trash us by the light of day, that is fine, but then he is open to refutation . . . as he should be.

I did not want to reply to this particular letter, as it deserves no reply, but it is so clear an example of what we can get when people are not held responsible for their words. We do get more interesting letters when the people are not held accountable for them, but the interest in them is mitigated by the anonymity, and they mean less. And, mainly, the authors get off too easy. You only print letters if the author is known to you. Why don't we get to know them too?

Sincerely,, -s- Glen Davidson

(Editor's Note: Thank-you for your thoughts. We certainly agree that signed letters hold greater validity. We need to know the identity of writers because we are equally responsible for the content of the letters as the writers are. Readers do not share that responsibility. We have offered to withhold names as an encouragement for more opinion to be expressed. We always encourage those who send or bring letters to us to allow publication of the names. Some, for reasons of employment or community position, decline. We have opted for more letters and some anonymity. It is a decision open to question. Other readers' thoughts on the subject are invited.)

Assessments For East Greenwood Create Debate

per front foot, however, the letter stated, they would deem the proposal acceptable.

Many councilmen were concerned about setting a precedent of lowering the assessment below the generally practiced assessment level. Many viewed a lower assessment as an inequity; however, they noted that the street was used as a bypass by a large number of public vehicles, such as fire trucks and school buses, and for general public use. In addition to an inequity to property owners assessed at higher rates, the council was worried that it was an inequity to charge $28 per front foot to the few land owners who share a common benefit with those who won't be assessed.

The dilemma, stated by Mayor Carlson, was that the council was worried that it may end up in court whether it assigned either a $28 per front foot assessment or a $10 to $14 per front foot assessment.

Eleven property owners abutting the proposed street project received notices. Four property owners were in the audience at the public hearing. Several gave testimony that they thought the project should be completed, however, they believed the assessment was too high. Others at the hearing were land owners nearby who testified that the dust and problems from the road were enough to warrant the project. One stated, however, "It's a shame you cannot get people on both sides of the road to contribute."

Co-city Attorney Paul Ihle said a deferred assessment can be made on the properties outside the corporate limits of the city, but which benefit from the road. Ihle said, however, that he would have to research the issue to answer all of the legal questions. Those properties which possibly could be affected by a deferral include property owned by Les Snetting, Eugene Prestegaard and Duane McFarland.

The recommended improvements would consist of constructing an urban section roadway, 44 feet wide, designed to state aid standards for a nine-ton road. The construction would include excavation, granular backfill, storm sewer, four-inch subdrain tile, concrete curb and gutter, and a four-inch bituminous pavement.

The street is a Minnesota state aid street, and it will be paid for with state aid monies. These monies, Lindberg explained to the small group, are set aside from gas tax specifically for these state aid streets. The amount of money set aside to each city is based upon a number of factors which take into account population and need.

The amount set aside can be reduced by the state if the city does not meet its expected needs or uses the monies for projects under the state aid system. The city of Thief River Falls is currently in a position of being penalized for not using the funds.

In deciding how to best use the funds, the city looked at five possible projects. All but East Greenwood street were set aside for future projects.

The East Greenwood project was incorporated into the 1987 street and utility improvement project. The assessments will not be formally acted upon until a public hearing on the assessment roll is held.

Frustration from the East Greenwood street project carried over into a discussion of a problem at the city lagoon. Tempers flared when it was discussed how to best handle the odor problem that is expected to soon get worse when the ice fully melts.

Alderman Murphy proposed that the city use a temporary solution until an agreement can be worked out with Land O'Lakes turkey processing plant in Thief River Falls. The temporary solution would call for the use of non-reproductive bacteria. Jim Walker of Stewart and Walker said the treatment would consist of first a shock loading, which would cost $8,000, and then $900 to $1,000 per month to maintain it on a month to month basis until the real problem was solved. The bacteria would digest the high level of biodegradeable material currently being accepted into the lagoons.

Mayor Carlson said he was not against solving the problem, but said that it should not be at the expense of the taxpayers.

Murphy said a group is currently working with Land O'Lakes. He noted that they are very cooperative and a solution will be found. (Land O'Lakes is currently above its load level due to the recent expansion of its plant and increase in processing.)

James Walker said the lagoons are not currently operating beyond their volume level. He said the lagoons were designed to handle 1.4 million gallons per day. They are currently handling 1.1 million gallons per day. The problem, he said, which could also explain the bug problem in that area, is that the lagoons were not designed to handle the high load level for the length of time needed to decompose heavy bilogical mass load currently being experienced at the logoons.

The motion to use the temporary solution was accepted.

The council also passed a motion to enter into an agreement with the state to take traffic counts at designated points throughout Thief River Falls. The traffic counts will be conducted by the state and are a necessary factor in receiving state aid.

Anhydrous ammonia
the yield booster

Anhydrous ammonia has economic and agronomic advantages. It's versatile and has been used for years to increase yields and profits from small grains, corn, sorghums, potatoes, sugarbeets, vegetables and orchard crops.

At 82% nitrogen, it's the most concentrated of all nitrogen fertilizers. This means less weight to haul, handle and apply.

ENOUGH NITROGEN FERTILIZER FOR FIVE ACRES
ANHYDROUS AMMONIA 100 GALS. (515 lbs.) —or— 1,100 to 3,200 lbs. DRY MATERIAL

Anhydrous ammonia allows for a long application season from preplant in fall or spring to sidedress after the crop is growing. Choose an application method ranging from field cultivators to chisel plows, tool bars, plows, discs, or surface irrigation. Combine a tillage operation with ammonia application to save time and cost.

Injecting ammonia into the soil develops deeper roots to make maximum use of available moisture. Clay and organic matter hold ammonia nitrogen to reduce leaching.

Have your CENEX CropMonitor help you convert a tillage tool to an ammonia applicator. Anhydrous ammonia and application equipment are both available at CENEX.

Job Training Plan Is Updated For 1986-1987 Year

Annual update to the job training 1986-87 plan for the Northwest service delivery area describes the administration and program structure for the job training and job service programs to be provided in Kittson, Marshall, Norman, Pennington, Polk, Red Lake and Roseau counties.

These programs are created through the job training partnership act of 1982 and the Wagner-Peyser act and are governed locally by the Northwest Private Industry council as the representative of private business and the Northwest regional development commission's board of directors as the representative of local elected officials.

The plan establishes local goals and objectives in response to the Governor's goals and objectives. Major components of the plan will continue to include a major emphasis on positive work attitudes, and basic work skills in providing adult, in-high school, out-of-school, career education, summer youth services to economically disadvantaged persons. The job service office will continue providing placement services.

The plan covers a JTPA allocation of $810,000 for adult and youth programs, an allocation of $362,758 for summer youth programs, and a Wagner-Peyser allocation of $286,048.

The plan designates the Northwest private industry council as the administrative entity and grant recipient for the JTPA funds in the seven-county area. It designates the department of jobs and training as the program operator for the JTPA adult and out-of-school youth programs, the Region I career center as the program operator for area career services and Inter-County Community council as the program operator for the in-school youth and summer youth programs. The job service offices will continue to deliver the Wagner-Peyser programs through the Minnesota department of jobs and training.

The plan includes detailed descriptions of the service systems, administrative procedures, local service levels to population segments and budget breakdowns. The plan is written in response to requirements of the job training partnership act, the Wagner-Peyser act and the governor's job training council.

Anyone wishing to comment on this plan should contact Gail Butenhoff at the Northwest Private Industry Council, 102 North Broadway, Crookston, MN 56716 or by calling 1-800-262-6027.

Group Forming To Meet Senator On Property Taxes

Persons in the Thief River Falls and Pennington county area concerned with property taxes are invited to participate in a local chamber of commerce sponsored trip to St. Paul Monday to meet with Sen. Steven G. Novak of the senate taxes and tax laws committee.

A meeting with Sen. Novak, who chairs the property tax subcommittee of the full committee, has been arranged for 1:30 p.m. at his office. The group will meet first with the Minnesota chamber of commerce for a briefing and update session at 12:30 p.m. Following the meeting with Sen. Novak, the local contingent will view the legislature in session at 2 p.m.

Arrangements for the delegation are being handled by the legislative committee of the Thief River Falls chamber of commerce, chaired by Ev Ault. Although the trip is sponsored by the chamber, participation is not restricted to chamber members and anyone interested in participating is asked to call the chamber of commerce at 681-3720 by noon on Friday.

Details of the trip have not been completed, but it is possible the group will drive to St. Paul and return the same day. Further information will be available at the chamber later this week.

Appeal Filed To Order Establishing Elm Lake Project

Appeal of the order establishing the Elm Lake controlled impoundment project by the Red Lake Watershed district board has been filed by Grand Plain, Agdar and Moylan townships in eastern Marshall county with the district court in Warren.

Filed by attorney Donald J. Aandal of Thief River Falls in behalf of the townships, the appeal challenges determination of: "(1) The amount of benefits determined; (2) the amount of damages allowed; (3) the effect of the substantial rights of the landowners; and (4) the order of the board of managers authorizing to establish a project and improvements on a whole or in part."

The watershed district board established the project on March 12 by a four to three vote. Included in the approximately $1.5 million project would be a water impoundment on public land west of the present Lost River pool along Branch 200 of Judicial Ditch 11, installation of a control structure and enlargement of the channel upstream. Proposed benefits are downstream flood control and wildlife habitat improvement, primarily for waterfowl.

Nearly all of the project cost is to be provided by Ducks Unlimited, a private non-profit agancy which seeks to improve waterfowl production in Canada and the United States.

Opponents to the project have cited increased waterfowl depredation of crops, reduced drainage upstream and depression of land prices as major reasons for opposition to the project.

Standardization Of Grain Grading Is Purpose Of Bill

A bill to standardize grain grading is moving through the Minnesota House of Representatives. Rep. Wally Sparby, Thief River Falls, a coauthor of the bill, reports the bill has passed a subcommittee and is currently in the full House agriculture committee.

"Testimony in committee has brought out that the same wheat tested in separate elevators often results in varied protein percentage readings," Sparby said. "Sometimes the variance is as much as three points. With discounts up to 40 cents per point, this is quite a hefty price difference.

"I don't believe these discrepancies are intentional, but we can't ignore such an inequity," Sparby added.

The legislation calls for the Minnesota department of agriculture to do a test in cases where there is any dispute on the proper grade, moisture, protein content, dockage or other pricing factors of grain. Results of the tests run by the department would be binding on both seller and buyer and would be used to establish market price of the grain. It would be up to the buyer or seller to request testing of any of the factors that determine price.

"Grain testing inequities and disputes over what factors affect the price of grain have been problems for a number of years," Sparby said. "This standardization bill is a step toward resolving some of the problems."

Fertilize Lawns When Grass Begins To Grow Actively

Helpful tips for a beautiful lawn:

Fertilize your lawn when the grass begins to grow actively. Select a fertilizer that approximates a four-one-two analysis. Fertilizers that supply four parts of nitrogen to every one part of phosphorus and two parts of potassium generally benefit lawns most.

If the lawn was fertilized late last fall, fertilizing can wait until June to fertilize again. This message is brought to you by the University of Minnesota' Pennington county extension office.

Goodridge Fire Hall Open House Set On Saturday

and the trucks and equipment were moved into the cleaned, remodeled and painted building in July. A 1,800 gallon water tank was built in the hall to permit rapid filling of the city's fire trucks through a six-inch pipe. The city has a water system but no water tower so water pressure and storage have been a problem.

Firemen will be meeting on a monthly basis and training will be emphasized at these sessions, fire chief Hanson said. Plans are also being made to have firemen in attendance at fire schools as the department attempts to upgrade its readiness for fire protection and emergency response.

The department has three fire trucks — a 1977 Chevrolet two-ton truck with 1,500 gallon tank; a 1976 Dodge one-ton truck with 250 gallon tank; and a 1965 Ford two-ton truck with 1,000 gallon tank. Over the years the department has also accumulated a large amount of equipment including ladders, hoses, belts, extinguishers, coats, helmets, boots, gloves, tools and other items. A recent acquisition has been an oxygen apparatus provided by the Goodridge Area Development association.

There are seven fire phones located throughout the Goodridge community in an attempt to provide 24-hour service by the volunteer firemen. Phones are located in the fire hall, at the Goodridge Cooperative Creamery association and in five private homes.

Operation of the department is supervised by a joint powers board created to facilitate the performance of the joint powers contract. The board includes one member from the city of Goodridge, appointed by the city council; one member from each of the participating townships, appointed by the town boards; and associate member from the volunteer firemen who is not a voting member. The board meets quarterly on the Third Wednesday of February, May, August and November.

Rodney Wayne of Grand Plain township is vice chairman of the joint powers board with Jim Berg of Cloverleaf township as vice chairman. Other members include Irving Easthouse, Goodridge; Dean Kaushagen, Agdar; John Lovly, Goodridge township; Frank Roisland, Kratka; Kevin Tharaldson, Highlanding; Merlin Drangstveit, Moylan; Curt Sigerud, Reiner; and David Sjulestad, Star. Marge Iverson is secretary.

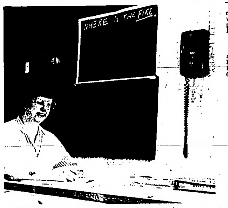
FIRE TRUCK FILLING can be accomplished in minutes in the Goodridge fire hall through the use of this 1,800 gallon tank and six-inch pipe. Goodridge has a city water system but no water tower and filling a tanker truck in a hurry has been a problem. The tank was built in the new fire hall to permit firemen to refill the 1,500-gallon tanker truck in less than 10 minutes. The 40x76 fire hall is the former Manderud Standard station in the center of Goodridge. It has been cleaned and painted and will be open for public viewing Saturday from 10:30 a.m. to 3 p.m.



SECRETARY of the Goodridge Area Fire department, Marge Iverson, makes notes in the record book in the Goodridge fire hall. Volunteers and members of the fire department have cleaned and painted the former Manderud Standard station in Goodridge for use as a fire hall. Open house for the public will be held Saturday from 10:30 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Seek Sponsors To Operate Summer Nutrition Program

When schools close for the summer, many children in low-income areas of Minnesota who take part in the national school lunch program will continue to be eligible for nutritious meals and snacks.

But the food will reach children in need only if the state finds enough qualified sponsor groups for the summer food service program.

Minnesota department of education needs more qualified agencies to sponsor the program. To be a sponsor, an organization must be a public or nonprofit private school food authority; a public or nonprofit private residential summer camp; or a unit of local, municipal, county or state government.

Sponsor groups will receive training and technical assistance to start and operate the program, as well as U.S. department of agriculture payments for meals and administrative costs. Potential sponsors must apply by May 20.

"It is important that these children get nutritious meals not only during the school year, but also during the summer," Charles Matthew, child nutrition director said. "I encourage eligible organizations to apply."

Application forms and details are available from the child nutrition section of the Minnesota Department of Education, 951 Capitol Square, St Paul 55101.

Arnold Carriere, regional manager for the clinic, said the radiology service and eye clinic will operate as part of the Falls Clinic in Thief River Falls which became a division of Dakota Clinic last July. Dr. Ramsay will continue to be located in the Falls Mall, which he owns, and will be joined on July 2 by Dr. Robert Dicken, a former family practitioner in Thief Rver Falls, who is completing his specialty training in ophthalmology at the University of Minnesota.

State Patrol To Concentrate On Youth Programs

Safety education officers of the Minnesota state patrol will again concentrate on programs for youth this spring during appearances at schools and other community functions in the state.

Sgt. Cliff Koski, new coordinator for the safety education officers, pointed out this is "The Year of the Child". The patrol's continuing emphasis is on bicycle safety, pedestrian safety, school bus safety, driver education, alcohol and other drug use and abuse programs.

"With this goal in mind, I hope to see more people in grades kindergarten through 12, pre-school, college and vo-tech get the safety information they need to have a safer year in Minnesota," Koski said.

Another aspect of the patrol's safety education program is help in training members of the school safety patrols. Other topics include pedestrian safety, drunk driving, motorcycle safety and passenger restraints. "We also teach defensive driving courses and have had many senior citizens attend recently to brush up on accident prevention skills," Koski said.

To schedule a program with the patrol, contact Cpl. Clifton Mattson at Thief River Falls.

Sparby Says He Won't Support Seat Belt Fine

Perennial topic of fining people who don't wear seat belts in their cars is back in the legislature again this session, according to Rep. Wally Sparby of Thief River Falls.

A bill that will allow law enforcement officers to issue tickets carrying $25 fines to drivers who don't wear seat belts has passed the Senate. It will be considered in the House of Representatives judiciary committee this week.

"This is a good example of the government treading over people's personal rights. I don't support this legislation," Rep. Sparby said.

"Last year, we joined 24 other states in making a law that requires drivers and their front seat passengers to wear seat belts. Though some people think it's silly to pass a law without a penalty for violators, the law is undeniably working. More people in this state are wearing seat belts since that law became effective last July. We don't need a fine — the law is already doing its job without it.

"Few people will dispute statistics that prove seat belts save lives. Most people agree it's smart to use them. But I think there's a strong feeling among our citizens that to wear a seat belt or not is their own decision and the government should not be in the business of telling them what to do," he added.

"If we allow the government to step in here and make a law just because it's good for us, where will it stop? Will we start seeing bills that forbid us from eating salt or drinking alcohol because they're bad for us? Or wearing high heels because we can break our ankles? We don't pass laws that prohibit smoking, and smoking is one of those indisputable bad habits that causes death and disease to thousands every year. We should treat seat belts with the same legislative restraint," Sparby said.

"I think law enforcement officers are busy enough without having to scrutinize drivers to see if everyone has pulled their seat belt shoulder straps. I'd much rather have our officers use their time for more important duties: investigating crimes, answering emergency accident calls, slowing down speeders and tracking down reckless or drunk drivers.

"Surely, we legislators can think of better ways to spend the voters' tax dollars than on enforcing this kind of law," he concluded.

Social Security Will Give Report On Earnings Total

Picture this: The time has finally come; you're almost 65 and after 40 years of hard work, you're ready to retire. You head for your local social security office to apply for benefits. But when you learn of the amount of your monthly benefit check, the amount is much less than you anticipated. What happened?

It could have been any number of things. Perhaps you didn't give your employer your correct social security number. Or maybe your employer made a mistake when he reported your income. Then again, maybe it was the social security administration which credited your earnings to someone else's social security record.

Sheer numbers tell the story. The social security administration has well over 100 million social security contributors on file and each year receives some 200 million reports from employers and self-employed persons.

But not to worry...the Minnesota Society of CPAs advises that there are are a number of simple, preventive steps you may take to protect the benefits you are entitled to.

First, always exercise care when reporting your social security number to your employer. Keep your social security card handy and refer to it when supplying your number to an employer. If you lose your card, contact your socil security office for a replacement.

Another good check is to verify the correctness of the W-2 you receive from your employer. Be sure your name, address and social security number appear correctly. The box marked "FICA Wages" should show the total earnings from which your employer withheld social security taxes. This is the amount of earnings that is entered on your social security record.

If any of the information on your W-2 is not correct, you must immediately notify your employer who should issue a corrected W-2. It's a good idea to keep all pay slips, check stubs and W-2 forms as proof of your contributions.

As a further precaution, you should periodically request a check of your social security record, a measure the social security administration itself recommends you do at least every three years. Just call, visit or write you local social security office and ask for form SSA-7004PC, "Request for Statement of Earnings." The form is simple — you fill in your name, address, social security number, date of birth, signature and, if applicable, any other name or number you may have used.

As an added feature, you may also request an estimate of the monthly benefit you will be entitled to when you reach 65 by writing on the card, "Please furnish benefit estimate." Of course, this estimate will only be based on the amount of earnings you currently have credited. So if your retirement is a long way off, this information isn't going to be very meaningful.

In six to eight weeks after mailing your card to the social security administration, you'll receive a computerized statement showing all the earnings that have been credited up to the date stated. There is generally a one to two-year lag in posting entries. The amounts credited for the three or four most recent years will be shown as separate yearly totals, while the amounts earned in previous years are shown as a lump sum. All earnings are added and shown as a grand total.

Compare the earnings shown for the most recent years with the amounts reported on your W-2's or self-employment records. If you suspect an error, contact your social security office immediately. In most cases, the official time limit for correcting mistakes on your earnings record is three years, three months and 15 days after the year in which the wages were paid or self-employed income earned. Although there are exceptions to these time limits, it is in your best interest to check your record on a regular basis and promptly notify the social security administration of any errors.

It will be up to you to provide the records necessary to substantiate your claim of an error. The social security administration will need your employment records including names of employers, dates of employment and wages received. You'll be asked to show those W-2 forms you-ve been saving.

By following these simple measures you can ensure that, when the time comes, you get the benefits you are entitled to have.

With 97 per cent of all workers said to have earnings covered by social security, almost every worker in America is a consumer of social security. In recognition of National Consumers Week, April 19 to 25, the American Institute of Certified Public accountants, in cooperation with the United States office of consumer affairs, has prepared a pamphlet which answers many common questions about social security. For your free copy, write to the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants at 1211 Avenue of the Americas, New York, NY 10036-8775.

REPORT

From The

MINNESOTA HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

by Rep. Wallace Sparby
District 1B

Small industries and Main street retailers in rural areas of Minnesota are feeling more and more of the sting of the distressed farm economy. In addition rising property taxes caused by the shift of the tax burden from devalued farmland to commercial or industrial property is pinching them even more. Some find it hard to weather the storm as their business decreases and their taxes go up.

I am one of a group of rural legislators who is working to see that the legislature addresses the tax issue by providing some form of property tax relief for small businesses. We also believe the legislature should take a look at other government action that impacts on the ability of small businesses to stay competitive in a very difficult market situation.

I have introduced a bill creating a legislative study commission on government and business competition to study and report on the effect of state and local laws and regulation on the competitive environment of small businesses in the state. The bill has already been passed by the commerce committee and is now before the governmental operations committee.

This commission would also study the impact of nonprofit tax exempt organizations that compete with small private companies, and the effect that competitive state-regulated industries and institutions have on small business. The commission is to make a report to the legislature by March 1, 1988. It may recommend legislation it considers necessary to reduce unfair competition between small businesses, state regulated industries and institutions and nonprofit tax exempt organizations.

If this legislation is enacted into law, the commission would be composed of 11 members, including legislators and representatives of small business, nonprofit tax exempt organizations and state regulated industry or institution.

I am urging support of the bill because I believe it is contingent on state government to make every effort to reduce the problems faced by our small business community. Small businesses provide a large percentage of Minnesota's jobs, so if we want to promote economic growth and provide work opportunities it is important that small business profitability be restored.

One of the meetings will be held from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at Bemidji, April 22, at the Holiday Inn.

Who Is Going To Protect Your Crop Investment After April 15?

It can be a long time from spring to fall. And if the weather isn't cooperative — or is downright bad — the days and weeks can seem mighty long.

In times like these, it can be a big comfort to know that — come what may — your crop investment is protected.

But there's only one way you can be certain it's protected: By carrying crop insurance.

And there's only one time to do it: Soon.

Because after April 15, it will be too late to apply for insurance.*

*April 15 is the deadline to apply for crop insurance on most spring planted crops in most areas. Check with an agent for information about insurance for the crops you produce.

Tax Filing Extension May Give Taxpayer Extra Time

It was on April 15th in the year 1912 that the deluxe ocean liner, the Titanic, sunk just hours after colliding with an iceberg off the banks of Newfoundland. If the approaching April 15th deadline for tax filing is making you feel like your ship is about to sink, consider the following advice from the Minnesota Society of CPAs.

You can get an automatic, no-questions-asked, four-month filing extension by submitting Form 4868. This will push your filing deadline back to August 15. Form 4868 — "Application for Automatic Extension of Time to File U.S. Individual Tax Return" — allows you to postpone filing your return for four months. Take note that the key term here is filing — not paying. While the IRS allows you an extension for filing your completed tax forms at a later date, any tax that is estimated to be due must be paid at the time you file for an extension.

But if your ship is running out of steam, an extension may be just the SOS you need to keep your head above water. Many people tend to rush through their return at the last minute losing sleep and often making costly mistakes.

To apply for an extension for your 1986 return, you must file Form 4868 by April 15, 1987. (If you file a fiscal Form 1040, Form 4868 must be filed by the regular due date of your return.) The four-month extension is automatic upon filing Form 4868; you will not receive a reply from the Internal Revenue service. Incidentally, if you request an extension, you may not later ask the IRS to figure your taxes.

It's easy to navigate your way through Form 4868 — a simple, one-page, seven-question form. You need not give the IRS any reason for requesting an extension. Again, what you will have to di is estimate your tax liability for 1986 and pay any tax due when you file the application for extension.

It is most important that you carefully calculate the amount of tax due. If you underestimate your taxes, you will have to pay interest on the unpaid amount. And, if your unpaid taxes exceed 10 per cent of your total tax bill, be prepared to pay penalty. Generally, this penalty amounts to ½ to one per cent of your unpaid taxes for each month, or part of a month that the tax is not paid. The penalty is limited to 25 per cent of your unpaid taxes.

What happens if your four-month extension deadline is approaching and you're still treading water? Well, if you have a good rason, you may be able to get an additional two-month extension — but only if you have a very good reason. To apply for an additional extension, you may send a letter or file Form 2688 — "Application for Additional Extension of Time to File U.S. Individual Tax Return." This extension is not automatically granted, so you should request the extension early enough so that if refused, you will still be able to file on time. (Except in undue hardship cases, Form 2688 or a request by letter will not be accepted unless you have first used Form 4868 for an automatic extension.)

To apply for an additional extension you must give the following information:

— The reason for requesting the extension;

— The tax year to which the extension applies;

— The length of time needed for the extension;

— Whether another extension of time to file has already been granted for this tax year.

The Internal Revenue service asks that you clearly describe the reason for your delay. Incomplete reasons such as "illness" or "practitioner too busy" will not be accepted without adequate explanation. Clearly explain reasons and attach supporting information to the form or letter.

In addition to personal sickness or injury, or a death or a serious illness in your immediate family, some acceptable reasons drawn from IRS proceedings and court cases, include the following:

— A taxpayer with a substantial number (approxmimtely 200) of security transactions during the taxable year did not have enough time to gather and analyze all the required information.

— A taxpayer with a complicated deduction problem concerning medical expenses was having a study by his tax advisors.

— A man who invested in oil properties received information from the operators too late to complete his tax return by the due date.

— Taxpayers whose records were destroyed by fire or by other casualty received added extensions.

If your application for an additional extension is approved, you will be notified by the IRS. Attach this notification to your return when you file. If your application is not approved, you must file by the due date of the automatic extension.

Planning a cruise around the world? If you are a U.S. citizen or resident and are not in the United States or Puerto Rico on April 15, 1987, you are allowed an automatic extension until June 15, 1987, both to file your return and to pay any taxes due for 1986. If you file a joint return, only one spouse need be out of the country on April 15, 1987, for this automatic extension to apply. If two spouses file separate returns, only the spouse out of the country is entitled to the automatic extension.

You do not even have to file a form for this extension. But if you use this automatic extension, you must attach a statement to your return when you file, explaining that you were out of the United States or Puerto Rico on the due date of your return. It's a good idea to have some concrete proof of this fact, should the IRS ask. You do get an additional two months to file and pay, but when you file, if your return shows that taxes are owed, you will pay interest and possible penalties on the unpaid balance.

If you are eligible for this automatic extension and find that you're not yet afloat and still need additional time, you may file for an additional two-month extension by submitting Form 4868 on or before June 15. You should indicate that you are filing under the special traveling-abroad status. When you file Form 4868, you will be required to estimate your tax liability and pay the amount due.

CPAs suggest that if it looks like you might have trouble meeting the April 15 deadline, a filing extension can bail you out.

Don't Eat Big Lake Trout From Lake Superior

Eight states in the northeastern and north central U.S. have issued a joint fish consumption advisory for the Great Lakes — including restrictions on lake trout taken from Lake Superior.

The advisory cautions Lake Superior anglers not to eat large trout more than 30 inches in length — whether they were taken from Minnesota, Wisconsin or Michigan waters. The restriction is based on test results — from both Minnesota and Wisconsin — indicating that the larger lake trout tend to contain unacceptably high levels of polychlorinated biphenyls (PCBs).

The advisory also notes that some states have recommended restrictions on lake trout smaller than 30 inches — but those restrictions vary from state to state, and apply to the waters of the state issuing the recommendations.

In its 1986 fish consumption advisory, the Minnesota department of health recommended limited restrictions on the consumption of lake trout 20-25 inches long, taken from the Split Rock and Grand Marais areas, and 25-30 inches long, taken from the French river area. The department's advisory is now being revised for 1987.

The joint Great Lakes advisory was based on the combined results of testing conducted by state agencies in each of the participating states. Minnesota's testing program is a joint effort of the health department, the pollution control agency and the department of natural resources.

The states issuing the advisory are Minnesota, Wisconsin, Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Ohio, Pennsylvania and New York. Those states had earlier agreed to develop a joint fish consumption advisory for the Great Lakes in time for the 1987 fishing season.

The eight participating states were required to produce the advisory under the terms of the Great Lakes toxic substances control agreement, which was signed by the governors of those states on May 21, 1986.

SPRING CLEAN-UP can provide an opportunity for everyone to pitch in and help. Two-year-old Nicholas and three-year-old Christopher Robbins help their mother, Betty Robbins and Nathan Olson rake and bag the winter's accumulation of leaves along North Main avenue in Thief River Falls. A number of local residents took advantage of the weather's sudden swing into spring Monday to do some serious yard clean-up. Temperatures have climbed into the neighborhood of 70 degrees the past few days, giving hope that real spring weather may be here to stay.

Selective Service Matching Reveals Student Grants

Names of 904 individuals who have received federal Pell grants — student financial assistance — have been referred to the department of education by the Selective Service system. They were identified by a computer matching program as possible lawbreakers, and will be ineligible for additional student financial aid if found not to be in compliance with the registration requirement. This referral was only a partial submission of names; there are plans to make additional referrals in the future.

Through the computer matching program between the department of education and Selective Service, 37,000 men who either applied for or received Pell grants have registered with selective service as of March 19. Their identities were discovered by Selective Service through a computer match of department of education Pell grant applicant and recipient lists and Selective Service registrant files. It cannot be said how many of those men had been in violation of the registration requirement when they applied for or received a grant.

Students whose names did not match a record in the registration database received letters informing them they were suspected nonregistrants, and would be considered ineligible for federal financial assistance if they are required to register and have not done so.

The sharing of records between education and Selective Service departments stems from a provision of Public Law 97-252. An amendment to the military Selective Service for student financial aid under Title IV of the higher education act. The rationale behind this amendment was that young men unwilling to risk being called to serve the nation in a future crisis should not be allowed to benefit from federally funded student aid programs.

According to Selective Service acting director Wil Ebel, young men who are 18 through 25 years old, must be registered. There are few exceptions. Ebel reports that over 96 per cent are complying with the law.

Failure to register is a felony. Besides being ineligible for student grants and loans, nonregistrants forfeit eligibility for appointment to federal employment and job training programs. They also risk criminal prosecution and if convicted, face a fine up to $250,000 or a jail term of up to five years, or both.

Soo Line Sells Division To Wis. Central Railroad

Soo Line corporation has reached agreement for the sale of its Lake States transportation division to the newly formed Wisconsin Central Ltd.

The Lake States division conducts rail operations over approximately 2,000 miles of railroad located in Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan and Illinois. Soo Line had announced last January that it was seeking bids for the property.

Terms of the agreement have not been released, but the Soo indicated that it presently estimates the transaction will result in a one-time, after-tax loss of $8 to $15 million.

After the sale of Lake States, the Soo will remain a major transportation competitor in the midwest, operating approximately 5,700 miles of track. In 1986, Soo generated $613 million in transportation revenues.

Arrest Bemidji Man For Theft From Ad Sales

Duane Bauman, 52, Bemidji, has been arrested and charged with theft over $250 after Thief River Falls police and Pennington county sheriff's department investigated allegations that Bauman, operating under the name of Service Publishing Company, sold ads to several local and area businessmen and never had them published as agreed to. Investigator Dennis Kiesow at the law enforcement center in Thief River Falls said Bauman was arrested in Bemidji.

According to the law enforcement records, Bauman told businesses sometime last October, that he would put the ads in a shopping list to be distributed by Northland Foods in Thief River Falls by the first of the year. Bauman had no connection with Northland Foods other than an agreement that Northland Foods would distribute the list for him. The ads were never published.

1987 TRF High School Track . . .

Girls Open Season Thursday

Led by tri-captains Cindy Kruta, Christy Puetz and Peggy Cruz, the Thief River Falls girls will open their 1987 high school track season Thursday by participating in the annual Northwest Invitational indoor meet beginning at 4:30 p.m. at the Winter Shows Building in Crookston.

Head coach Tom Schafer will start the spring with a young, inexperienced team. There are no seniors on the 28-member squad that includes seven juniors, six sophomores and 15 freshmen.

Returning letter winners include juniors Tammy Ortloff, Kruta, Puetz, and Cruz, along with freshmen Rhonda Rothschadl and Lynn Mueller.

Rest of the squad features juniors Rachael Ness, Dawn Numedahl and Loralee Iverson; sophomores Val Noel, Diana Olson, Mishaun Johnson, Kris Koch, Michelle Comstock, and Courtney Mostrom-Ose; plus freshmen Christy Holthusen, Jenny Johnson, Lynnae Broten, Stacy Breuer, Kristi Dillon, Nicky Hanestad, Julie May, Kim Magner, Jenny Lindberg, Stephanie Breiland, Leigh Solheim, Alice Dunning, and Neena Arnold.

"With so many freshmen, we're obviously going to have a tougher year team-wise," acknowledged Schafer. "But I've been very pleased with the way the girls have been working in practice. The juniors are doing an excellent job making up for the lack of senior leadership, and if this freshman group can stay together, they're going to be tough."

Cruz, Kruta nd Puetz are expected to be the Prowlers' top point-producers this spring. They're all veteran runners. Cruz already ranks No. 4 on the Prowlers' all-time career scoring chart with 239 points, trailing only past performers Stacie Kruta (425.75), Michelle Puetz (328.75) and Christy Mueller (280.50). Cindy Kruta is No. 7 on the same list with 169 points.

Puetz, Kruta, Cruz, and Mueller were 1986 Region 8AA qualifiers for the Prowlers. Puetz and Cruz made it in the 800 meter run, Kruta qualified in the 300 meter hurdles, and Mueller competed in the 3200 meter run. Puetz, Kruta and Cruz, plus graduated Michelle Puetz, also formed Region 8AA-qualifying 1600 and 3200 meter relay teams. In fact, the 3200 meter foursome set a North Sub-Region 8AA record in winning with a 9:48.23.

Mueller set a school record as an eighth grader with a 12:01.00 outdoor 3200 meter run.

Those people are expected to do well again this spring. Points for the bulk of the younger runners will be tougher to come by, admitted Schafer. "We're just going out every meet trying to turn in our best times," he explained.

1986-87 TRF Hockey Team Review . . .

Prowlers Have Balanced Scoring

Thief River Falls made significant progress during the 1986-87 high school hockey season, according to head coach Wendell Grand of the Prowlers, who watched his team recover from a 4-9 start to finish 10-12-1 overall.

"We think we progressed as the season went along," said Grand. "We had to deal with some tough losses early in the year. We didn't get many breaks early on. It was a credit to the kids that they hung in there really well."

Thief River Falls' tough-luck 3-7 start included three one-goal losses (one of them in overtime), and three two-goal setbacks (one of them a one-goal game that was inflated by an open net goal with just four seconds left).

Despite the mounting frustration that came with the series of close losses, the Prowlers didn't let the disappointment affect their approach to the game, said Grand. "The kids handled it surprisingly well. They had a good attitude," he explained.

A 5-2 win over Grand Forks Central started the season on the right foot for the Prowlers, but they lost their next three starts to Grand Forks Red River 5-3, East Grand Forks 5-3 (the open net job) and Bemidji 4-1. There was a 5-0 victory over Lake of the Woods to snap the losses, but then came tough back-to-back one-goal setbacks at the hands of Fergus Falls 2-1 and Roseau 4-3 in overtime.

Thief River Falls bounced back to beat Hallock 3-1, but lost for the first time ever to Moorhead 2-1 and fell to Crookston 4-2. The Prowlers came up with a 6-3 win over Fargo South and played a highly-regarded Warroad team on even terms before surrendering a 4-3 decision. But a 6-3 loss to Bemidji put Thief River Falls at the 4-9 level on Jan. 24.

Things finally turned in the Prowlers' favor down the stretch when they went 4-2-1 and rebuilt a tarnished reputation as an upper-echelon Section 8 team by beating East Grand Forks 5-3, Moorhead 3-2, Detroit Lakes 5-0 and Fergus Falls while trying Roseau 2-2 in overtime and losing only to Crookston 5-2.

The regular season ended with a 6-2 loss to Warroad, but the Prowlers beat Hallock 4-2 in North Sub-Section 8 eliminations, then stunned No. 4 seeded Bemidji 4-3 in a double-overtime thriller in the Section 8 tournament quarterfinals behind the 62-save performance of junior goalie Shayne Anderson.

"The win over Bemidji has to be considered the highlight of the year for us," confirmed Grand.

But No. 1-seeded Warroad awaited the Prowlers in the semifinals, and the eventual champion Warriors were at the top of their game in squashing Thief River Falls' upset hopes 11-1.

"We'd like to forget that last one," admitted Grand. "Warroad played very, very well that night, and we didn't. The combination was disastrous for us."

Anderson was a key to the Prowlers' success as he established himself as one of the top goalies in Section 8. If nothing more, he was certainly the busiest goalie among those who vied for that honor as he faced 602 shots in the just-over 22 games in which he played. He stopped 525 of them as he played every minute, save for a relief appearance by senior Nathaniel Peres in the Feb. 10 shutout of Detroit Lakes. Anderson carried a 3.37 goals-against average.

Offensively, the Prowlers' attack wasn't particularly high scoring, but it was balanced. Senior Scott Novak, who missed part of the schedule because of a leg injury before returning to the line-up for Section 8 play, led the team with 29 points. He scored 12 goals and added 17 assists. Close behind on the Thief River Falls scoring chart were junior defenseman Bill Dicken with 25 points (7-18), senior forward Bob Geatz with 24 points (16-8) Bob Geatz with 24 points (16-8), and senior forward Blair Lund with 22 points (11-11). Geatz' 16 goals was tops on the team.

Dave Hanson Wins Title At State Archery Tournament

Dave Hanson of Thief River Falls, who just started competitive target shooting the middle of January, completed a quick rise to the top of the sport Sunday by winning the men's freestyle unlimited division at the 1987 Minnesota State Archery Association state tournament in Mankato.

Hanson, who has hunted deer with a bow the past two years, joined the Thief River Falls Archery League for its indoor target competition this winter. He enjoyed a measure of success, decided to participate in a state tournament-qualifying regional shoot at Bemidji in February, and eventually wound up joining the likes of Tom Lykken, Rick Bruggeman and Tom Molskness as Thief River Falls winners of the top state tournament class title.

There were 52 archers state-wide who competed in the state tournament-qualifying regional meets, where the top 20 scores advanced to Mankato. Hanson was the lone Thief River Falls archery who opted for the regional shoot.

State tournament competition was a 60-arrow shoot in groups of five. Hanson and three others finished the regulation round with perfect 300 scores. Ties were broken by counting the number of times the archers hit the 1½-inch X-ring circle in the middle of the target. Hanson was 49-for-60; the runner-up finisher was 47-for-60; third place was 46-for-60; and fourth place was 45-for-60.

Hanson said he knew he was among the leaders when he stepped to the line for his final five shots at the target 20 yards away, adding to the pressure. "Those last five arrows were the toughest five arrows I've ever shot," he acknowledged. But he responded to the challenge by putting four of them in the X-ring, a fact he was made aware of by his wife, Georgie, who served as his spotter and helped Dave with any sighting adjustments that had to be made.

"It was quite an experience," said Hanson, recalling the state tournament format that had up to 125 archers at the line for each five-shot round.

Hanson, who was a member of the Thief River Falls League city shoot champion Bullseye Bowmen team, also won tournament titles at Thief River Falls and Fosston this winter, and recently was a third place finisher in a tournament at Grand Forks.

TRF Spring Sports Seasons Underway For 1987 Prowlers

Spring high school sports season is underway for some Thief River Falls teams, while the rest of the Prowlers continue preseason preparations for the 1987 openers later this month.

Boys track and boys tennis teams already made their season debuts. Girls track team starts its schedule Thursday at Crookston's Northwest Indoor (the boys will also be there).

Three other openers have later starting dates. The girls will start their golf season April 21 with a home dual against Crookston; the baseball team will open April 23 at Ada; and the boys start their golf schedule April 24 at Fergus Falls.

One new head coach for the Prowlers this spring is Tracey Wensloff, a Roseau native who succeeds Mark Lundin at the helm of the baseball program. Rest of the Thief River Falls spring sports head coaches include Whitey Olson, tennis; Tom Schafer, girls track; Tim Olson, boys track; Al Buhl, girls golf; and Dick Tyler, boys golf.

from Julie Tunheim,

Practice and hard work have paid off for Kristina Super as her free throw shooting abilities have provided her and her family with much excitement and many happy memories. Her latest accomplishment of placing second in the regional-national hoop shoot competition came on Saturday, March 21, in Iowa City, IA. The road to this final competition consisted of winning competitions at the local, district, and state levels in Thief River Falls, Bemidji, and Hutchinson.

Kristina's family has been involved by accompanying her on each weekend trip, as well as providing her with help and encouragement in practice and competition. As little brother T.J. so aptly put it, "Krissi won us another motel again!" But the last contest was by far the most exciting. The family flew on Northwest Airlines from Thief River Falls Friday morning to Iowa City.

Contestants and family were treated like royalty as the Elks Association provided them with a get-acquainted party, games, a breakfast banquet, poolside pizza party, and an awards banquet. It was a fun-filled weekend, but even more importantly, competitive spirit was enlightened, and new friends were made.

Krissi placed second in the competition, shooting 20 out of 25 free throws. The winner in her age group was Chinamphone Sengtavanh of Iowa who made 21 of 25. Other contestants were state champs from Wisconsin and Illinois.

Krissi, as well as the rest of her family, has received many gestures of good luck and encouragement in forms of cards, gifts, banners, phone calls, school parties and personal conversations.

As mother KayDell said, "Krissi is so young to comprehend all this, but we feel even more fortunate than ever to live in Middle River, where everyone has been so kind and thoughtful, and in years to come the realization will become more clear to Krissi also. We will never forget the feeling of driving into Middle River and seeing all the banners inside and out, the flowers waiting for Krissi, and experiencing all of the excitement shared by so many people. It's just another example of a 'super' close-knit community."

Pirates Tip Prowlers In Tennis Opener

A couple of close decisions fell in Crookston's favor Tuesday as the Pirates edged Thief River Falls 4-3 in the Prowlers' 1987 boys high school tennis season opener at the Grand Forks Tennis Center.

Thief River Falls came up with wins at No. 1 singles, where junior Bret Haugen defeated Keith Johnson 7-6, 6-0; at No. 3 singles, where junior Grant Larson outlasted Corey Sondrol 3-6, 7-5, 7-6; and at No. 2 doubles, where freshmen Jay Opdahl and Kevin Holmes beat Matt Derosier and Adrian Pulkrabek 4-6, 6-3, 6-1.

But the Prowlers lost close matches at No. 2 singles, where the Pirates' Todd Kreibich rallied from a 4-3 third-set deficit to edge sophomore Kent Holmes 1-6, 6-0, 6-4; and at No. 1 doubles, where Mike Andringa and Scott Sanders came up with a three-set 6-3, 1-6, 7-5 victory over Thief River Falls juniors John Dondelinger and Troy Hanestad.

Crookston also won at No. 4 singles, where Jon Olson downed freshman Tom Brouse 6-3, 6-2; and at No. 3 doubles, where Mark Andringa and Troy Fischer stopped junior Troy Peterson and freshman Jeremy Anderson 6-3, 7-6.

Despite the loss, Thief River Falls coach Whitey Olson said it was a fine season-opening outing for the Prowlers. "Overall, I was very pleased with the way our kids played," he said. "They went out and played hard. Another point here or there and we could have won 5-2. It was a good match."

A Crookston line-up with five seniors and a Thief River Falls line-up with four freshmen could have been a factor in the match, acknowledged Olson. The Prowlers don't have a senior on the team this spring.

Thief River Falls will be in East Grand Forks Thursday where the Prowlers will face the Green Wave at 2 p.m. and will take on Moorhead at 3:30. They will be in Bemidji Monday for a 2 p.m. match with the Lumberjacks and a 3:15 p.m. match with Grand Rapids.

TEN PAIRS of trumpeter swans will be released in the Tamarac National Wildlife Refuge near Detroit Lakes April 21 through the Nongame Wildlife Program of the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources.

20 Trumpeter Swans Will Be Released Near Detroit Lakes

Rare trumpeter swan, largest waterfowl in North America, will begin its long awaited return to the wetlands of western Minnesota on Tuesday, April 21, at the Tamarac National Wildlife Refuge near Detroit Lakes.

Ten pairs of trumpeter swans are scheduled for release by the Department of Natural Resources' nongame wildlife program. The swans, now three years old, wee hatched from eggs laid by swans at the Minnesota Zoological Garden and the Brookfield Zoo in Chicago. Additional swans were donated by Ray Whitney of the Dellwood Wildlife Foundation.

This trumpeter swan project has been funded by donations to the Nongame Wildlife Checkoff on Minnesota income tax and property tax forms. That program was initiated in 1980 through the efforts of former state senator Collin Peterson of Detroit Lakes.

The swans will be transported to the Detroit Lakes area on the morning of April 21 and released in the afternoon. The main release will occur on Jim's Marsh at the Tamarac National Wildlife Refuge headquarters. The public, photographers, and reporters are invited to attend the release at the Tamarac NWR headquarters.

Exact time for release of the swans will be announced by the DNR by April 14. Meanwhile, inquiries should be directed to Nongame Wildlife Program supervisor Carrol Henderson at 612-296-3344.

Trumpeter swan can weigh over 30 pounds and have a wingspan exceeding seven feet. Each bird released will have an orange numbered plastic tag on one wing to provide for identification.

Trumpeter swans were entirely eliminated from Minnesota in the late 1800's by persons who killed the swans for their meat and feathers. The wing feathers, used in ladies' hats, and down, used to make powder puffs, were exported to Europe.

Nongame Wildlife Checkoff, supported by private donations, has now enabled the beautiful trumpeter swan to get a second chance for survival in western Minnesota.

DNR Sponsors Poster Contest

This year the Department of Natural Resources, Division of Forestry, is sponsoring a forest fire prevention poster contest during the week of April 20 - 24. Information and regulation material has been distributed to all schools in the northern portion of the state. Other participating forest fire agencies are the U.S Forest Service, National Park Service, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, and Bureau of Indian Affairs.

Purpose of the contest is to promote the awareness of fire prevention in Minnesota's rural fire prone forested areas. Forest fires affect resources, tourism and more directly our personal lives through the loss of homes and other personal property.

Week of April 10 - 24 is Forest Fire Prevention Week in Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan, and Ontario. Smokey appearances and materials will be available for participating schools.

All participants will receive Smokey's helper buttons.

One grand prize winner will be rewarded with four days at Camp Fish in Walker (a fishing camp with pro-fishermen from around the state; the contest winner and one parent will attend), commemorative plaque, Smokey Bear T-Shirt, and the winning poster will be printed and distributed statewide as part of next year's fire prevention program.

Three regional second place winners will receive the choice of three tickets to either the Minnesota Twins Oldtimers game or Valley Fair, one nights lodging in the Twin Cities, the "Smokey Still on Guard" art print, and Smokey Bear T-Shirt.

Nine regional honorable mentions winners will receive the "Smokey Still on Guard" art print, and a Smokey Bear T-Shirt.

Four top participating schools will receive the framed "Smokey Still on Guard" art print, and a copy of "Peterson's Guide to Wildflowers."

Each school may conduct its own poster contest for third and fourth graders and submit the top ten posters to the DNR regional office by mail. For this area the regional office address is, D.N.R. Regional Office, 2115 Birchmont Beach Rd. N.E., Bemidji, Minnesota 56601.

Posters entered will become the property of the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources. Posters must be free hand and original. Do not use copyrighted characters (Smokey is okay). Posters should be produced on 18-by-24-inch tagboard, heavy construction paper, with crayons, colored pens, markers, paint, torn paper, glued fabric — Avoid materials which smear such as chalk and charcoal.

Contest theme: Help Prevent Forest Fires.

Judging will be based upon suitability to contest theme, creativity, and neatness.

Prior to April 9 return participating post card so that Smokey's Helper buttons can be mailed back before fire prevention week. Actual poster drawing will be due April 20-24 during Forest Fire Prevention Week. Postmark deadline for sending school entries to DNR Regional offices is April 30. Poster judging and awards to participants in May.

Home Repair, Remodeling Invitation To Con Artist

With the coming of spring many Minnesotans are anxious to get on with home repair and remodeling projects so they will be prepared to enjoy the lazy days of summer that lie ahead. Unfortunately, along with spring, inevitably the home repair scams and rip-offs also appear. However, by exercising a little caution and common sense, you can avoid the pitfalls of dealing with con-artists.

Home repair schemes can take a variety of forms and while sometimes they are fairly easy to identify, other times they are not. Among the more obvious are the gypsy-like crews that wander from town to town offering to seal driveways, paint houses and other fairly low-cost, quick and dirty jobs designed to be completed fast so they can be gone with your money as quickly as possible. Typically, they'll use inferior, inappropriate products such as paint thinner or motor oil for driveways and white wash for houses. They sell you on a low price, but in the long run it will cost much more to redo it correctly.

Another easily identified scheme is the "contractor" who just happened to be driving by and noticed a cracked chimney that poses the danger of fire, or a sagging roof threatening imminent collapse. Oftentimes these schemes will be directed at senior citizens and will play on their fears and inability to climb up a ladder and personally inspect the problem area. Remember that dangerous or life-threatening structural conditions are normally precipitated by some event such as a storm or fire and should be apparent. If you are approached in this manner always get a second opinion.

In still another scheme a seller will claim to be a building inspector or energy auditor making the representation that there is an official purpose to his visit. They might use scare tactics or warn you of serious code violations that have to be corrected. In some cases they might offer to do the work when they are off duty, or they might recommend another repairman that, in reality, they are working with. If approached like this, remember that all legitimate government personnel and utility workers carry identification. Insist on seeing this before you let any such person in your home and if you have any doubts, call the agency they claim to represent.

In most of these cases you will end up paying for sloppy or improper workmanship, unnecessary repairs, incomplete jobs and inferior materials. In some cases you might be the victim of a blatant swindle where the seller will require a large down payment and you will never see him again.

There are a number of things you can do to greatly decrease your chances of being taken in a home repair scheme.

Selecting a contractor: Obviously, be wary of any door-to-door approach. Get recommendations from any of several sources, such as friends or neighbors, building supply stores, utilities and trade associations.

Obtain bids: Decide on the scope of the work to be done and obtain at least three bids. Remember, the lowest bid isn't necessarily the best, and any unusually low bid might indicate a misunderstanding of the work to be done, or be a cause for alarm.

Investigate the contractor: Get references and check on them. Check with your city hall and be sure the contractor complies with any license, insurance or bonding requirements. The Better Business Bureau and trade associations can sometimes be helpful information resources.

Write the contract: In some cases the bid will serve as the contract, but there are several items which you may want to be certain are in writing. First, the more detailed a description of the work and materials, the less likely there will be any misunderstanding. In addition, any changes should be in writing and initialed, starting and completion dates, any agreed upon schedule of payments, who is responsible for permits where required and any guarantees should be included.

Down payment: A small, good-faith down payment may be required, perhaps 5 or 10 per cent of the total price. Beyond that, any payment should be avoided for labor that is not yet performed, or for materials except upon delivery or when a bona-fide need can be demonstrated.

Protection against liens: Before making final payments be certain to obtain lien waivers from the contractor, any sub-contractors and any material suppliers.

For more information on home repair schemes or selecting a contractor, or, if you need advice or assistance in dealing with a contractor, contact the Attorney General's Consumer Division; in St. Paul: Room 124 Ford Building, 117 University Avenue, St. Paul, MN 55155, (612) 296-3353; in Duluth: Room 708, Government Services Center, 320 W. 2nd Street, Duluth, MN 55803, (218) 723-4891.

GOODRIDGE SIXTH GRADERS left at 6 a.m. today on the annual sixth grade trip to the Twin Cities, accompanied by their teacher Duane Howard and bus driver and chaperone, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Ryan. The class will return at 7:30 p.m. Friday after visiting a number of points of interest and education. Members of the class include (left to right), kneeling, Andy Dahlen, Jerry Parnow and Gerald Norby; standing, Michelle Jensen, Jenni Ryan, Michelle Coan, Shannon Brinkman, Valarie Horachek, Wyatt Anderson, Mike Pittman, Tony Cullen and Rhoda Hruby.

Kevin And Heidi Ryan Are April Artists Of Month

Contagiously enthusiastic, the Thief River Falls Community Arts Council's April Artists of the Month Heidi and Kevin Ryan are a study in dedication to music. Kevin teaches orchestra and band at Lincoln high school, while Heidi teaches orchestra at Franklin Middle school and at all the Thief River Falls elementary schools. Before school, after school and evenings, both teach private lessons. They believe deeply in the value of private lessons. And so give up much of their personal time to do so.

As one member of the Friends of the Orchestra said, "Both Kevin and Heidi devote all their time to music for the children of our community — far above and beyond what any school employee should be expected to do. They both give 23 per cent — or more! I just don't know enough superlatives to say about the two most incredible people in the world!

Kevin was born in Houston, MN, and attended Winona State university where he received his degree in music, specifically orchestra and band education.

Heidi was born in Winona, MN, and attended the University of Minnesota and Winona State university. She holds a bachelor of science in education in orchestra and general music and a bachelor of arts in music.

While they did not meet as children, it is interesting to note that both have vivid memories of falling asleep to the sounds of their fathers practicing music. Both also had parents who actively encouraged musical activities for all their children. Heidi and all four of her sisters played instruments from an early age. In fact, her father, an orchestra teacher, claims Heidi began her musical career at five days old.

Heidi's father and mother had just brought her home from the hospital. Her father put on a Beethoven recording and immediately she stopped crying. He claimed that from then on, this was the only thing that would soothe her. It was natural then, for her father to begin teaching Heidi violin when she was still quite small.

Kevin notes that at age six, his father also started him on the violin. While his father did not actually instruct him, he insisted Kevin practice diligently and sat beside him and listened. He also made sure Kevin had the best instruments and teachers available. Money was not a consideration to his father; quality was. As Kevin says, "I had some of the best teachers in orchestra you could find; if I'm good, it is because of those teachers and my father."

Both Kevin and Heidi feel their committment to music is a direct result of caring parents. "Parents are an important influence on children. They can really inspire a child to achievement," comments Kevin. This belief in the importance of parental involvement in a child's life was one of the reasons Kevin started the Friends of the Orchestra. Jon Larson and Judy Dimich helped begin this organization and Kevin says, "We felt the orchestra needed more recognition in this community and that the community needed to be educated about the worthiness of the Orchestra. A bonus for the children is that the Friends of the Orchestra also perpetuate the orchestra programs."

Kevin and Heidi have come to like Thief River Falls in the two years they have lived here and have a strong committment to the music program in our community. Their committment is so strong, it leaves them little time for relaxation. When they are able to relax, they enjoy their children, Billy - four-and-one-half years and Rachel - seven months, and reading.

Of course, they also enjoy listening to and playing music — particularly classical and jazz music. This remark reminds Kevin of something. "One of the things about the orchestra program in Thief River Falls that I'm most excited about is the music we're playing. My students are developing a taste for classical music."

Heidi nods in agreement. "The same is true in the middle school," she adds, "and the kids are very excited about it!" She says that when Dr. Robert King came up to Thief River Falls recently, the middle school studnets wanted to impress him with the piece they felt they performed the best. "They selected the most difficult piece they've ever played — a classical piece," she says. "This was the piece they were most proud of."

What do the Ryans see as the future of orchestra in Thief River Falls? "Potential!" exclaims Heidi. "I can see a good future for the orchestra program — both in number of students involved and quality. We've got some kids who'll do some wonderful things. Right now, the middle school orchestra may be small, but they're DYNAMITE!!! We have some wonderful kids and incredibly supportive parents!"

Kevin agrees, but adds the future of the program depends on how much self-esteem can be given to students in it. "I tell them I can help them as much as I can technique-wise, but they have to have pride in themselves. If I can help instill that pride in them, I'll feel I've really accomplished something."

The Thief River Falls community arts council invites the community to meet this talented couple and hear them perform at a noon concert Friday April 10 from 12:00-12:30 p.m. at the library. The concert is entitled "Strings in Concert," and it is free to the public. People are also invited to bring their lunch if they wish and enjoy the concert as they eat. Coffee will be served.

Corn Rootworms Expected To Cause Problems This Year

Corn rootworm pressure is expected to be high this growing season. The mildest winter in recent history has meant fewer car troubles and lower heating bills for a lot of people. But for some corn belt farmers, it may mean an increase in insect pressure this year, most notable pressure from corn rootworm.

Corn rootworm beetle counts were extremely high in 1986. Because of the combination of high beetle counts and a mild winter, entomologists believe the potential for heavy corn rootworm pressure is great.

David J. Harms, crop consultant, Crop Pro-Tech, Inc., Naperville, IL, explains, "If you look at the higher beetle counts that we had last year, which indicates that more eggs are being laid, and take into consideration a higher winter survival rate, corn rootworm will be a real threat this season.

"That would tell me that a farmer should carefully consider using a rootworm insecticide on his corn following corn this year because threshold numbers on continuous corn would be a half beetle per plant. On first-year corn, where the female beetle prefers to land, thresholds would be a quarter beetle per plant."

Beetle counts in 1986 conducted by university personnel ranged from an average of three beetles per plant in Minnesota to just over two beetles per plant in Illinois. In Wisconsin, 2.5 beetles per plant were reported, and Iowa also reported higher than normal counts.

Nat. President Of Cattlemen's Ass'n. To Speak In TRF

Jack Dahl, president of the National Cattlemen's association will be the featured guest speaker at the 9th annual Cattlemen's association carnival April 10 in Thief River Falls.

The Cattlemen's association carnival will be held at the Area Vocational Technical Institute in Thief River Falls.

Dahl of Gackle, ND, was elected to the position of president of the National Cattlemen's association at the 1987 NCA convention in Reno.

The Denver-based NCA is national spokesman for approximately 230,000 cattle producers and feeders.

In 1985, Dahl was first vice president of NCA. Earlier, he was on the executive committee, and he served for a number of years as chairman of the ANCA and NCA animal health committees. He is a past president of the North Dakota Stockman's association and past president of the North Dakota Beef cattle improvement association. He is a past regional vice president of the American National Cattlemen's association (the predecessor of NCA).

Dahl has been very active in animal health matters, having served as a member of the subcommittee on foreign animal diseases of the National Research council of the National Academy of sciences, a member of the United States Animal Health association brucellosis subcommittee, chairman of NCA's brucellosis subcommittee, and a member of the USDA advisory committee on foreign animal diseases. In 1982, he received a special recognition award from the North Dakota Veterinary Medical association for his outstanding service in animal health work.

Dahl has served as a livestock judge at many local, state and national shows and has been a judging coach for local 4-H and FFA judging teams. He has a bachelor's degree in animal science from North Dakota State University.

The Dahl Land and Cattle company is a family partnership that includes commercial and purebred cow-calf operations and a background feeding operation. He has been actively involved in the cattle business for more than 30 years.

Young Students In Goodridge To Perform Musicals

"When we gaze across our fence to see what can be seen. The grass that grows beyond our fence is greener than our green."

A common problem? It is for all the country mice who are playing in "Mouse Country," an elementary musical by James Leisy. This delightful play will be performed by the Goodridge elementary school April 14 at 7:30 p.m. in the school gym.

The story features the old question of city living versus country living, as told by grades 3-6 in story, song and dance. Preceding the mice's shenanigans, grades kindergarten through two, will perform "Critter Capers" by Jill Gallina, a collection of songs about all sorts of animals. The program is under the direction of Mrs. Helen Anderson and is free to the public.

On display in the gym beginning at 6:30 p.m., April 14, will be the science fair projects made by Goodridge school students. Science teacher Patti Johnson will be supervising project judging that afternoon.

Minnesota Hog And Pig Inventory Is At 4,100,000

Minnesota hog producers had an inventory of 4,100,000 hogs and pigs on hand March 1, up five per cent a year earlier but four per cent below the Dec. 1, 1986 inventory, according to the Minnesota agricultural statistics service. Of these, 530,000 were breeding hogs, up eight per cent from a year earlier and 3,570,000 were market hogs and pigs, up five per cent.

Market hogs in the under-60-pound weight group were up nine per cent from last year. Those in the 60-119 pound weight group were up four per cent. The 120-179-pound weight group was unchanged and the number in the 180-pound-and-over group was up three per cent.

Minnesota's December-February pig crop totaled 1,670,000 head, nine per cent above a year ago but six per cent below the September-November pig crop. The 210,000 sows that farrowed averaged 7.95 pigs per litter compared with 7.85 a year earlier.

Hog producers in Minnesota intend to farrow 235,000 sows during March-May. This would be seven per cent above the number farrowed a year earlier. June-August farrowings are expected to total 23,000, a 10 per cent increase.

Pizza Fund-Raiser Is "Real Success"

by Sharon LaCoursiere
News Reporter

For five years, pizza-making has been a family project at St. Bernard's Catholic school in Thief River Falls. Workers are volunteers and the money raised is used entirely for the school. Each year, parents and parishioners, students and siblings gather together in a cooperative endeavor to produce pizzas to fill orders taken previously by the students and their families.

Betty Gonsorowski, who coordinated the pizza sales for the first four years, said that 1,200 pizzas were produced the first year, and sales have steadily increased through the years to achieve a grand total of 6,300 pizzas this year.

Pizzas are sold about two months in advance. Buyers pick up and pay for their pizzas on the date they are made, this year, April 4. Four varieties of pizza are sold — sausage, pepperoni, double cheese and a supreme pizza with black olives, green pepper, mushrooms, pepperoni and sausage, smothered in mozzarella and cheddar cheese. (Is your mouth watering yet?)

Demand for the pizzas is, in part, because they are made fresh as opposed to the frozen varieties available elsewhere, and with wholesome, natural ingredients. And the price seems to be right too, at $3 per pizza, $4 for the supreme variety.

Pizza-making began last Thursday with families folding the 6,300 boxes. Friday, a semi truck delivered boxes of pre-formed crusts, with volunteers again unloading and toting into the church basement. Friday afternoon and evening were spent dicing, slicing, grinding and cooking the various pizza toppings.

This year's topping ingredients included 2,500 pounds of mozzeralla and cheddar cheese, 1,000 pounds of sausage, 600 pounds of pepperoni, 54 (four pound) cans of black olives, 78 (four pound) cans of mushrooms, and 400 green peppers. Most ingredients are purchased locally, except for the pizza sauce and crusts.

Saturday's activities began at 6:30 a.m. for some volunteers, setting up three long tables to be ready for assembly line procedures. As workers appeared, they donned hair nets, gloves and aprons and got to work, with those more experienced workers from previous years helping "greenhorns" who were joining the ranks for the first time.

Hustle and bustle continued throughout the day, with many workers coming and going, and some staying the duration. In an orderly fashion, a total of about 125 workers rolled out 6,347 pizzas by 6 p.m. that day.

Irene Ortloff, who served as coordinator this year along with Lambert Brunkhorst, termed the endeavor a "real success." She said all pizzas were sold by 10 a.m. Sunday, and when I spoke to her Monday, she said, "I've been getting calls for more pizzas all day today, but I just have to tell the callers they've all been sold. We sold the last ones after the first mass on Sunday."

School Principal Chuck Walrath said that money raised by the sale is not designated for one particular area of the school, but is used wherever needed, especially for books, supplies and teacher's salaries. He said monetary support for St. Bernard's school comes mainly from a parish subsidy, tuition and three large fund-raising activities, one of which is the pizza sale.

St. Bernard's is a private school, comprised of 152 students in grades Kindergarten through six. Although mostly Catholic students, the school welcomes all denominations. Tuition fees are not set, but are negotiated.

When No Shadow Fell

Scriptures Selected by The American Bible Society

Scripture records that on the first Good Friday, from the sixth to the ninth hour, there was darkness over the earth. By Hebrew count that would be from Noon until three o'clock. These hours on Good Friday are still widely observed as a time of solemn devotion.

Though no shadow fell on Calvary during those three tragic hours, the shadow of Christ's Cross has ever since fallen hauntingly across the pages of time... the globes of human culture.

Can the shadow of a political execution in a Roman province centuries ago have impact on modern man in the space age?

No! Not the shadow—that is absorbed in the dark of man's suffering and tragedy.

It is the Light that men see and believe in. The Light that penetrates all gloom. The Light that radiates from God and makes the years of His Son's ministry on earth the brightest years of History ... gleaming with hope and promise and faith for every generation.

Improvements Can Cut Taxes When Owner Sells A Home

Location. Location. Location. If you've ever been in the market for a house, chances are you've heard these words referred to as the three golden rules of real estate. But, according to the Minnesota Society of CPAs, many people don't realize that location is an equally important factor to be considered when planning major home improvements.

Because the value of your home is largely determined by the value of the homes around you, you're not likely to recover remodeling costs that take your home well above the values of similar homes in your neighborhood. As a general rule, you should not expect to sell your house for more than 20 per cent above the average in your area. So if you buy a $90,000 home in a $100,000 neighborhood, you pobably shouldn't spend more than $30,000 in home remodeling costs.

Homeowners often overlook the way in which remodeling can actually help to cut their tax bills. While many people are aware of the tax advantages of buying and owning a home, fewer homeowners equate remodleing with tax-savings. But with careful recordkeeping, your remodeling efforts can cut your tax bill considerably when you eventually sell your house.

Like any other investment, you must report to the Internal Revenue service any profit you make when you sell your house. In order to determine your profit, you must first calculate your cost basis by adding the cost of all improvements you have made to the original purchase price. (You may also add in the non-deductible closing costs from your original settlement sheet.) Subtract this total from the sales price of your home, less any selling expenses, and you have your profit.

It's very important to keep good records and save receipts for all improvements. A good way to do this is to keep a notebook where you record all expenses, project by project. With the notebook, keep a large envelope marked "HOUSE" and stuff it with all the receipts, invoices and contracts that represent your projects. Don't trust your memory — most homeowners will remember the $4,000 they spent to put in a fireplace but not the $1,000 they spend on landscaping because it was done $100 at a time.

This recordkeeping has long-term implications, as well, because when you sell your home, the profit you realize can be deferred by buying or building a more expensive home, or one of the same value, and moving in within two years from the date you sold your old one. Each time you sell a home you must file Form 2119 as part of your tax return. Be sure to file a copy of Form 2119 in your 'House' envelope. Since one house sale affects the cost basis for the next house, you need to keep track of how much profit you're deferring.

It is important that you distinguish an improvement from a repair because it is only improvements that you may add to your cost basis. A good rule of thumb to follow is that an improvement adds to the value of the property, prolongs its life or adapts to a new use. Repairs just maintain the home in good condition.

Contrary to what many people think, an improvement need not be visible or essential. Generally, it's considered an improvement if you insulate your house, panel a den, add shrubbery, fence the yard or put in new plumbing or wiring. But repainting inside or out, mending leaks or fixing floors are usually considered repairs. It's not always easy to determine the differnece. If you paint a basement room that was unfinished when you bought your house, you've made an improvement. But painting a room that was previously papered does not constitute an improvement for tax purposes, even though you may consider it a vast improvement over that dreadful floral print on the paper you covered.

To further complicate matters, if you make repairs as part of an extensive remodeling or restoration, the whole job may qualify as an improvement. As you can see, it's not always easy to distinguish between a repair and an improvement. If you're not sure, it's best to get expert advice to determine which of your expenses are considered maintenance and which are capital improvements.

Although there are many good reasons for remodeling your house, resale value should always be considered, particularly if you plan to move soon. Although the recovery rates of specific remodeling projects vary by a number of factors, including locale and the quality of the individual projects, some renovation projects stand to pay off dramatically better than others when the time comes to sell your house.

With the kitchen being the nerve center of most families, a major kitchen remodeling almost always gives you an excellent return — anywhere from 50 per cent to 100 per cent is possible. A full bath added to a home with only one bath is another improvement you can bank on. If you don't have one, a fireplace, particularly a new energy-efficient type, can be one of the best imvestments you can make. The reason may be strictly emotional — particularly for the first-time buyer who conjures up all sorts of homey scenes involving the family gathered around the hearth.

Improvements that have limited use and appeal, such as a swimming pool or tennis court, are likely to have a low recovery ratio, and in some cases, may actually decrease the desirability of your home. A conceniently located family room has become a must these days, but an addition that clashes with the style of your house or disrupts the traffic flow can detract from your house's worth. And don't forget that energy conservation measures can bring you returns even before selling by lowering your fuel costs.

In February the Rainbow Yacht club enjoyed a skiing weekend at Sugar Hills at Grand Rpaids. The weekend started Friday February 20th, with a stop over at McIntosh to discuss the soaring economic problems of northwestern Minnesota with the county extension officer. Arriving at Sugar Hills later that evening the group was welcomed by other skiers who were not frightened off by the newspaper ads stating "ski at your own risk." Mrs. Woo, the clubs' honored queen, was part of the entertainment for the rest of the evening. Saturday there was a battle to see who would hit the snow trails first with "Notannette," the most aggressive making it outside first. Of course, the camera crew was waiting to film the events and though Hendrickson is so camera shy, she was photographed before any of the other skiers. The cross-country trails were icy, but the group worked hard and no injuries were reported, only difficulty icing up on the skis of Leslie Bowes. The swimming pool at the main lodge attracted the more athletic members of the group and they were an attraction at the pool with their swimming styles and changes made. Saturday evening the group enjoyed a superb Chinese dinner in Grand Rapids with entertainment following. Army Peterson's initiation came to an end Saturday evening by accomplishing all of the feats expected of her. She served breakfast in bed to all the members in the style they are accustomed to. Two members, Belle and Captain Ernie, should be the winners of the best bedroom attire. Belle in white angora and Captain Ernie in shocking pink. The group returned on Sunday in time to send Captain Ernie off to New Orleans for the Mardi Gras and Notannette to Hawaii.

Gary Rolandson of Erskine was a dinner guest on Tuesday at the home of Orville and Belle Rolandson.

Wally Torkelson was on a business trip at Bismarck, ND, from Monday until Wednesday.

Wednesday evening the St. Paul LCW met at the church following Lenten services and those attending were Kathy Alberg, Valarie Torstveit, Virginia Hallstrom, Inez Mathson, Dodie Torkelson, Marlene Johnson, Eunice Grove, Sue Kotz and Bonnie Folkedahl.

Attorney General Gives Tips On Buying Used Car

Purchase of a used car is usually a major purchase and, for most of us, it is essential that we have reliable transportation. Despite this, the calls and complaints received by the attorney general's office regarding used car purchases indicates a fairly widespread lack of understanding of the obligations of buyers and sellers once a purchase agreement is signed.

The answers to two common questions that the attorney general's office receives highlight this misunderstanding. No, once you make a deposit and sign a purchase agreement you do not have three days to cancel the agreement; and, no, Minnesota's lemon law does not apply to the purchase of used cars. It seems clear that these misconceptions have misled used car purchasers into believing they have greater protection than is actually available.

For a successful used car purchase, start out by doing some research. Decide on the size and type of car that will suit your needs; consider what you can afford and establish a price range. Consult buyers guides to determine which models are most suitable. "Consumer Reports," available in your library, publishes an annual car issue every April which is an excellent resource.

When you are ready to shop, do more than just walk around the car and "kick the tires." During the initial visual inspection, look closely for signs of repainting or touch ups which might hide rust or body work. Look under the car for signs of leaks and check the tire tread for uneven wear. Check the interior, both front and back, for signs of wear and tear and be sure to test the electrical functions — lights, windshield wipers, radio, air conditioning, etc. — to be sure they are working properly.

Once you are satisfied with the visual inspection it's time for a test drive. Never rely on a salesman's observation that "I drove it myself and it runs beautifully." Drive the car for several miles at various speeds. Frequently problems are only apparent after the engine warms up or at certain speeds. Observe how the car "feels" on the road and watch for signs of excessive exhaust.

If you are still satisfied, ask the seller to let you take the car to a mechanic, preferably a shop that does not sell cars, for an inspection. This will cost a little extra, but can save a lot in the long run. Raise any concerns you may have to the mechanic. If the mechanic identifies any problems, find out how serious they are and get a cost estimate for the repairs.

Before making an offer to buy, go to your bank or credit union and ask for the "Blue Book" values of the car. These include an average retail price, the price you might consider the fair market value; the loan value, the amount a lender would be willing to finance on the car; and the average wholesale price, the amount the dealer is likely to have invested in the car. Using these values and the cost of any required repairs, set a maximum price that you are willing to pay and make an offer. Keep in mind that it's usually best of offer somewhat less than you are willing to pay so there's some bargaining room, and, that it is not usually in your best interest to pay much more than the retail value of the car.

Once a price is agreed upon, you will be asked to sign a purchase agreement. Remember that this is a binding contract at the time of sale. There are several points to review before you sign. Most used cars are sold "as is," so if a warranty or guarantee is offered, be sure that is written into the contract and do not sign the "as is" disclaimer on the form. If repairs have been promised as a condition of sale, be sure that is in writing. If a service contract is offered, be sure you understand the coverage that it provides and consider whether it is worth the cost.

The last step then, is to obtain financing. Don't simply rely on the dealer to arrange financing for you. He may very well have excellent terms available, but a few phone calls to various lenders can sometimes save you hundreds of dollars on a major purchase.

A final note — if at any time you feel pressured or intimidated by the sales tactics being employed by a used car dealer, or any other seller, it might be best to walk away. The smart consumer knows not only how and when to buy, but also when not to buy.

For more information on used cars or to file a complaint, call the Consumer Division of the Attorney General's Office in St. Paul: Room 124 Ford Building, 117 University Avenue, St. Paul, MN 55155, (612) 296-3353; or in Duluth: Room 708 Government Service Center, 320 W. Second Street, Duluth, MN 55802; (218) 723-4891.

Tobacco Is Most Deadly Drug Says Lung Association

Cigarette smoking kills more Americans each year than cocaine, heroin, alcohol abuse, car accidents, homicide and suicide combined, according to the American Lung association of Minnesota.

Smoking accounts for 17.2 per cent (more than one sixth) of all deaths in America each year, while alcohol abuse accounts for 4.9 per cent, motor vehicle accidents 2.3 per cent, suicide 1.9 per cent, homicide one per cent and illicit drugs .2 per cent.

"We must continue to be concerned about drug abuse," stated Dorothy A. Berg, managing director of the American Lung association of Minnesota. "But we must not forget that tobacco by far takes the greatest toll of life on our population."

According to the lung association, 350,000 Americans die each year from smoking-related diseases. Smoking is the cause of 85 per cent of all lung cancer deaths, 80 to 90 per cent of all chronic obstructive pulmonary disease (COPD) deaths (chiefly emphysema and chronic bronchitis), and 30 to 40 per cent of all cardiovascular disease deaths. The best advice is: "If you don't smoke, don't start. If you do smoke, quit!"

There are several programs available for Minnesotans who would like to quit smoking. "Freedom From Smoking" is a self-help kit and "In Control" is a video program. Both are designed to be used in the privacy and convenience of one's home. "Freedom From Smoking" clinics are a group approach and are offered across the state. All of these programs are available from the American Lung association of Minnesota. For more information, call 1-800-642-5864 (toll-free in Minnesota).

Thought Provoking Comment On Subjects Of Public Interest

Worst Legislative Session?

According to Win Borden, president of the Minnesota chamber of commerce (formerly the Minnesota Association of Commerce and Industry), the 1987 session of the Minnesota legislature "is on course to go down as the worst in 25 years in terms of jobs and economic development." He estimates the session will cost Minnesota at least 62,500 jobs over the next two years.

"Let me repeat that," he writes. "By our best estimates . . . and we challenge anyone to come up with better numbers . . . this legislative session is on a straight course toward eliminating or keeping out at least 62,500 Minnesota jobs. That's the economic equivalent of six Saturn plants and six Endotronics plants gone, thanks to legislators who were elected last fall on a promise to deliver 'jobs, jobs, jobs' and who, instead, have delivered 'nothing, nothing, nothing'."

Borden says the message from the legislature to existing business is to get out while you still have time and to businesses considering locating here to stay out. "And for those looking to invest in Minnesota," he adds, "common sense dictates that you put your money elsewhere."

Borden says the estimates use a generally accepted figure of $60,000 necessary to generate a permanent private sector job, and assumes that a business needs $30,000 in order to borrow an additional $30,000 to come up with that amount. Here is where the job loss is calculated to be:

(1) Failure to reform unemployment compensation. It's a statewide disgrace! We're paying $100 million dollars a year too much. Job cost — 7,500 jobs over the next two years.

(2) $600 million dollars in new business taxes . . . including a minimum tax on unprofitable companies. It's a perverse tax that penalizes risk. It's the most blatant attempt at outright robbery since Jesse James rode in Northfield. And legislators who support it should remember what happened to the James Gang when they tried that hold-up. No legislator in his or her right mind would tell a Minnesota farmer to pay a minimum income tax after an unprofitable year. But that's exactly what they're attempting to perpetrate on small businesses. The job cost — 20,000 jobs!

(3) Plant closing legislation. It should be called the Minnesota version of the Berlin Wall, because it would place a wall around Minnesota . . . keeping companies in trouble from leaving and potentially profitable companies from coming in. We estimate that combined total to be 1,000 companies. The job cost — at least 10,000 jobs.

(4) New environmental penalties. Business people want and support a clean environment. But these penalties put every Minnesota worker who handles hazardous waste . . . from high tech employees to newspaper printers to gasoline station attendants . . . at risk of losing their jobs . . . and their employers at risk of going to jail while business pay daily fines of a million dollars. The job cost? At least 10,000 jobs.

(5) The parental leave bill. It's anti-women; it's anti-family, because it encourages employers not to hire women during child bearing years when most families need a double income. The job cost — at least 5,000 jobs.

(6) The Begich bonding bill. It's a dumb and destructive idea that would force Minnesota businesses to carry insurance they can't buy at any price in order to protect employee benefits. It's a clear signal to businesses considering locating here that they would face harassment unequaled in any state. The job cost — at least 5,000 jobs.

(7) The minimum wage bill. It's the surest way we know to jeopardize and eliminate jobs held by the lowest paid and most vulnerable members of the work force. The job cost — at least 5,000 jobs.

"There are those who will disagree with our job-loss figures," Borden said. "We would ask them to do one of two things — either produce their own job-loss figures or, better yet, tell the people of Minnesota how this package of anti-jobs, anti-growth, anti-worker, anti-women legislation will produce the 60,000 new jobs a year we need to generate here in Minnesota."

There is still time to "pick up the pieces and make progress," Borden said. "Legislators need to return to the efforts of the past several years to make Minnesota competitive. That means supporting the governor by returning the income tax windfall to the income tax payers it belongs to. It means holding the line on state budget growth. It means forgetting about special incentives for the few and helping, instead, to build a competitive environment for all. It means realizing that most new jobs will come from businesses already located here . . . and it means encouraging them to stay and expand."

Re-Thinking Attitudes

Following comments were written by staff writer Betsy Dick of the North Hennepin Post:

As the seriousness of the public health threat posed by AIDS begins to dawn on the American consciousness, many people are finally starting to ask the right questions.

People want to know what they should do to stop the spread of the disease. They want to know how to protect themselves from it, and even more, how to protect their children.

Just lately we have heard the debate raging over whether or not condoms should be advertised on television. Most of us agree that ads for condoms would not be any more offensive than most of what passes for entertainment on the networks right now. In light of the public health issue, pointing out the networks' obvious hypocrisy gives us a feeling of righteous indignation which could, if we're not careful, cause us to sit back and think we've done all we need to do.

We haven't.

Condoms, while certainly better than nothing, are no more than a stop-gap measure in the fight against AIDS. Planned Parenthood estimates condoms' effectiveness as birth control at 75 per cent. If that percentage holds for AIDS prevention, one out of four times the condom will fail. Those odds will not stop AIDS and will not do much to protect our children.

Richard Danila, state AIDS expert who spoke to Robbinsdale Cooper high school students earlier this year, said unequivocally that the only way to be absolutely safe from AIDS is to abstain completely from sexual relations. The next safest is to have a mutually monogamous sexual relationship with someone who has not been infected with the disease.

The idea of abstinence has not been very popular in America in the past 25 years or so, and even monogamy has lost ground. What is needed now is no less than a major change in the course of the "sexual revolution." Such a change can only be achieved by major re-thinking of our attitudes about sex and the attitudes we teach our children to have about it.

In the 1960s when the sexual revolution was getting into full swing, sexual freedom came to be viewed as an inherent right. Those of us who came of age during those years have accepted without much question the ideas that our sexuality is our own, that we can do with it as we wish, and that "waiting for marriage" is hopelessly old-fashioned. Societal attitudes, as reflected in advertising and the media, are now accepting of sex before marriage, sex outside of marriage, unmarried persons living together and even one-night stands.

We believe both as individuals and as a society that the sexual drive is much too strong for rational control, and we teach this to our children either directly or indirectly. We even go so far as to imply that trying to control or channel that energy can be physically or mentally harmful. We think this kind of natural, pleasurable fulfillment is something human beings, including teenagers, simply must have.

It's hard for those of us who grew up with and practiced this philosophy to turn around and begin to tell our children that sex is not a right and that they can healthily restrain the urge. It requires admitting that some of the ideas we uncritically accepted were wrong. We may have scored the very idea of sexual abstinence for the unmarried when we were young, but we must now re-think and reverse this position.

It may seem almost hypocritical of us to hold the opinion that waiting until marriage not only can be done, but must be done. Yet that is what we must tell our children, if we are to help them protect themselves against the plague of this century.

We are truly hypocrites if we don't.

Borrowed Nonsense

The fisherman's tales of the big fish he caught were met with such disbelief that he bought a set of scales to weigh each catch. One day a neighbor asked to borrow the scales. When he brought them back the next morning he said, "Congratulate me. I'm the proud father of a 28-pound baby boy."

First Neighbor: "I'm going to try out for the local musical. What do you think people would say if I appeared on stage in tights?"

Second Neighbor: "That your husband married you for your money."

Woman to friend: "My daughter is a practical nurse. She just married a very wealthy, sickly old man."

If you want an idea of what the term fast depreciation means, take a look at the toys you gave your kids for Christmas.

April 8, 1937 TIMES

— A strange little monster from the deep was on display at the Times' office. Roy Marquette, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Marquette of Thief River Falls, graciously shared his catch from the Red Lake river with the Times and allowed them to display it to the public. The "peculiar reptile" was ten inches long with a snake-like head, no scales, large red plumed ear-like appendages and feet like a lizard.

— Headlines seemed so much more exciting in 1937. Consider these front page goodies: "Mammoth Barn Dance to be Held in Arena Saturday Night," "Drum Corps to Sponsor 'Smorgasbord' Tuesday," "Jury Finds Man Guilty of Barbering With No State Permit," and "Chow Dog Wearing 1937 License No. 1 in City."

— And the inside pages weren't too boring either, with "Marshall County Relief Clients Are Forbidden to Visit Beer Parlors," "Change Ordered in Color of Town Direction Signs," "Train Runs Away, Two Men Injured," "Man Fallen From Train Found In Beer Tavern," "Snow Traps Sheep, 34 Bodies At Hay Stack," and "Transient Wants New Easter Sunday Socks."

— Files of the April 8, 1937, Times revealed that the temperature was 13 below April 7, 1936, and a blizzard April 6 blocked highways in the northern part of Minnesota.

— Easter finery was being touted in the Times this week. Gentlemen could buy a fine spring suit at Oen's for as little as $22.50; the ladies had their choice of Betty Baxley frocks at Oen's at $1.98 (advertised as "rippling Swing skirts, happy young colors, rows of rick rack and puff sleeves...in gay young prints, linens and piques"), or smart spun rayons at Montgomery Ward store for $2.98; and the children could have fast color wash suits in sturdy cotton for 59 cents.

THE VOICE of BUSINESS

by Richard L. Lesher, President
U.S. Chamber of Commerce

Appointment of former Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker as President Reagan's chief of staff was an astute move that augurs well for the final two years of the Reagan administration.

The most obvious and immediate benefit will be marked improvement in relations between Congress and the White House. For six years, President Reagan has been engaged in a fierce tug-of-war with Congress over many critical issues, more than a few of which are of intense interest to business. The return of the loyal opposition to majority status in the Senate threatened to make that friction more heated.

If there is one person in Washington uniquely suited to pour oil on these troubled waters, it must be Howard Baker. During his many years in the Senate, he acquired a well-earned reputation as a seasoned legislator and patient coalition builder. It is no simple thing to force consensus among a disparate and highly-volatile gathering of strong-willed politicians, but Howard Baker has demonstrated his ability to do it.

Also, as a former senator, Howard Baker enjoys the advantage of having access to the Senate floor where he can personally attend to the president's agenda.

Business can take great comfort in knowing that as senate majority leader, Howard Baker demonstrated keen understanding of the free enterprise system and sympathy for the views of business. He has championed the cause of federal product liability reform.

He was an influential backer of Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker during his confirmation hearings four years ago. And although he was not heavily involved in trade issues, he is known to be a defender of free trade. His appointment is regarded by many as an indicator that new trade legislation will be well-balanced and nonprotectionist.

Of course, the biggest problem confronting Congress and the White House is the budget deficit, and in this arena Howard Baker will meet his real test as a negotiator. He is expected to begin private negotiations with congressional leaders on this issue soon and the prospect of real progress looks better than it has in a long time.

Howard Baker may just prove to be the right man in the right place at the right time.

Recommendations For Improving Health Of Minorities Are Given

Health needs of Minnesota's minorities include better preventive health care, better prenatal care, better housing, more effective injury prevention efforts, and a general effort to lessen the effects of poverty on health, according to conclusions of a new report by the Minnesota deartment of health.

The report includes 19 separate recommendations for improving the health of the state's minority populations, developed by staff at the department in cooperation with representatives of the minority community.

The recommendations accompany the results of a major statistical study of minority health problems in Minnesota. Data from the study was originally released last year.

That study found that minorities in the state faced higher then normal risks in areas like childbearing, injuries and homicide.

The new report acknowledges that its recommendations "go well beyond the scope of clinical medicine and public health." Improving the health of Minnesota's minorities will require a coordinated statewide effort, according to the report's authors, involving a broad coalition of agencies and organizations in both the public and private sectors.

Noting that "one-fourth of Minnesota's minority population lives below the poverty level, the report calls for effort to eliminate the negative effect of poverty on health. That includes efforts to ensure access to medical care and other health-related services, especially in the areas of preventive care and prenatal care.

The report places a special emphasis on reproductive health for adolescents, calling for education programs to prevent pregnancy, and in school health and prenatal education programs for teens who do become pregnant.

Other needs of Minnesota' minorities, as identified in the report, include:

+ Injury prevention programs. The report places a special emphasis on those most at risk — young children, and Black and Indian men. The suggested strategies for children include more consistent use of child restraints in motor vehicles, and the creation of "safe and supervised 'play spaces' for children."

+ Better housing. Better housing could also play a role in preventing injuries among children, the report says, by protecting them from "burns, poisonings, falls from windows and electrocution." In addition, adequate shelter is generally important to good health in Minnesota's cold climate.

+ Programs for preventing or reducing the misuse of alcohol and drugs. The report especially stresses the importance of programs for adolescents, designed to promote the "responsible use" of "alcohol and prescription drugs."

+ Efforts to strengthen the positive influence of the family. In particular, the report stresses the importance of effective child-rearing practices, and the potential role of the family in preventing violent behavior.

The report's recommendations were developed as a response to the findings of the health department's minority health study.

The study was based on birth and death statistics collected over a five year period, from 1978 to 1982. Among the major findings:

+ "High risk" births occurred twice as often among Blacks as they do among Minnesotans in general, and one and one-half times as often among American Indians. In both groups, the infant mortality rate was about twice that for all Minnesotans.

+ Compared to the general population, Black women were three times as likely and Indian women were six times as likely to begin prenatal care late in their pregnancies, or to receive no prenatal care at all.

+ Fifty-five per cent of the Black and Indian women who gave birth during the five-year study period were not married.

+ Twelve per cent of all Black infants weighed less than the critical minimum of five pounds, eight ounces at birth.

+ Compared with other children the same age, Black and Indian children aged 1-4 ran three to four times the risk of having a fatal injury.

+ Among Blacks aged 15-24, homicide deaths occurred 14 times as often as they did in the general population. Indians in that age group had eight times the normal rate of homicide deaths.

Cirrhosis of the liver was a special health problem among Indian women aged 25-44, who died of that disease almost four times as often as Indian men in the same age group.

+ The overall death rate for American Indians aged 25-44 was almost four times that for the general population, and the death rate for Indians aged 45-54 remained significantly higher than the rate for both Blacks and Whites in the same age group.

Minnesota's Racing Industry: A Winner Worth Supporting!

A Proven Producer Of Jobs & Dollars

Minnesota created an important new horse racing and breeding industry with the approval of pari-mutuel wagering in 1982 and opening of Canterbury Downs 3 years later. This industry has generated over 5,000 jobs, built Minnesota's tax base, boosted the rural economy and created additional tourism. Its total economic impact is estimated at over $250 million and growing!

An Industry That Benefits All of Minnesota

The racing industry is a dramatic success story in a state besieged by farm problems and rural economic decline. From 1981 to 1986, Minnesota lost 11,000 farm operations—over 10% in just five years.

Nearly 1,000 race horses will be foaled in Minnesota this year. There are 300 horse operations pumping millions of dollars back into Minnesota's agricultural economy. There will be over 3,000 race horses in the state this year to feed with Minnesota-grown grain and feed.

Tourism, another important Minnesota industry, is a major benefactor of Canterbury Downs. Over 30% of the track's attendance comes from outside the Twin Cities.

Growth Threatened By Double Taxation

At the hub of the racing industry spoke is Canterbury Downs, a company taxed unlike any other business in Minnesota. It faces unfair double taxation.

When a dollar is wagered at the track; 80 cents is returned to winning bettors. Of the 20 cents remaining, the state takes five cents—that's 25% of the track's gross wagering receipts. In addition, Canterbury pays all the normal property tax, sales tax, payroll tax, and other taxes that all Minnesota businesses pay.

In 1986, Canterbury paid over $5 million in business taxes, plus another $5 million in gross receipts taxes! Few, if any, Minnesota companies would survive under similar double taxation.

We Need To Make Minnesota Competitive

Other states have recognized the tremendous value of their racing industries. That's why 21 of 25 racing states have lowered their pari-mutuel tax rates.

The racing industry has introduced a bill in the legislature which would reduce Minnesota's pari-mutuel tax, currently the second-highest in the United States, to a rate competitive with other racing states.

Over 70% of the funds restored to the horse industry through this bill would go directly into purses for which the horsemen compete. In turn, that money will be reinvested in wages, taxes, and purchases of goods and services, including agricultural products.

A Minnesota Industry That Deserves to Grow!

The racing industry is not some distant corporation considering a move to Minnesota. It came here without subsidies or tax breaks and it's made good on its promise to create thousands of jobs and add millions of dollars to the state's economy.

It's an industry for all Minnesotans: business people, working people, farmers, breeders and many others. Most important, it's an industry that's here, that's alive, that's producing.

The racing industry: It's paying off for Minnesota!

Fires

The home of Duane Jensen was destroyed by fire Sunday evening, March 22. He lived alone and was not home at the time of the fire. Early the next morning the Thief River Falls fire department was called to put out a fire at the trailer home of Mrs. Carrie Ness at Riverview Trailer Court. Both Mr. Jensen and Mrs. Ness, an aunt to Mrs. Peter Solem, and a sister-in-law of Mrs. Julian Rodahl, are well known in our area. A fire is always destructive and many valuable pictures and personal items are lost.

House guests at the Bill and Connie Stock home from Friday afternoon to Sunday afternoon were Bill's folks, Mr. and Mrs. Roger Stock and their daughter Jean and her two boys, all from Bismarck and Bill's brother Tim and his son Jacob from Devils Lake. All the men attended the musical, "The King and I", at the Lincoln high school auditorium Friday evening, and the women folks Saturday evening. Sunday Bill and Connie entertained their guests at a noon dinner birthday party in honor of Jean's son Andy of Bismarck, with the traditional cake and ice cream for dessert.

Harold Halvorson visited Floyd Mathieu Sunday evening. Floyd has been a resident of Valley Home for several years and is doing well.

Gladys died unexpectedly Tuesday, when she suffered a heart attack as she brought her garbage out to the backyard and was found by her neighbor. Sympathy is extended to her family and four surviving sisters and brother Glen as well as other relatives.

A Saturday afternoon luncheon guest at the Alfred Solem home was John Bjorsness of rural Newfolden.

Howard was 91 years old at the time of his death. Sincere sympathy is extended to Joe and the Moes. Eldon and Evonne were overnight guests at the home of Eldon's cousin, the DeWayne Moes at rural Bradley Sunday and Monday. Ethel had been a house guest at the Joe Roso - Howard McCammon home for several days before Howard's death.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Solem attended the reception in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Randy Moe at Our Saviour's Lutheran church in Thief River Falls Saturday afternoon. Randall Arthur Moe and Karen Virginia Kvistero were married Saturday, March 14 at the Hawk Creek Lutheran church at Sacred Heart, Minnesota.

Saturday forenoon callers at the Lloyd and Harryet Larson home were Donald and Maxine Holmstrom and Eugene Kleinwachter, all from the Strandquist area.

Bernice Knutson was a Thursday visitor at the Bill and Connie Stock home.

Lloyd and Harryet Larson enjoyed the pancake dinner served by the men of St. Joseph Catholic church in Middle River, following Sunday morning worship services at the Nazareth Lutheran church in Holt. From there the Larsons drove to Strathcona, where they were afternoon visitors and supper guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Nelson.

Radio Telescopes Are Researching In Space

by Joyce Dall'Acqua
Smithsonian News Service

In the middle of a field edged with trees, a large structure looking for all the world like a burned-down trailer home sits on a circular track. A vintage 1930s Ford sedan pulls up and a man in plus fours jumps out and pushes one end of the structure so that it rotates a few degrees.

This scene is from "State of the Universe," a new planetarium show at the Smithsonian's National Air and Space Museum in Washington, D.C. Who is this man, and what is he doing?

In the early 1930s, a young telephone company engineer set out to find the source of static on trans-Atlantic telephone calls. To aid his quest, Karl Jansky built a crude-looking, 29-meter radio antenna on a circular track that could be moved around to face any direction.

After tedious months of record-keeping and research, Jansky came to the remarkable conclusion that the source of the static was the center of our Milky Way galaxy. When the discovery was announced to the world in 1933, the New Yorker magazine quipped, "This is believed to be the longest distance anybody every went to look for trouble."

Jansky thus created, accidentally, the world's first radio telescope and launched the field of radio astronomy — proving in the process that there's more to the universe than meets the eye. Radio telescopes today allow scientists to "see" objects billions of light years away, detect energy left over from the big bang — the giant cataclysm that is believed to have formed the universe 10 billion to 20 billion years ago — and even search for extra-terrestrial life forms.

"Radio astronomy introduced the idea that the universe is not the tranquil haven it appears to be from the Earth," says James H. Sharp, chief of the Albert Einstein Planetarium at the Air and Space Museum. "In fact, the universe is in a constant state of change and even violence." Sharp wrote and directed the museum's new planetarium show, which presents many of the latest scientific findings about the size, structure and possible future of the cosmos.

Yet Jansky's discovery was barely noticed by the astronomical community of his day and his employer, Bell Laboratories, did not encourage him to pursue his study of galactic radio waves. It was not until World War II that a concerted research effort was applied to developing radio astronomy technology.

Two of the few scientists of the 1930s to follow up on Jansky's work were Dr. Fred L. Whipple, now a famed comet expert and director emeritus at the Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory in Cambridge, Mass., and Dr. Jesse L. Greenstein, an astrophysicist at the California Institute of Technology in Pasadena. In 1937, the two Harvard graduate students co-authored a paper in which they attempted to describe the structure of the Milky Way galaxy, based on the assumption that the radio waves detected by Jansky were caused by heat concentrated at — and emanating from — the galactic center.

Their theory of the origin of radio waves turned out to be a moot point, however, when another pioneer discovered an even stronger source of cosmic radio waves outside the Milky Way. Grote Reber, an electrical engineer and amateur radio operator (now retired and living in Tasmania), built his own dish-type radio antenna in 1938 in his Wheaton, IL, backyard. With this telescope — which served as the model for today's radio telescopes — Reber picked up strong radio signals from the Cygnus A galaxy. This very distant galaxy is located, from Earth's perspective, far from the center of the Milky Way, yet it is one of the strongest sources of radio waves in the sky.

Explaining the early lack of interest in radio astronomy by the astronomical community, Reber recalls, "Astronomers of the time had a nearly complete lack of knowledge of electronic apparatus, viewing it as black magic." On the other hand, he notes, most engineers were ignorant of even simple astronomical principles. "I was in the middle of two groups not speaking the same language," he says.

Solar astronomer Leo Goldberg, former director of the Kitt Peak National Observatory near Tucson, Ariz., adds, "In the 1930s, everyone had trouble getting money, including astronomers. Federal funding for research was scarce and highly competitive, and a 'speculative' project like radio astronomy had little chance of getting support."

Goldberg, who recently completed a one-year tenure in the Martin Marietta Chair of Space History at the Air and Space Museum, also says that "the astronomical community tended to be very conservative about venturing into new techniques. For four centuries, astronomy had been inextricably linked to the optical telescope. In the past, it was usually the non-astronomer who developed a new field — this was true of ultraviolet, X-ray and infrared astronomy as well as radio astronomy."

At the same time that Reber was trying to get his findings published in scientific journals during the 1940s, intensive research in radio technology was being conducted at defense laboratories in the United States and Great Britain.

"The Allies thought that the Germans had figured out how to jam their radar," says Dr. George Seielstad, site director of the National Radio Astronomy Observatory at Green Bank, W.Va. (Reber's original telescope and a full-size replica of Jansky's instrument are now located at the Green Bank facility.) "They learned that they were picking up signals from the sun. But that information was kept classified until the end of the war."

Coincidentally, two other Bell Laboratory employees — following Jansky's example — first discovered physical evidence of the ultimate cosmic event — the big bang. In 1965, physicists Dr. Arno Penzias and Dr. Robert Wilson were investigating the cause of noise in their radio receiver. After carefully removing the suspected culprit — pigeon droppings — they eventually learned that the instrument was picking up the background radiation that exists everywhere in the universe, remnant of the big bang. For their discovery, Penzias and Wilson won the Nobel Prize in physics in 1978.

Radio telescopes have aided astronomers in furthering our understanding of such turbulent objects as quasars, exploding supernovas and black holes, which devour all nearby light and matter, as well as binary stars locked in a gravitational clinch so close that matter passes from one to the other. Radio signals from distant galaxies confirm that these galaxies are racing away from our Milky Way, suggesting that the universe is expanding.

Today, many radio observatories combine the "viewing" power of several telescopes to focus on very distant objects in space, a process called radio interferometry. For example, at the Very Large Array in the New Mexico desert, a set of 27 movable antennas is distributed in a Y-shaped formation covering 20 miles. When the radio signals are combined and correlated by computer, the resulting "images" are as sharp as though they came from a single antenna the size of the entire array.

Last summer, astronomers actually created a temporary radio telescope nearly one and a half times the size of the Earth's diameter, by correlating signals from two ground telescopes and from the Tracking and Data Relay Satellite in space. The resulting images of certain very distant objects, including a quasar, were twice as clear as the best earlier images.

Radio astronomy has also revealed the presence of complex organic molecules throughout the universe. "We're a long way from seeing anything else in space that is another civilization or form of life," Seielstad says. "But it seems possible that life may exist elsewhere when we see the same chemicals that originally endowed the Earth.

"More than any other single factor," he says, "Jansky's serendipitous discovery of radio waves made astronomy a multidisciplinary field. Today, the universe is studied by physicists, engineers, biologists, chemists and computer scientists, as well as optical astronomers." Appropriately, the radio-wave unit of measurement — the "jansky" — is now used not only by radio astronomers, but by other scientists as well.

Cheaper Dollar Key To Problem In World Trade

by Walter W. Heller
U of M Economist

If President Reagan paid more attention to his own economics, the U.S. economy would be better off. Last week, he endorsed 43 initiatives to boost competitiveness — the buzz word of the hour in Washington — by toughening trade laws and the like.

Meanwhile, his council of economic advisers in its annual report put its finger on the real reasons for our massive trade deficit, namely, the too-high value of the dollar, the monstrous federal deficit and slow growth abroad.

Let me make one thing clear here. Right off the bat, let me make clear that I strongly favor policies to boost the productivity of American industry: more investment in business plant and equipment, in research and development, in education and training and so on. Those are the basic building blocks for greater efficiency, faster economic growth and higher living standards.

But they are a long, hard slog, not a quick fix for our obscene trade deficit. Just think: While total U.S output grew by nearly $500 billion in the past six years, our total spending grew by $700 billion. Reaganomics launched us on a national spending binge fed by a flood of imports financed by piling up huge IOUs abroad. Eat, drink and be merry, and pass the bill on to our kids.

But it's not the fault of our poor productivity performance. In manufacturing — which accounted for $150 billion of our exports in 1985 — productivity has been rising smartly. What mainly undercut our international competitiveness is indeed the brutally expensive dollar associated with our blockbuster budget deficits.

But now, the roughly 25 per cent drop in the international value of the dollar in the past two years is clearly beginning to help. The decline in the trade deficit to $10 billion in December is a harbinger of a better trade picture to come. But a further drop in the dollar will be needed to make our exports cheaper and our imports more expensive.

Productivity? Sure, go for it. But without a cheaper dollar — and one should add products of high quality, performance and style — it won't solve our trade problem.

MFU President Says U.S. Can't Stand Farm Loss

Minnesota Farmers Union president Willis Eken told delegates to the organization's 45th annual state convention in St. Paul recently that the challenge of saving the family farm goes beyond the concern of individual farmers.

"It isn't just you and me, and it isn't just our neighbors being affected by what's happening now," Eken told the 400 delegates and other MFU members attending the convention. "It's our children, our grandchildren, our small towns and our large cities. And it goes even beyond that. The strength of our country since it was founded is the concept that the renewable resources of our land are placed in the hands of those who produce the food. I don't think this country can stand the loss of the family farm structure and continue as we have known it."

Eken congratulated the delegates for contributing to the organization's progress in the last year which included creating positive state legislation and helping to bring about a growing realization on the part of national leadership that a change is needed in federal farm policy. Eken said the MFU supported state interest buy-down program, debt restructuring program and mandatory mediation are being used as models for legislation in other states and on the national level as well.

"There were some special interests which were not happy with what we accomplished in the 1986 legislative session,"; Eken added. "We must monitor the activities of those special interests and protect the gains we've made, and suggest and work for improvements."

Eken said, on the state level in 1987, the organization would fight against more reliance on regressive taxes such as property and sales taxes, and would work for taxes based on the ability to pay.

On the national level, Eken said the 1985 farm bill has turned out to be the disaster MFU and others predicted it would be. He said the administration's announcement just prior to the election of a new corn acreage set-aside program, while most likely politically motivated, is an indication of a growing recognition of the need for a supply management approach to federal farm policy. He said MFU will work to support the Harkin-Gephart "Save the Family Farm Act."

FRESHWATER FOCUS

Information And Opinion From The Freshwater Foundation
2500 Shadywood Road — Box 90
Navarro, Minnesota 55392

Take my word for it. You need to read "Groundwater: New Perspectives, New Initiatives." This 40-page, full-color report is "must reading" for anyone concerned about our growing reliance on an increasingly critical national resource.

Maybe you don't want to take my word for it. But you should read the Journal if you'd like to find out:

+ Why every garbage can (including yours) is potential hazardous waste site;

+ How a major U.S. city is putting wastewater to work by reclaiming sewage for drinking;

+ How a recent Minnesota study of community water supplies is enhancing public health protection;

+ What's happening in cities — including Minneapolis — where landfills are becoming "Landfull";

+ Why agricultural chemicals are a growing concern for groundwater; and

+ What kinds of groundwater contamination are found in Minnesota — and the other 49 states — and what's being done about it.

"Groundwater: New Perspectives, New Initiatives" is a four-part perspective on what is being called the "resource issue of the decade":

Part I: What is groundwater? Defining groundwater and explaining how it functions as a major component of the hydrologic cycle.

Part II: How much do we depend on groundwater? Exploring the extent of this country's growing reliance on groundwater.

Part III: How do we affect groundwater? Describing a few of the ways in which both groundwater quantity and quality are affected by society's actions.

Part IV: How are we protecting groundwater? Presenting a number of innovative efforts taking place to protect groundwater supplies.

If your livelihood — or your life — depends on groundwater, you can't afford not to read "Groundwater: New Perspectives, New Initiatives."

Take my word for it.

Sparby Appointed To Chair House Subcommittee

Rep. John Sarna, chairman of the commerce committee in the Minnesota House of Representatives, has appointed Rep. Wally Sparby of Thief River Falls to chair the small business, energy and real estate subcommittee.

In making the appointment, Sarna said, "Rep. Sparby has come to be recognized as a leading voice in the House for small business concerns, and he is particularly knowledgeable about the business problems that need to be addressed in small communities in northern Minnesota. His experience in the business world is just what we need to help direct this new subcommittee.

Sparby owned and operated a small business in Thief River Falls for a number of years. He also has been trained and licensed in real estate, and has worked for six years in real estate sales. He has been a member of the chamber of commerce for 20 years, working on business issues.

In addition to this new assignment, Sparby also is a member of the House economic development and housing committee where he will be active in promoting a bill designed especially to stimulate economic growth in Minnesota. House File 2 is currently moving through the legislative process. It reorganizes state agencies dealing with economic development and creates the Greater Minnesota corporation, a private and public effort to stimulate economic growth outside the Twin Cities metropolitan area.

"My goal on business issues," Sparby said, "is to see that already existing small businesses in rural Minnesota get attention from the legislature. It's true we want to encourage the development of new business, but our first priority must be those that are already established."

Legal Rights And Financial Options Challenge Management

Many farmers are learning that an essential step in trying to guide their farm operation through financial strife is to consider their financial options and learn about their legal rights. A farmers recently contacted the attorney general's office and said, "I didn't realize the importance of pre-credit counseling with financial and legal advisors. Now when I take out a loan on my farm or machinery I have a plan developed with my financial and legal advisors to be better prepared to deal with any financial difficulties that may occur."

Planning is a part of risk management. It can be planning your farm operation so that the homestead exemption would offer adequate protection from financial stress. It may be planning so that as the family farm expands the financial problems of one part of the farm will not cause an insurmountable loss to other parts of the farm. It is basically planning in anticipation of hard times to minimize any damages those hard times can bring.

Most farmers in trouble are willing to negotiate with their creditors. However, to bargain effectively farmers should consider all possible options, whether it be a settlement including debt restructuring and forgiveness, the new Chapter 12 bankruptcy involving a court-supervised reorganization, or, even total liquidation through Chapter 7 bankruptcy.

After figuring as many options as possible, they can be laid out in front of creditors to discuss the financial advantages and disadvantages for all parties. Without figuring in the dollars and cents of each option, it is difficult to compare the options and select the course of action to be taken in everyone's best interest.

Farmers should remember that the purpose of bankruptcy law is to protect both creditors and debtors. While it may be expensive and have other negative consequences, it is an option that should be considered early on, before financial problems get out of hand. If a lender is given a scenario that includes the bottom line for both a Chapter 7 and Chapter 12 bankruptcy, the lender may very well be more amenable to negotiating an acceptable "workout agreement." Moreover, by having this information the farmer may avoid the "worst case scenario" by adopting a suitable risk management plan.

Some other options to explore:

- A farmer in southern Minnesota found a private investor to finance him at present market values and later learned the same investor had financed other farmers as well.
- A farmer in central Minnesota was forced to liquidate in Chapter 7 bankruptcy, but was able to buy a neighboring farm on a contract for deed and start over.
- By exercising his right of first refusal, a farmer from western Minnesota bought back the farm he lost through foreclosure.
- The State of Minnesota offers a refinancing program for farmers. This is a voluntary program that creates a partnership between the lender and the State of Minnesota to provide farm financing. Farmers may call (612) 296-5943 and request more information about Minnesota's farm debt restructuring program.
- Farm Credit Services offers a separate debt restructuring program in addition to participating in Minnesota's program. For information about the debt restructuring program offered by Farm Credit Services, contact the office nearest you.
- The Farmers Home Administration (FmHA) provides farm loans to farmers at last resort. A farmer can make application for a loan from the FmHA. The date on the application determines the order of funding eligible applications.

Of the many programs and laws available to assist farmers, the Farmer-Lender Mediation Act created a program in Minnesota to assist farmers and lenders in exploring possible solutions that may help avoid the pitfalls of bankruptcy. Farmers and lenders should learn about available farm programs and explore financing alternatives before making final decisions that can have lasting effects on the farmer, the lender and on farm communities.

Farmers can find help in considering their options and learning about their rights. The Attorney General's Farm & Home Preservation Hotline (1-800-652-9747) can provide help in locating assistance and information on farm problems.

Additional Funds For Pork Producer Checkoff Granted

Additional funds have been allocated for the pork producer checkoff. A recent $200,000 allocation of pork producer checkoff funds to the National Live Stock and Meat Board (NLSMB) by the National pork board will be used to speed up the development and introduction of new pork products in the nation's food retail stores and foodservice outlets.

"The meat board's pork industry group has done a considerable amount of preliminary research work on product development and marketing of new pork products in the last year or so," according to Mark Thomas, NLSMB's vice president of pork and processed meats. "Leading product research authorities are now reviewing the results and this enhanced producer checkoff funding will allow us to develop some tools that should accelerate the introduction of new pork products in the marketplace," Thomas said.

One of the first projects the new funding will fiance is development by the meat board of a "Pork Product Development" handbook. It will offer a concise review of the latest technological findings and consumer market research summaries concerning pork.

The handbook will be made available to directors of research and development and marketing executives of major meat and other food companies, as well as major university meat science departments and university reference libraries. "The handbook's contents should encourage development of improved or new pork products by food manufacturers," according to Dr. Burdette Briedenstein, director of research for the National live stock and meat board.

With its increased pork producer checkoff allocation, the meat board plans to establish two professional advisory committees, a new product advisory council and a market research advisory committee. The two committees will be used to assist in recommending future allocation of pork industry funds and resources in the market and product research areas.

Fierce Explosion Rips Through AVTI Welding

by David Hill
Times Reporter

Wednesday afternoon an explosion ripped through the Thief River Falls AVTI — a blast so fierce that it blew a metal door located on the east side of the AVTI through a chain-link fence and about 300 feet into a nearby grass field.

"It was a miracle nobody was killed," said school superintendent Leo Ruberto.

According to Thief River Falls Fire Chief Dave Bjorkman, the fire department received a call at about 3:45 p.m. Wednesday of an explosion at the AVTI which could be heard for miles. A large contingent of law enforcement officials — local police, sheriff and fire department personnel and Minnesota state patrol officers — responded quickly. The area near the welding room was sealed off and searched for anyone who might have been trapped in the area. As fire department personnel entered the area, special equipment was used to detect evidence of any gas leaks. Only after a thorough search were others allowed in the area.

The only person injured in the explosion was Al Dahlen, who was in the adult education farm management office at the time of the explosion. According to Northwest Medical center he was treated and released. The extent of his injuries was described as minor cuts and abrasions.

Observing the devastation first hand, Supt. Ruberto said it was a miracle that nobody was killed. He promised a full and complete investigation into the explosion. In the meantime, the area would be blocked off until architects and structural engineers could determine whether it was safe to enter the area. Classes in other areas of the building are underway this morning after being canceled for Thursday and Friday.

Repairs costing in the hundreds of thousands of dollars are expected to take months to complete. Because of the explosion, many students at the AVTI were given a long weekend. Superintendent Ruberto said all classes except two on Friday were canceled because they were not sure of the extent of damages to the structure. The two classes meeting are located in other facilities.

Cause of the explosion is believed to be faulty equipment in a small storage room for acetylene tanks. The storage room, which was completely demolished in the explosion, was located between the welding room and adult education farm management offices. The explosion leveled the small storage room and ripped through the adult education farm management offices, but strangely did very little damage to the welding room.

The explosion did extensive damage. Windows were blown out, parts of the ceiling were ripped out, files and desks were scattered and a hole at least four feet wide and eight feet high was left gaping between the welding room and the farm management offices. One teacher who surveyed the damage Friday pointed to a shattered copier and said the new $6,000 machine had just been installed the day before.

Fire Chief Dave Bjorkman and Dick Brolsma, deputy state fire marshall, toured the site early Thursday trying to put pieces of evidence together that would explain the explosion. Bjorkman said they thought the cause of the explosion was faulty equipment. Acetylene tanks, located in a small storage room, were apparently at fault. Bjorkman said gas apparently leaked from faulty equipment, filled the small room with gas, and followed a pipe into the welding room. A student in the welding room struck an arc and the gas exploded. The student was uninjured although understandably shaken by the blast.

Don Johnson, agriculture instructor at the AVTI, was sitting at his desk. The next thing he knew, he said, he was on the floor. He said he has never heard anything like it. He said he heard the ceiling falling and thought the roof was falling. All he could think of was finding the others and getting out.

Looking back at the building, Johnson said, "The Lord was good to us."

Maxine Mottram, cosmetology instructor at the AVTI, was at her desk in the cosmetology lab right next to the farm and business management room.

"All of a sudden there was a huge explosion and the ceiling started falling," Mottram said. "It all seemed to happen at the same time."

When parts of the ceiling started falling and dust filled the room, Mottram dived beneath her desk. It took her "about three seconds" to decide that's not where she wanted to be if the roof really started to fall. She got up and ran. Although she couldn't see where she was going because of all the dust, she found her way instinctively outside the room and the building.

Mottram said it was a horrible experience and one she won't easily forget. With the dust making it difficult to see and parts of the ceiling falling, she realized her vulnerability in a room with only one exit and no windows.

Faced with the difficult job of answering questions about the safety of the building in the first place, Supt. Ruberto said he felt comfortable in saying the building was up to code. Safety codes are always sensitive issues, he said, but the area was inspected by Occupational Safety and Health act (OSHA) personnel.

He added that of course building codes were always changing and if the AVTI was built again today, it would be different in many respects. But when a building meets the codes once construction is completed, it no longer has to meet tougher stan-

BULGED DOORS blown off their hinges, through a woven wire fence and nearly 300 feet away from the AVTI into an open field give testimony to the size of the explosion which rocked the building Wednesday afternoon.

DAIRY JUDGING TEAM from the Lincoln high school Future Farmers of America chapter won a trip to the state contest in St. Paul April 26-28 by placing fifth in the regional competition in Crookston recently. Judging points were earned for rating dairy pedigrees and production records, linear evaluation and cow placing. Team members (left to right) are Roger Dyrdal, Tim Carlson, Brian Geske and Jason Weets. They practiced for the competition with herds operated by Jerry Muzzy and Leonard Geske.

Cook's Choice

The following recipe was sent in by Mrs. Erling Anderson of Plummer.

LEFSE

8 cups riced potatoes
2 cups whipped cream
two-thirds cup butter
2 teaspoons sugar
2 teaspoons salt
3 cups flour

Mrs. Anderson recommends letting the lefse dough stand overnight and says to use your own judgment when adding flour enough for rolling. Now, get out those lefse grills and give it a try.

And the following recipe was submitted by another Times' reporter, Dave Hill, who says he hasn't tried this recipe yet, but may get around to it this summer.

HOW TO DESTROY FLIES

To one pint of milk add a quarter of a pound of raw sugar and two ounces of ground pepper. Simmer them together for eight to ten minutes and place it about in shallow dishes. The flies attack it greedily and in a few minutes are suffocated. By this method kitchens may be kept clear of flies all summer of the danger of poison.

This little tidbit comes from "Cooking In Old Creole Days" by Celestine Eustis, copywrighted in 1903.

The INSIDE SCOOP

From Lincoln High
by GAYLE BORCHERT

The Morp dance at Lincoln was a big success. It featured two live bands made up of students from Lincoln. The main band was "Contents Under Pressure" and is composed mostly of high school juniors including Andy Melby, Jason Heinrichs, Matt Simonson and Kurt Kainz. The band also has other members who help round out the group.

The other band is smaller and made up mostly of girls. I'm not really sure if they have a name yet, but the group includes Jodi Anderson, Rachel Ness and Brenda Ode. Some of the members from "Contents Under Pressure" filled in. Both bands were excellent. Everyone really enjoyed having live bands at a dance.

The boys kicked off their track season on April 3 with a meet in Moorhead. The boys should be pleased with their results due to the fact it was the first meet of the season and only 12 team members were participating.

The Lincoln honors banquet will be held tonight at the Lincoln cafeteria. All students in the top 10 per cent of the class scholastically along with their parents are invited to attend

Prom tickets are still on sale at Lincoln. This is the last week to buy them.

The Knowledge Bowl team should be congratulated. They finished seventh in a field of 51 recently at the regional meet in Middle River.

Students at Lincoln will not have school Thursday, Friday or Monday due to Easter vacation.

Jay Jonson; Kay Kainz and Michael Swanson attended the Model UN session in Winnipeg the weekend of April 3.

There is a very special student at Lincoln this year. I thought I should wait until she had a chance to get settled before I interviewed her. Her name is Monica and she is the Spanish exchange student living with the Krepp family. She is taking a full course load including American history, U.S. Government, Analysis, Physics, English and Biology. Monica's hobbies include jazz and ballet dancing, skiing and skating. She has recently gone out for golf and is learning how to play. Monica likes America and thinks the people are really friendly.

There won't be an "Inside Scoop" next week because of vacation. Look for it again in two weeks.

Russell Accepted To Attend MSU

Public Power Co. Concept Touted By Local Officials

With record-high stocks of grain in Minnesota, the state's crop producers are planning some cutbacks in planting this year, according to the Minnesota agricultural statistics service.

As of March 1, growers say they'll cut corn planings by 900,000 acres to 5.5 million; that's a drop of 14 per cent from last year. U.S. corn growers are opting for a 12 per cent drop-in-acreage to 67.6 million.

Minnesota soybean growers expect acreage to decline by four per cent to 4.7 million acres. U.S. producers should have the smallest planted acreage since 1976 — 56.9 million acres, down seven per cent from 1986.

All wheat plantings will drop 18 per cent in Minnesota to 2.44 million and 10 per cent in the U.S. to 64.8 million acres. Spring wheat accounts for most wheat grown in Minnesota and plantings will drop 16 per cent to 2.3 million acres. Other wheat types for both Minnesota and the U.S. are shown in the table below.

Oat acres will hold steady in Minnesota at 1.60 million while U.S. growers plan a seven per cent increase.

A sharp 25 per cent drop is ahead for Minnesota barley at 900,000 acres. U.S. acres will decline 16 per cent.

Minnesota sunflower plantings continue down with a 26 per cent cutback expected this year; acres should total 115,000 acres, of which 100,000 are targeted for oil purposes. Anticipated FLAX plantings in the state of 20,000 acres are down 15,000 from a year ago.

Both Minnesota and U.S. dry edible bean grower's are planning more acreage — 75,000 in Minnesota (up 15 per cent) and 1.8 million in the U.S. (up 10 per cent).

Minneosta's March 1 corn stocks of 913.2 million bushels are up a sharp 46 per cent from a year ago, with farm stocks accounting for 77 per cent of that total. U.S stocks totaled 8.25 billion.

Soybean stocks in Minnesota were up 35 per cent, at 211.6 million bushels; 53 per cent of the stocks were held on farms. U.S soybean stocks totaled 1.38 billion.

Minnesota's March 1 all wheat stocks of 221.7 million bushels were up 10 per cent from a year ago; of the total, 59 per cent was held on farms. U.S wheat stocks totaled 2.25 billion bushels, with 796 million bushels held on farms.

Statewide Prices Of Motor Fuels Increase A Nickel

Statewide gas prices are up five cents a gallon since the last holiday fuel survey compiled at Christmas and New Year's, according to AAA.

Average Minnesota gas prices for all grades of fuel remained stable at approximately a dollar per gallon from Thanksgiving through New Year's and fluctuated slightly from January through early March.

"Wholesale prices rose sharply in mid-March and the retail market responded accordingly," said Karen Kloser, AAA spokesperson. "Retail gas prices jumped in the last two weeks. Prices are expected to continue to rise moderately over the next month if OPEC members adhere to the production quotas set in December."

Drivers are advised to fill up before Easter Sunday. Of the 120 stations reporting to AAA, less than half reported regular business hours for the holiday period.

Average full-service prices statewide are: regular, $1.060; unleaded, $1.096; and premium unleaded, $1.262. Average self-service prices are: regular, $.908; unleaded, $.945; and premium unleaded, $1.045. Northern Minnesota prices are lower for full-service but higher for self-service.

Work Started On DOT Maintenance Shop In Crookston

Work has begun on a new maintenance headquarters building for the Minnesota department of transportation's Crookston office. According to Marvin Bates, Mn-DOT maintenance engineer in Crookston, "We expect construction to go on throughout the summer and the building should be completed within a year."

The new building will consist of a 19,000 square foot equipment repair shop and 6,000 square feet of office and warehouse space. It will include a "community room" designed for public meetings of up to 50 people. The 50-year-old structure that it will replace will be renovated to house an enlarged sign shop and maintenance equipment.

Crookston maintenance area headquarters houses maintenance workers, sign workers, mechanics and administrative staff who coordinate maintenance and snow removal activities on 960 miles of state highways in seven counties in Northwestern Minnesota. Mechanics at the headquarters service Mn-DOT and state patrol vehicles in this area.

Additional facilities in the Crookston district include nine truck stations and rest areas at Fisher's Landing, Lengby, Oak Lake and Roseau. Of the 78 employees in the Crookston maintenance area, 40 are currently housed in the headquarters building.

Cost of the new structure is $1,277,000. General contractor is Minko Construction Inc. of Fargo, ND. Mechanical contractors are Grant's Mechanical of Fargo and Lunseth Plumbing and Heating of Grand Forks, ND. The electrical contractor is Vacek Electric company of Grand Rapids.

Sparby Introduces Bill To Create Refuge Committees

Farmers who have been experiencing depredation losses of crops by big game animals and waterfowl are advised by Rep. Wally Sparby of Thief River Falls that he has introduced a bill in the Minnesota House calling for the creation of an advisory committee for each game refuge in the state.

Sparby says the committees would consist of seven members, four of them actively engaged in farming in the general vicinity of the game refuge and at least one of the four would have to be a town board member. The other three members would represent wildlife organizations, environmental organizations or other interested groups.

"I think it's time we give our farmers some input into the refuge management practices which affect farming operations in the vicinity of game refuges," Sparby said. "This bill, if enacted, will simply provide an opportunity for all the interested parties to sit down and work out any problems that may exist."

The bill would require each refuge manager to schedule at least four meetings of the committee in his area each year to review items of concern to area residents.

Rep. Sparby did not specify in his announcement of the bill how the committees would be established or membership determined.

Dear Readers,
Often members of a family are brought together only at weddings and funerals—The death of a love one is usually the most distressing experience in a lifetime. The funeral provides much needed group support for the bereaved family. To abbreviate the funeral service is to lessen this support, and the healing and strengthening process for the survivors.
Respectfully,

TIMES Around The Region

by Sharon LaCoursiere

Uncontrolled Fire

Newfolden — A grass fire that ran amok April 5 destroyed the home of Art Nelson, who lives two miles east and one mile north of Newfolden. Mr. Nelson had to drive to a neighbor's house to call the fire department, since he had no telephone, and the Newfolden fire department, despite their quick response, was unable to save the home.

Start A Stampede

Lancaster — April 4, the Kittson county sheriff's office received a report of shots being fired into a pasture of cattle. A deputy was dispatched to the scene and confiscated fireworks and a .22 caliber handgun from a juvenile. The incident is still under investigation.

Robbery

Kennedy — The Kiene Farm Seed Plant in Kennedy was robbed of three older model rifles and a flashlight the night of April 3.

Dog-Gone Soon

Hallock — The Hallock city council says it can't do a thing about a dog quartered behind a local store where there are back entrances to several businesses. Evidently there are no ordinances on Hallock's books that deal with this type of problem, which is creating "an unhealthy smell" from refuse and junk lying around, not to mention the presence of the dog. The council is in the process of creating a new ordinance to take care of the situation.

Burglary Charges

Bagley — Darrel Swenson, 18, is being held under charges of third degree burglary and theft for a break-in at the Bagley high school March 11. Swenson has been bound over to district court with his bail set at $10,000.

Teaming Together

Plummer — Plummer and Oklee schools will apply to the Minnesota state high school league for cooperative sponsorship of boys' and girls' basketball programs for next year. In the proposition, home games would be divided with expenses and receipts kept by the host school; supplies, expenses and transportation would be divided evenly between the two schools; and practices would be scheduled on a monthly basis by coaches and athletic directors. The cooperative team would be called the Red Lake County Central Mustangs and utilize team colors of black and white.

No April Foolin'

Halma — Mabel Flugstad celebrated her 102nd birthday recently at the Halma community center with her four daughters, step-daughter and son, and a big party. Mabel was born April 1, 1885, and you'd never guess it by looking at her picture in the North Star News.

Auto Fire

Middle River — A 1981 Pontiac Phoenix owned by Cecily Johnson of Holt was totalled by fire as she visited with her grandmother, Cleo Henning, in Middle River. The ladies and some good samaritans pushed the car from the back yard into the street and called the fire department. A faulty starter is believed to have been the cause of the fire.

Milk Shake

Gully — A bulk milk truck overturned April 7 north of Gully, probably due to dense smoke in the area. The Polk county sheriff's department is investigating the incident.

Caught In The Act

Bagley — Jay Gray of Bagley was apprehended by Chief of Police Tom Neeland and officer Jim Eck at 6:30 a.m. April 3 leaving the Bagley American Legion. He was taken into custody and charged with third degree burglary. He is currently being held with $5,000 bail after being bound over to district court.

Rollover

Red Lake Falls — A rollover the weekend of April 4 on highway 32 two miles south of Red Lake Falls resulted in the total loss of a 1979 Pontiac wagon. Driver Kevin Huot of Red Lake Falls was not seriously injured.

Show And Tell

Warren — Area bird watchers gathered at the Old Mill state park April 1 to take part in a presentation by the Bluebird Recovery committee of the Audubon chapter of Minneapolis. Participants were taught how to build their own bluebird houses during the demonstration and took home a cedar tree, too.

Fuel Oil Spill

Karlstad — Terry Johnson of Karlstad sustained cuts and bruises in an accident March 31 when his semitractor trailer loaded with fuel oil overturned near Argyle. Johnson had to be cut from the cab of the vehicle and was taken to the Warren hospital by ambulance. Pollution Control Agency officials supervised the clean-up of the 2,000 gallons of spilled oil. Johnson was on his way from Moorhead to Stephen when the accident occurred, hauling the fuel oil for the Ron Johnson Oil Company of Hallock.

Fatal Accident

Stephen — Arnold J. Kazmierczak, 23, of Stephen, was one of two men killed instantly in what authorities described as a drag race on north Washington street in Grand Forks, ND. He and driver Peter Steinhofer of Brooten, who was also killed, were students at the East Grand Forks AVTI. The 1972 Chevrolet, owned by Kazmierczak's mother, was sheared in half when it struck a utility pole. Both men were thrown several feet from the vehicle, which was said to have been travelling in excess of the 30 mile per hour speed limit. David Madson of East Grand Forks was the driver of the other vehicle involved in the accident. Kazmierczak was the son of Timothy and Marcella Kazmierczak of Stephen.

Phone Calls Can Prevent Errors In VA Payments

Veterans receiving monetary benefits from the Veterans administration can prevent under or overpayments with just one phone call, according to St. Paul VA regional office director Morris Nooner Jr.

"One phone call was worth $72 per month to a veteran attending college full-time, who called to say he just got married," Nooner said. "VA educational benefits are based on the number of his dependents and the amount of training he receives."

"If the veteran had called to say he had just dropped a class, his educational benefits would drop," Nooner said. "Without the call, the VA would be overpaying him $93 per month from the date he dropped the class."

The VA's payments for veterans benefits can be no less, and no more, than the amounts established by law and regulation. What does the VA do in case of overpayment? "The VA is legally obligated to ask the veteran to pay back the overpayment," Nooner said.

The major cause of overpayments is that the VA doesn't find out about the changes for months. In the education program, most of the overpayments occur when a veteran reduces his school workload or terminates his schooling. "If a veteran leaves school, the VA is eventually notified," Nooner said. "But it can sure be a surprise to the veterans when the VA bills him for the overpayment of veterans benefits he received."

Veterans who served on active military duty during wartime, who are permanently and totally disabled and who have limited income, are entitled to a non-service-connected pension. Most overpayments to such pensioners occur when they begin receiving additional income such as social security or private retirement payments, or from a failure to report the loss of a dependent. Though VA requires annual income reporting by pension recipients, Nooner suggests they notify the VA when changes in dependency or income occur.

"We've had situations when a veteran's social security or private retirement income decreased the amount of the pension," Nooner said. "In the case of overpayments, the VA has had to ask repayment from men and women whose limited income makes repayment difficult."

The VA provides compensation to veterans with service-connected disabilities evaluated as 10 per cent or more disabling. Veterans rated 30 per cent or more disabled received an additional allowance for dependents.

"For a 30 per cent disabled veteran, a new baby also means an increase in a VA compensation payment," Nooner siad. "And when that childe grows up and leaves home, the monthly benefit will be reduced. An overpayment of benefits can happen when the loss of the dependent isn't reported promptly, and VA payments continue as if the dependent were still at home with the veteran."

The solution to over or underpayments is simple. Tell the VA if you have a change in your income, the number of your dependents, or the number of credit hours you're taking at school. If you receive a VA pension, tell your survivors to inform the VA if you die, Nooner said.

"With one phone call to the VA, you can be sure that you're receiving the correct payment of your veterans benefits," Nooner said.

The St. Paul VA regional office may be reached directly by telephone. In the Twin Cities call 726-1454; in Duluth, 722-4467; in St. Cloud, 253-9300; and in Rochester, 288-5888. For all other locations call, toll-free (800) 692-2121.

IRS Has Ways To Collect Delinquent Taxes On Income

Taxpayers who have not yet filed their 1986 tax return because they are unable to pay the tax that is due should go ahead and file in order to avoid a failure to file penalty, which is 10 times more severe than the failure-to-pay penalty, according to the Internal Revenue Service (IRS).

The IRS has several methods of collecting delinquent taxes. IRS collection employees will request financial information to determine the best method for payment.

In most cases the taxpayer can pay the total of delinquent taxes immediately by either usings savings, borrowing or by selling property. However, if the tax cannot be paid using this method, the taxpayer may qualify for installment payments (provided there are no other open installment agreements with the IRS at the time).

If a taxpayer is able to pay the tax immediately or under an installment agreement but chooses not to do so, the IRS can collect the delinquent taxes through levies on wages or bank accounts or by seizure and sale of property.

For additional information about the IRS collection process, call toll-free 800-424-3676 and request Publication 586, "The Collection Process (Income Tax Accounts)."

Land Bank And PCA Nominating Committees Set

Stockholders of the Federal Land Bank association (FLBA) and the Production Credit association (PCA) of Grand Forks have elected 12 members to serve on the 1988 nominating committees.

Among those elected to the FLBA nominating committee is John Erickson, Red Lake Falls, while among those named to the PCA nominating committee is Gary Weiss Red Lake Falls.

The committee members were elected at the recent annual meeting of the associations held in Grand Forks. The nominating committees conduct the process of finding eligible candidates for directors of the associations.

The FLBA, PCA and the Bank for Cooperatives make up Farm Credit Services (FCS) of Grand Forks covering 20 counties in northwestern Minnesota and northeastern North Dakota.

Air Conditioners Sold Must Meet Energy Standard

A new standard designed to lower summer cooling expenses by making some room air conditioners more efficient went into effect in Minnesota January 1.

After that date room air conditioners of 6,000 Btu and more must have an energy efficiency rating of 7.8 or higher to be sold or instadded in Minnesota. A minimum rating of 7.0, already in effect, is required for all smaller room air conditioners.

The energy efficiency rating can be found on a yellow tag which must be attached to a new room air conditioner before it can be sold. The higher the number, the less electricity the air conditioner will use.

Called "EnergyGuide" label, the yellow tag also contains information on the air conditioner size and an estimate of annual operating costs.

The new standard was adopted by the Minnesota Legislature in 1985. Implementation was delayed to allow retailers and distributors to clear existing inventories.

Thought Provoking Comment On Subjects Of Public Interest

Time To Pick Up The Pieces

Guest Editorial
by David Hill
Times Reporter

The recent explosion at the AVTI in Thief River Falls is a good example of what can happen when things go wrong. Quite often in such situations, the disaster could have been avoided had a different path been taken in the planning stages. Yes, looking back we can see where changes should have been made and weren't.

But it's time to pick up the pieces. The school district has done a commendable job in rounding up various experts to inspect the disaster and make recommendations. I have no doubt that other school districts are also carefully watching what is done here. And I also have no doubt that the school district will do its best to make sure the disaster never happens again.

But since the school district is in the process of re-evaluation, maybe it should also re-evaluate other potential disasters. Hopefully it will.

Apparently the word has gone out to teachers to play team ball and not rock the boat, especially now. Teachers who just Thursday were willing to talk about perceived safety problems, suddenly called to have their stories retracted. Their retractions resulted in the eliminations of parts of stories and comments on those potential hazards in The Times. Parts of the stories that were eliminated included comments on such things as rooms with one exit and poor storage of equipment.

I can't say what will happen with these seemingly valid complaints. Hopefully the situations will be quietly corrected.

This situation is perhaps indicative of what often happens in small communities and in the rooms of small newspapers. Frequently small newspapers are called upon to serve as moderators or "peacemakers" to smooth out the rough edges for the benefit of the community. It could be said that we act like cheerleaders for a small team.

Our situation in regard to complaints and retractions from teachers is just one example of trying to smooth over the rough edges. Other recent examples include minimizing reports of arguments about the lagoons between councilmen, playing down reports of setbacks at the fiber fuel plant, not reporting a few firings at a local factory, and not reporting that city government failed to notify the media of a finance committee meeting, which resulted in the cancellation of consideration being given to the Barzen street project, apparently because of the objections of one local company.

That approach may be rationalized as it appears to serve the general public interest. However, there also comes a time when more detailed reporting of controversial subjects serves to encourage enlivened discussion of the topic. That discussion should lead to a better understanding of the problem and hopefully a better solution.

But as of late, I've begun to wonder whether we in the media are doing our job. Such a criticism weighs especially heavy on me. This entire situation reminds me that disasters not only create outward scars, but hidden ones too. What worse a disaster can be imagined than the loss of life or the loss of freedom of speech?

Just An Observation

A couple of items came in the mail last week that caused us to think just a little bit about how people do things. No big deal, perhaps, but they are interesting situations nonetheless.

First to arrive was the "Dairy Center News", published by the American Dairy Association of Minnesota. This organization uses money obtained from check-offs on milk sales by producers to finance promotional efforts to sell more product. The concept is a good one.

The ADA and dairymen in general have complained from time to time about the importation of dairy products into the United States and the competition those products provide for the U.S. dairy industry. The concerns are legitimate and we have no problem with their being expressed.

But the front of the newsletter includes a photo of a couple who won a new car—the grand prize in the ADA sweepstakes contest. The prize auto was an $11,000 Nissan station wagon—manufactured in Japan. It seems there may be a bit of inconsistency here somewhere. It is wrong for consumers to buy dairy products from other countries but right for a dairy promotion group to be a part of promoting a foreign-made car?

Just an observation.

The second item we received that caused some reflection was a news release from the Minnesota department of transportation about a new maintenance building being built at Crookston. The project was to cost $1,277,000, and that's a nice-sized project for any community.

The general contractor for the project is from Fargo, as is the mechanical contractor. Plumbing and heating contractor is from Grand Forks. Only the electrical contractor is from Minnesota. Should there be any extra effort for a Minnesota governmental agency to utilize Minnesota businesses, or is the best bang for the buck simply the lowest bidder?

Just an observation.
What do you think?

Fishing Is Big Business

Following statistics were provided by Richard L. Hassinger, fisheries chief for the Minnesota department of natural resources, and show the involvement of the DNR in the state's fisheries program:

Fishermen in Minnesota enjoy the scenic beauties and natural wonders on more than 5,000 fish lakes and 15,000 miles of streams including 2,000 miles of trout streams.

The national survey of fishing, hunting and wildlife-associated recreation for 1980 indicated that the 1.7 million licensed anglers in Minnesota fished a total of 22 million days in 1980 and caught more than 250 million fish. These anglers spent $515 million including $226 million for travel and $289 million for equipment. The average fisherman went fishing 13 days in 1980 and spent about $369 pursuing the sport, and average of $26.00 per day. Fishing in Minnesota is big business.

Fishing pressure in Minnesota waters is intense with more anglers per capita than any other state. Minnesota ranks third in overall fishing license sales, trailing only California and Texas and these states have much higher populations. Minnesota also leads the nation in sales of nonresident fishing licenses with nearly 400,000 sold.

Management of this vast resource and large user group is vested in the Department of Natural Resources, Division of fish and wildlife. The management program is supported entirely by license fees collected from the anglers using the resource. With an annual budget of approximately $8 million and a staff of 200 employees at 27 area offices, 5 coldwater hatcheries and 14 walleye hatcheries, programs have been developed to enhance and continue the tradition of sport angling in Minnesota.

The $8 million budget is expended in habitat protection, fish propagation and lake and stream assessment. Other activities include rehabilitation of lakes, rough fish control and commercial harvest of non-game species, research, and maintenance of facilites.

Minnesota leads the nation in production of walleyes with more than 600 million walleye eggs taken on an annual basis. Nearly 200 million fry are stocked in lakes in addition to 400 million stocked in rearing ponds from which nearly 4 million, 5 inch walleye fingerlings, weighing 126 thousand pounds are planted in lakes throughout the state.

Minnesota stocks nearly 3 million northern pike on an annual basis and has a major trout and salmon rearing program with a total of 3.8 million trout and salmon planted, including nearly 2.8 million stocked in Lake Superior. Other programs include rearing of catfish, musky, and hybrid musky, panfish hybrids, such as the tiger musky and the splake.

The major emphasis in protecting and distributing the harvest of fish includes regulations such as seasons, bag limits and methods of take which are important in achieving the goal of the fisheries program to protect and manage fisheries resources for long term recreational and economic benefits to the state.

Borrowed Nonsense

"Did you go to the doctor, Bill?"
"Yes, I surely did."
"Did he find out what you had?"
"Not exactly, but he came pretty close."
"What do you mean by that?"
"Well, I had $50 with me and the bill was $47."

Psychiatrist: "Now, then, do you mind telling me why you got off the table and ran from the operating room."

Patient: "Because the nurse said, 'An appendectomy is a simple procedure so be brave and stop that trembling.'"

Psychiatrist: "But she was trying to reassure you."

Patient: "Me? She was talking to the doctor who was going to do the operation."

Look on the bright side: If it wasn't for optimists, pessimists wouldn't know how unhappy they really are.

Flattery, like rare and expensive perfume, should be smelled, not swallowed.

Letters to the Editor

To The Editor:

The outpouring of concern and generosity from the Crookston and surrounding communities following the Opera Block fire was unusual and impressive! Calls to the Care and Share center in Crookston offering help and housing were constant. Donations of food, money, furnishings and toiletries were almost overwhelming.

The staff at the Care and Share center, including the Holy Family Shoppe, would like to say a sincere "thanks", to all who volunteered time, creativity and the variety of material assistance to the fire victims who had lost everything. Such generosity allows the work of the center to continue, and enables the community to take appropriate care of the needy in its midst.

Sincere gratitude,
The staff of the Care and Share Center
Crookston, MN

To The Editor:

May I introduce myself. I am Arlen Merrill, former employee of the city of Thief River Falls. I received a back injury while working for the sanitation department, throwing garbage bags and lifting everything the citizens of Thief River Falls threw away. I did receive medical treatment and also surgery on my back. At the present time, I am not able to lift anything over 20 pounds.

I loved my job and had high hopes of staying at it for the rest of my working days. But now, I find myself out of a job and with a 20 per cent disability. I want to work! I do feel the city of Thief River Falls owes me my job. I have two sons to bring up. My wife works nights to try to help out, but we aren't making it. There is a good chance that we will have to go on welfare. This is what we don't want. My wife and I are proud people. I have looked for a job, but there is nobody who wants a man in this condition. I can't help but feel there is a job somewhere in one of the city's departments that I can handle.

In my case, I don't know if there are any other steps to be taken, but I am going to keep on fighting for my job and livelihood. It was unfair for the city to terminate me. May I say something without sounding like I'm patting myself on the back? I was a good employee. I was never late for work. I did my share and a little more. I am sure my fellow workers will vouch for this.

I did receive a settlement from the City of Thief River Falls, but only enough to take care of the debts that we accumulated while I was unemployed. My health insurance that the city previously paid for in the amount of $214 per month was discontinued, and I had to pay this out of my own pocket each month. As of now, I have had to drop it because it is too expensive and food on the table comes first. I have not had any income since last August.

I gave 12 good years and part of my back to the city. The City of Thief River Falls should stand behind their employees better than this. I am willing to sign any waiver or whatever necessary to release the City of Thief River Falls of any responsibility of a recurrence of the old injury on a job that I could handle.

I thank you for reading this letter. You be the judge if you think this was fair or not? Please call your Mayor or city alderman.

Thank you,
-s- Arlen Merrill
City Employee out of his job.

To The Editor:

I want to thank the people of Pennington county for their generous support of Daffodil Days. This special event sponsored by the Minnesota chapter of the American Cancer society was held March 30 to April 4. This year with your support we increased the number of daffodils distributed by 22 per cent. This means more money for cancer research and services.

Without the help of volunteers nothing happens. The following graciously assisted in the event: Henry Holte, Roger Tunberg, Ron S. Hanson, Gordy Reierson, Martin and Louise Solseng, John Feragen, Elvin Nilsen, Fred Rohde, Linda Goulet, Cindy Cedergren, Arlyce Twistol, Cal Lindberg, Christine Burnham, Jodi Carter, Rosie Gustafson, Sharon Iverson, Carol Moschner and Bonnie Pederson;

Also Clarice Collins along with her scheduled volunteers — Irene Johnson, Jan Kramer, Mary Jane Mandt, Gelene Peltier, Mert Wilson, Bonnie Tunberg, Evie Womack, Marge Bacon, Al Bacon, Alice Patten, Sunny Wold, Eleanore Forberg, Marian Prichard, Julie Mattson, Mae Isaacson, Ruth Wilkinson, Paulette Grindeland, Jerry Moyer, Ardy Tunberg, Millie Horien, Jan Peterson, Dee Anderson, Dolores Wengeler, Val Chommie, Mae Hjelle, Wanda Murphy; Vi Sullivan, Marcia Padilla, Alice Wassink, Lorette Newbury, Verna Wold, Alyce Sevre and Karen Young.

Cordially,

To The Editor:

At this time of the year when we remember the crucifixion and death of Jesus, it brings to my mind other little crucifixions and deaths that occur in our lives. As I remember how Jesus was betrayed and hung on the cross to die, I also think about how our school children were betrayed, as well as their parents, by people we thought we could trust.

I am referring to the actions of the Plummer school board and their leader. They like to call it "pair and share" with the Oklee school. We all know what it is even if we are mostly just "dumb farmers."

Our girls basketball team went all the way to the regions this year and how are those girls repaid for their efforts? Their name is stripped from them and they are exiled to another district to play from now on! Why? I ask you six school board members from Plummer, many of whom are my next door neighbors. Be honest — if you can anymore! Could the price have been 30 pieces of silver?

-s- Bonnie Wichterman
Plummer, MN

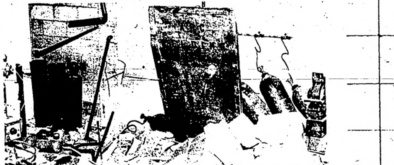
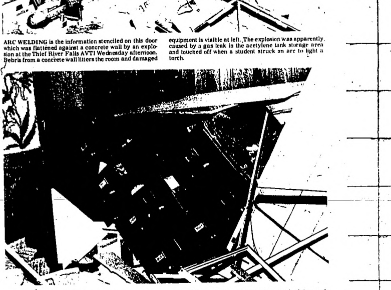
DALE WENNBERG of Wennberg's Inc. and Thief River Falls city councilman, takes a look at damage from an explosion Wednesday at the Thief River Falls AVTI. The explosion was caused by faulty equipment on acetylene tanks pictured at bottom. One person had minor injuries from the explosion.



ARC WELDING is the information stenciled on this door which was flattened against a concrete wall by an explosion at the Thief River Falls AVTI Wednesday afternoon. Debris from a concrete wall litters the room and damaged equipment is visible at left. The explosion was apparently caused by a gas leak in the acetylene tank storage area and touched off when a student struck an arc to light a torch.



JUMBLED FILES. The explosion at the Thief River Falls AVTI last Wednesday afternoon did extensive damage that will take months to repair and hundreds of thousands of dollars. Large sections of a wall and part of the ceiling will have to be replaced entirely.

UNTOUCHED. A file cabinet stands untouched in the middle of a large amount of debris caused by an explosion at the Thief River Falls AVTI last Wednesday afternoon. The explosion is believed to have been caused by faulty equipment. A gas leak from acetylene tanks filled a small storage room and leaked into the welding room where a student, unaware of the danger, struck an arc and the gas exploded.

PRAIRIE RAMBLING

by Gretchen Beito

Last time I wrote about roots that this community has provided for our growing children. This week the topic is "Wings", or the advantages of the Thief River Falls area that help kids grow with not only confidence, but grace.

WINGS

Youth need freedom to discover their world and themselves, for only when they have some latitude can they first try their wings. The Thief River Falls area provides an environment for the first taste of independence.

For each of our three children, a 50-mile bike trip with friends has been their coming of age within the family. The oldest was the one who dreamed up the idea about the time he entered his teens. He was a little young to be off on his own, but when we were satisfied that he knew the rules of the road and that he could take care of emergency repairs on his bicycle, off he went with three buddies on his adventure.

We could not have let him go at all had we lived where traffic was heavy. Yet, we were apprehensive. That is why we appreciated the folks who called to tell us that they had happened to see our son and friends safely pedaling along the road. It is good to live in a place where people recognize our children.

We moved to the country that year, partly to provide a place where our kids would have healthy work to do. They had lots of chores in the garden and yard.

But perhaps of more value than work was the freedom that came from outdoor living. Every child needs time to just "kick the can." To dream. To wander. To make up his own fund. We thought it was important for our children to have times with nothing to do — no lessons, practices, organized activities, chores.

I think of the happy shouts we would hear on warm summer evenings. It would be our daughter and her friends, floating together down the lazy river on tractor tire inner tubes. A flotilla of kids would drift by, paddling now and then with their hands. They had no cares except perhaps to figure out how to wade back through the slit at shore.

As wonderful as the memories of soft summer days are, I think that for our active children, winter was the season they waited for. Maybe they liked it because of the freedom of playing in and on the vast quantities of snow. Snow was perfect to jump into, to slide upon, to make tracks in, to fall down in.

Although they lived on the prairie, our kids hardly knew there were not any hills. They could use any handy pile of snow for a mountain. When they were little, they would struggle up the steep face of snow piles and would poise less than a second before they would hurtle down the other side of their sleds, only to trudge right back up.

And snow was great for pretending. With footsteps quiet and slow, they would walk in a soundless space. On sunny winter days there were unlimited possibilities for rolling snowballs on and on, for making stoutish snow men, for creating snow houses and forts. Once we built a snow horse the children could ride.

The frozen rivers gave our children a chance to be independent in their early teens. Sometimes in early winter they skated up and down the ice-covered rivers. They learned to handle machines at an early age because of snowmobiles.

Each child needs to discover not only something that he or she likes to do, but also to find that something that he or she can do well. That is why the town needs to provide a wide range of choices for kids. But an important experience might not be available. For instance, comprehensive skating instruction has not always been given here. But about a decade ago a group of parents decided all children should have a chance to learn to skate well. They went ahead against great odds to establish a recreational skating program. I realize now how the perseverance and hard work of those parents has benefitted our town's children.

I think back to the time when our daughter was about 10 years old. I can still see her and her good friends circling around the new ice arena. Their smiles were wide as they skated about in their new purple-spangled costumes while music played and crowds of people looked on. The spotlight was on them. They did not know it, but they were being given a chance to develop grace.

Perhaps roots are the first thing we think of when we think of what a kid needs from his home town. But wings are just as important. Small towns provide opportunities for children to use initiative as well as to develop self-confidence as they try new things on their own.

It is not surprising, then, to read that when the U.S. National Aeronautics and Space Administration chose the first 22 astronauts, almost all came from small towns.

Explosion Rips AVTI Welding Dep't. Wednesday

dards. Supt. Ruberto said there were things they would like to change but they just didn't have the money to make those adjustments.

Supt. Ruberto said if they had the chance to do it all again, he knows he wouldn't have the acetylene storage room inside the building. In fact, he said, he won't ever let the tanks be stored in the building again. He added that a great many other schools were watching what happened here.

Location of the cosmetology lab and farm management offices near the welding room and acetylene tank storage rooms was an after thought. Ruberto said the school was cramped for space when they moved the classes and offices to the area. Of course, all modifications were approved, he said. However, the explosion has given them the opportunity to take a close look at how the rooms are designed. He thought some changes might be necessary.

State architectural experts and structural engineers visited the AVTI to inspect the blast site early Friday. Supt. Ruberto said they concluded there was some structural damage on the east side of the building. Approximately 25 feet of wall in the blast area will have to be replaced, from ground level to ceiling. Also needing replacement will be about 100 feet of the roof and a non-load-bearing divider.

These repairs will cost hundreds of thousands of dollars and take months to complete, Ruberto said. The school really won't know exactly how much until much later.

Ruberto said the school does have insurance. He noted, however, that there is a $10,000 deductible. He said he thought the state might help with some of the costs. But completion of repairs to the building and finding replacements for all of the damaged equipment will take months.

TRF Boys, Girls At Northwest Indoor . . .

Bemidji Wins Track Titles

Bemidji boys and girls were both winners Thursday in the annual Northwest Indoor high school track meet at the Winter Shows Building in Crookston.

The Lumberjacks won both titles easily. Bemidji girls collected 95 points, followed by Crookston with 45, Roseau 35, East Grand Forks 16, and Thief River Falls 14. Bemidji boys scored 189 points, followed by East Grand Forks with 87, Crookston 81, Thief River Falls 57, Bemidji junior varsity 31, and Roseau 12.

It was the 1987 season opener for the Thief River Falls girls. The Thief River Falls boys were making their second start of the year.

Low point total by the Thief River Falls girls wasn't unexpected, admitted coach Tom Schafer, whose Prowlers are young and inexperienced. "It went pretty much the way we thought it would," he acknowledged.

Top place finish for the Thief River Falls girls was a second in the 8-lap relay, where junior Cindy Kruta, freshmen Leigh Solheim and Nenna Arnold, and junior Peggy Cruz were clocked in 4:09. Cruz also had a third in the 800 meter run, while Kruta placed fourth in both the 400 meters and 60 meter hurdles.

Thief River Falls boys, who found it tough to score points in a strong Shocky Strand Invitational Field at Moorhead State University the previous Friday, faired better against Northwest Indoor rivals.

"We're really pleased," said Tim Olson, coach of the Thief River Falls boys. "The kids were really fired up for this one. They were ready to run. It was fun."

Senior Paul Brandt and sophomore Rick Looker combined for Thief River Falls' top efforts with identical 1-3 finishes in the 60 and 200 meter sprints. Brandt won the 60 in 7.26 and took the 200 in 25.01. Looker was third in both races with a 7.51 in the 60 and a 25.37 in the 200.

Thief River Falls also had a third place finish in the 4x2 lap relay where senior Kyle Kisch, freshman Luke Soine, junior Scott Grove, and junior Brian Christianson ran a 3:28.15.

One of the Prowlers' biggest surprises came in the shot put, where senior Joe Drevlow placed sixth with a toss of 42-1½. His previous career best was 34 feet.

Thief River Falls boys will be back at the Winter Show Building Tuesday for the 4 p.m. Pirate Relays. Both Thief River Falls teams will be at the University of North Dakota Thursday for the 10 a.m. Sioux Relays in Grand Forks.

Tennis Team Splits EGF Matches

Thief River Falls boys split a pair of high school tennis decisions at East Grand Forks Thursday, loping to the host Green Wave 5-2, but beating North Sub-Region 8AA rival Moorhead 4-3.

Class A East Grand Forks swept all four singles matches, and added a victory at No. 1 doubles in beating the Prowlers. Thief River Falls finally broke through with wins at No. 2 doubles, where freshmen Jay Opdahl and Kevin Holmes beat Eric Kalenze and An Nguyan 7-5, 6-4; and at No. 3 doubles, where junior Troy Peterson and freshman Jeremy Anderson defeated Vu Pearson and Joel Cummings 6-1, 7-5.

Moorhead also beat Thief River Falls in the top match-ups as the Spuds won at No. 1 and No. 2 singles, and at No. 1 doubles, but the rest went to the Prowers as they broke into the win column for the first time this spring.

Junior Grant Larson gave the Prowlers their first singles win of the afternoon by beating Moorhead's Aaron Nygaard 7-6, 6-4 at No. 3 Thief River Falls freshman Tom Brouse won by default at No. 4 singles against the shorthanded Spuds.

Opdahl and Holmes won again at No. 2 doubles, beating Moorhead's Greg Anderson and Tyler Kilde 6-2, 6-4, while Peterson and Anderson won again at No. 3 doubles by beating the Spuds' Greg Lee and Chad Osterdorf 6-1, 6-4.

"Our second and third doubles played very well for us," said Thief River Falls coach Whitey Olson.

Thief River Falls will be in Bemidji Tuesday for a 2 p.m. match against the Lumberjacks and a 3:15 p.m. match against Grand Rapids. The Prowlers, who lost a 4-3 season-opening decision to Crookston last Tuesday, are 1-2 for the year.

Area Sports Briefs

Youth Baseball Meeting Scheduled Tuesday

Thief River Falls Youth Baseball Association will hold an informational meeting for players ages 7-to-15 and their parents Tuesday, April 14, at 7 p.m. in Room 507 at Franklin Middle School.

TRF Baseball Team Will Have Tough Opener

Ada will be the 1987 season-opening opponent for the Thief River Falls high school baseball team, and according to the Norman County Index, the Vikings will be a formidable foe when they host the Prowlers April 23.

"We look good on paper," Ada coach Jim Everson told the Index. The Vikings will be two deep at every position, he explained. They'll have good speed in the outfield, and a hard-hitting offensive attack.

Addition of four players from Norman County West adds even more strength to the Ada line-up, pointed out Everson. Among the West High additions is the highly-touted Brett Storsved, an outstanding athlete who led the Cougars to the 1987 Minnesota Class A state baseball tournament title.

Storsved will be a welcome addition to the Ada pitching staff, said Everson, and will also roam center field for the Vikings.

Ada will have an edge on Thief River Falls in the experience department since the Prowlers' season opener will be the Vikings' fourth game of the 1987 season.

Thief River Falls' home opener is scheduled the next afternoon, April 24, when the Prowlers host Hallock-Kennedy in a 4 p.m. Friday match-up at the fairgrounds diamond.

RLF Will Host Softball Tournament

Fourteenth annual Rabbit Early Bird Invitational men's slow pitch softball tournament will be held in Red Lake Falls Sunday, April 26.

Entry fee for the 16-team event is $60. Tournament director is Bob Philion, Box 111, Red Lake Falls, MN 56750; telephone 253-2042.

UMC Plans Football, Strength Clinic Sessions

Early registration is encouraged for the 1987 football and strength training camp July 28-30 at the University of Minnesota-Crookston (UMC).

The camp is for students who will be entering grades 6 through 12. Session I is from 9 a.m. to 12 noon for grades 6 through 8, and Session II is from 1 to 5 p.m. for grades 9 through 12.

"The philosophy of the camp is to teach the correct fundamentals of football and strength training," said UMC's head football coach Jim Sims. "A majority of the camp instruction will be devoted to individual work and improvement within the group."

Basic and advanced individual offensive and defensive techniques will be taught, along with instruction and participation in a football flexibility and strength training program.

Camp staff includes Sims; Jim LeClair, former Cincinnati Bengals All-Pro; and Rick Spaeth, an All-American at UMC and now a defensive starter at St. Cloud State University.

To receive further information and a camp application, write to: Jim Sims, Director, Football-Strength Training Camp, University of Minnesota-Crookston, Crookston, MN 56716; or call 281-6510, ext. 410.

Forest Giants

In 1962 the Department of Natural Resources launched a big tree hunt to locate and identify the largest tree for each species in the state. The participation was excellent and widespread. Some interesting finds were made.

Tallest tree happens to be a 128-foot white spruce near Littlefork. The tree with the largest diameter is a cottonwood near Faribault. This tree is more than nine feet in diameter.

Minnesota's largest jack pine happens to be in Kittson County near Lake Bronson State Park. This tree happens to take national honors as well. The state record balsam fir stood in the Lost River State Forest northwest of Warroad. That's right, stood (past tense). This 94-foot tall giant withstood the onslaught of storms for nearly a century before it fell to a storm in 1986.

Another Roseau County record balsam fir, more than two feet in diameter, reigned as state champion until a devatating storm destroyed it in 1973.

Champions in the big tree registry are determined from nominations on a point system. A series of three measurements are required and totaled to determine points awareded to an individual tree, including circumference in inches at 4.5 feet above ground; height in feet; and one-quarter of its crown spread.

If two trees have identical scores, the tree with the largest trunk circumference becomes the champion.

Trees not surpassing the champion are filed as "contenders".

Frequently, champions fall victims to storms, disease, or the ax. When this occurs, the largest contender becomes the new champion.

The public is invited to join the search for Minnesota's champion trees. Contact your local DNR Forestry office to obtain more information or report large trees.

Novak, Johnson To Play In All-Star Tournament

Scott Novak and Dave Johnson, a pair of high school seniors from Thief River Falls, have been named to the Team Northwest roster for the fourth annual Johnson's High School All-Star Hockey Tournament, scheduled to be held this week in Chicago, IL.

Novak and Johnson were selected for the Minnesota Hockey Schools-affiliated event after attending a weekend try-out camp in Rochester. Novak, who saw action as a center, wing and defenseman for the Prowlers, will skate as a center in the tournament designed for graduating high school seniors. Johnson will remain at defense, his familiar spot in the Prowlers' line-up.

Sixteen teams will compete in the two-division tournament that will feature entries from Alaska, New Jersey, Indiana, Wisconsin, California, Illinois, Michigan, Massachuttes, New York, Pennsylvania, and Minnesota, plus New England, Team Detroit, Team Chicago, Team Metro, and Team Northwest.

Divisional games will start Wednesday and continue through Saturday. Third place and championship games will be played Sunday. Games will be played in surburban Franklin Park.

Ron and Carol Novak will drive Scott and Dave to Chicago for the tournament. The trip will also include a visit to Wrigley Field for a Chicago Cubs game.

Other Section 8 players in the tournament include David Marvin, Shane McFarlane, Jared Baines, and Greg Knox of Warroad; Steve Ross, Roseau; Paul Schwab, Crookston; ad Dan Alto, Alexandria. Mike Blank of Grand Forks Red River was also selected for the event.

Twins Plan Family Promotions

Minnesota Twins have announced plans for Family Day promotions tying together tickets, hot dogs and soft drinks. On each of the 13 family dates, fans can purchase a family package for $12 which includes four upper-deck general admission tickets, four regular-size hot dogs and four regular-size soft drinks, normally a $24 value. The Twins have teamed with the Metropolitan Sports Facilities Commission, operator of the Metrodome, and Volume Services, the Metrodome concessionaire, to offer this special half-price package.

Fans must purchase this package at least one day in advance, and must purchase it through the Twins, either by mail, at the advance ticket windows located at the Metrodome, or by phone through the Twins charge line at (612) 375-1116. There is a minimum ticket requirement of four and there is no maximum purchase requirements. For every ticket purchase above the original four, the cost is $3 which includes one upper-deck general admission ticket, one hot dog and one soft drink. All hot dog and soft drink certificates may be redeemed in any regular Metrodome concession stand on the date posted on the certificate.

"The Twins have designed this promotion to ensure quality, family entertainment at a reduced price," said Twins President Jerry Bell. "When a family of four can attend a Major League Baseball game for only $12 including concessions, we feel that we have created an entertainment value attractive to all fans throughout the Upper Midwest."

On each of the 13 Family Dates during the 1987 season, all tickets will be discounted by $1 creating a scale of $8 for lower-deck reserved, $6 for upper-deck reserved, $4 for lower left-field general admission and $2 for upper-deck outfield general admission.

— Outdoor News —

Fish and Wildlife Legislative Alliance is asking the Minnesota Legislature to dedicate $60 million a year from the state sales tax to finance the Re-Invest in Minnesota program. Alliance spokesmen say this amount must be alloted to support the long term effort needed to restore Minnesota's sport fisheries and wildlife resources.

The Alliance is supporting legislation proposed by Representative Willard Munger and Senator Steve Novak to amend the 1986 RIM law and finance it with a total of $36 million of state bonds for the next two years.

Pioneers Split First Ball Games

Northland Community College slow pitch softball team opened its 1987 season under new head coach Patty Chiodo with a pair of doubleheader splits on the road over the weekend.

Slow-starting Northland lost a 4-3 season-opener at Mesabi Friday afternoon, but rebounded to win Game 2 by a 12-4 margin. Saturday at Vermilion, Northland won a 16-14 first-game slugfest, but lost the second game 10-9 in the bottom of the seventh inning.

Janelle Lorsung, a sophomore from Waubun, had six base hits in the Saturday twinbill — five singles and a double. Tricia Armstrong, a sophomore from Thief River Falls, homered.

Northland will host rival University of Minnesota-Crookston Tuesday in the Pioneers' 1987 home opener. The 3 p.m. doubleheader will be played on the Northland diamond located behind the campus.

Armstrong and Shari Larson, another Thief River Falls sophomore, will serve as Northland co-captains this spring.

Rest of the roster includes Cherie Deihl, Annette Kofstad, Connie Geatz, Sheila Jaeger, Cheryl Otto, Sharman Monkman, Kari Jensen, Becky Knutson, Leslie Grisanti, Elaine Hanson, Alane Elleson, and Martha Torres. Geatz is the Northland pitcher.

MSHSL News

Spring sports activity programs sponsored by the Minnesota State High School League are in full swing with more than 40,000 young men and women actively engaged in one or more of the sports of girls and boys golf, girls and boys track and field, boys tennis, girls softball, and baseball, reports Larry Larson of the MSHSL staff.

Seasons began in those sports in March and will culminate in early June with state tournaments and meets.

Largest participation in spring sports is track and field where nearly 20,000 youngsters are involved from more than 375 high schools. Other participations by schools in other sports are as follows: baseball (345 schools, 9,000 participants); softball (269 schools, 6,900 participants); girls and boys golf (272 schools, 5,900 participants); and boys tennis (154 schools, 3,000 participants).

Following is a schedule of state tournaments and meets for spring, 1987:

Boys and girls golf — Class A June 1-2, St. Cloud Country Club; Class AA June 3-4, Majestic Oaks Golf Course, Ham Lake.

Softball — Class AA June 2-3, Fridley Community Park; Class A June 4-5, Whitney Fields, St. Cloud.

Boys tennis — Class A, AA teams June 3-4, 98th Street Tennis Club, Bloomington; Class A, AA singles and doubles June 5-6, 98th Street Tennis Club, Bloomington.

Boys and girls track and field — Class A and Class AA June 5-6, Carl Tonn Field, Osseo.

Baseball — Class AA quarterfinals June 9, St. Paul Municipal Stadium, with semifinals, finals June 12, Metrodome; Class A quarterfinals June 9, St. Cloud Municipal Stadium, with semifinals, finals June 13, Metrodome.

Tournament Attendance

Attendance at the six state tournaments sponsored by the Minnesota State High School League during the month of March surpassed the 300,000 total for a fifth straight year in 1987. Attendance in 1982 fell shy of the 300,000 mark when 299,481 attended.

Always sold-out state hockey tournament led the way with a six-session, 11-game total of 100,215 admissions. Next highest was the state boys basketball tournament where 83,512 spectators attended the 22 games in the Class AA and Class A tournaments.

Greatest percentage of increase in attendance was at the girls state basketball tournament where there were 5,778 more admissions than during the previous year.

A complete summary of the past two years at each of the events follows:

Wrestling — 63,224 (1987); 63,395 (1986).
Girls gymnastics — 8,193 (1987); 7,731 (1986).
Hockey — 100,215 (1987); 100,824 (1986).

DNR NEWS

Department of Natural Resources (DNR) Fisheries Division will continue to impose strict controls on the importation and rearing of fish in the state in order to protect native fish populations.

"The protection of native habitat and wild fish species in Minnesota is of primary concern to DNR fish managers who are required to protect and administer the state's $700 million sportfishing industry," said Richard Hassinger, DNR chief of Fisheries.

"The department will continue to promote and actively support fish farming in Minnesota, and insure its compatibility with native fish resources," Hassinger said. "But, since we firmly believe the importation of exotic fish could seriously damage our state's tourist industry, their controlled rearing will not be permitted without the most careful, project-by-project review, including stringent controls to ensure against them escaping into Minnesota waters."

Hassinger explained that the department is very concerned about current legislation promoting the introduction of the native African fish, tilapia, into the state. "The fish has escaped from fish farms in Pennsylvania and created problems there," Hassinger added.

He added that recent media reports suggesting that the department has changed its policy on tilapia and fish management in general "are misleading."

"The DNR has not modified its policy at all with regard to exotic fish rearing or propagation," Hassinger said. "We will continue to consider each of these requests individually according to its merits."

Land Donations

One of the largest single land donations ever received for wildlife and scientific and natural area purposes was announced recently by International Telephone & Telegraph Services Corp. (ITT) of Minneapolis. The company donated seven parcels totalling 1,272 acres in Aitkin County to the DNR to help protect valuable wildlife habitat and critical nesting habitat for two of Minnesota's rare birds.

Six of these parcels have been designated as state wildlife management areas (WMAs) and will be open to public hunting, trapping and other wildlife-related recreational activities. The other tract has been established as a state scientific and natural area (SNA).

The wildlife lands are located on the Wold, Lawler, Kimberly, and Newstrom WMAs totalling 1,872 acres. "The donated parcels contain significant wildlife habitat and will improve access to other state lands," said DNR Area Wildlife Manager ave Dickey. The tract on the Wold WMA contains part of an important deer wintering area, while the Newstrom and Kimberly WMA tracts have good potential for sharp-tailed grouse management, according to Dickey.

Remaining 400 acres have been designated as the McGregor Marsh SNA. The open marshes on this tract contain superb habitat for the yellow rail and sharp-tailed sparrow. Bob Djupstrom, SNA supervisor, said that both birds are officially classified as species of special concern in Minnesota. "The extensive marshes on this parcel have long been a favorite spot for birders throughout the midwest to observe these uncommon and rarely-seen birds," Djupstrom said. "Establishment of this area as an SNA will help insure the protection and perpetuation of these two rare species."

Two of these donations, the Wold WMA and McGregor SNA, qualified as donations to the Reinvest in Minnesota (RIM) — Critical Habitat Matching Program.

This unique program matches private contributions with state funds to double the ability to acquire and develop critical fish and wildlife habitat. "The two ITT donations to the Critical Habitat Matching Program were among six other recent private land donations to this program, totalling 1,031 acres," explained program coordinator Kim Hennings. Donations to the program may be in the form of cash, land easements, or pledges.

The DNR expressed appreciation to ITT for helping protect a part of the state's remaining wildlife habitat.

Private Reforestation

In the next few years, the number of acres of trees planted on private Minnesota forest land is expected to approach the record levels reached during the federal soil bank program of the 1950-60s.

In 1961 — the peak year of soil bank — about 30 million tree seedlings were planted on 25,000 acres of private land (planting densities were around 1,200 trees per acres during that era.) This year, an estimated 11 million tree seedlings are expected to be shipped from state Department of Natural Resources (DNR) nurseries.

About 18,000 acres will be planted, based on current planting densities averaging 600 trees per acre and the demand for seedlings in 1988 is expected to be even higher, according to DNR forestry officials.

While tree planting on Non-Industrial Private Forest (NIPF) land has steadily increased since 1980, the large increases projected for 1987-88 are largely the result of the Federal Conservation Reserve Program (CRP). This spring, nearly 50 per cent of all trees planted on NIPF land will be under CRP contract.

CRP provision of the 1985 federal farm bill is the most significant conservation legislation involving private farmlands since the soil bank program 30 years ago. CRP is a voluntary, land-retirement program that takes highly-erodible cropland out of production and replaces it with a more permanent cover of grass, shrubs and trees.

The program is designed to reduce soil erosion, increase wildlife habitat, improve water quality, increase timber production, reduce surplus commodities and assist the farm economy.

Farmland owners submit lease payment bids to county Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) offices during sign-up periods. The ASCS reviews bids based on land eligibility criteria and payment rates. Accepted bids contracted for 10 years must follow an approved conservation action plan.

Land owners have the option to plant any combination of grass, shrubs and trees. In return for retiring their cropland, landowners receive annual lease payments based on the bids they submit. They are also reimbursed for the majority of the costs of establishing the new cover of vegetation.

CRP is expected to be larger than the earlier soil bank program in terms of acres retired and trees planted. The CRP's national goal of 45 million acres retired from crop production is 5 per cent higher than the 28.7 million acres idled under the soil bank program. The national CRP goal to plant 5 million acres of trees is more than the total for the Civilian Conservation Corps of the 30s and the soil bank program combined! There has been a great response to CRP in Minnesota due to the cooperative efforts of federal and state agencies to spread the word about CRP to the state's farmers.

During 1986, three CRP sign-up periods were held, with a total of 667,000 acres of erodible cropland contracted for retirement from production. Roughly 10,000 of these acres are being planted with trees and-or shrubs. Nationally, Minnesota's the leader in number of farms enrolled in CRP, is third highest in total number of acres accepted, and among the highest in percentage of eligible acres enrolled.

Recent totals for Minnesota's fourth sign-up period held in February indicate that about 1 million more acres have been bid for acceptance into the program.

DNR Division of Forestry has committed time and resources to the CRP effort. Priorities have been temporarily shifted to take full advantage of this unique opportunity and personnel have been increased or reassigned to handle applications, write conservation plans and administer approved plans.

Forestry division resources have also been redirected to meet the increased demand for planting material and equipment.

While the potential benefits of tree planting for erosion control, water quality, and wildlife are well documented, it is also designed to increase timber management on NIPF land. Although 10,000 acres from the first three sign-up periods were designated for planting, this represents only 1.5 per cent of total CRP acres in Minnesota. Another 1 million acres bid during the last sign-up, yet to be committed to a cover type, represent an opportunity to enter more private land into this private forest land base.

Trees provide many conservation benefits. Perhaps the most important is that farmlands planted to trees under conservation programs have hsitorically been more likely to remain idle after programs expire. Approximately 90 per cent of acres planted with trees under the soil bank program have remained forested, while most of the acres planted to grass have been returned to crop production. If long-term retirement of erodible cropland is the primary emphasis of CRP, trees offer the most effective option.

Under the state's Reinvest In Minnesota (RIM) reserve program, about 1,000-2,000 acres will be planted in trees. The federal Agricultural Conservation Program providing reforestration cost sharing and technical assistance, will be planting trees on 5,000 acres during 1987. The federal Forestry Incentives Program (which also provides technical and cost sharing assistance on more productive sites) will be reforesting approximately 1,000 acres in 1987. (Natural regeneration of harvested lands accounts for another 4,000 acres of new forest this year). Land owners who do not qualify for CRP, but still would like to establish wildlife habitat or forest cover, should consider one of these conservation program alternatives.

Donation Made To DNR

Lac qui Parle Wildlife Management Area (WMA) recently announced it had received a $300 donation from the Milan Rod and Gun Club for establishment of new tree planting in the area.

"We really appreciate this donation, since with it we will be able to establish and develop another needed winter cover area for deer and pheasants in our wildlife management area," said Wildlife Area Manager Kenneth Bonnema.

Shoreland Regulations

A number of major changes are being made by the Department of Natural Resources (DNR) to proposed revisions of the Shoreland Management Program following review by interested individuals, local government officials and organizations over the last few months.

Proposed shoreland regulations revisions are being changed following public review, which has included a series of 23 public meetings held at 12 locations around the state, several meetings with interested organizations and written comments according to DNR Shoreland Program Manager Steve Prestin.

Major areas of change include:

+Revisions to standards for protecting "bluff" or steep slope areas so development can occur in some of these areas if properly designed to reduce erosion.

+Standards for designing access lots in new subdivisions to serve back lots which lack water frontage are being revised to reduce sizing requirements and provide flexibility for several different types of access lots.

+Dropping several proposals for managing agricultural use impacts because recently-passed state and federal programs (Reinvest In Minnesota, sodbuster, swampbuster and Federal Conservation Reserve Program) may address these impacts better than county shoreland controls. However, a proposed setback requirement for feedlots is being increased. The proposed 50-foot vegetation buffer between croplands and public waters is being retained.

+A proposed standard for requiring dedication of a portion of new subdivisions is being changed to make it discretionary for each local government rather than mandatory.

+An explanation will be added to clarify that most of the new proposals apply to new development — not to existing structures and uses. A major exception is the authority provided to local government officials to require upgrading of existing poor sewage systems.

+Proposed new standards for planned unit development area being changed to reduce impacts on expansions of existing resorts, campgrounds, and other commercial facilities. This includes dropping all marina provisions.

+A proposed requirement for each local government to submit an annual report to DNR regarding shoreland ordinance administration is being dropped in favor of a voluntary approach for gathering this information.

"All of these changes are currently being incorporated into the proposed regulation revisions," Prestin explained. "A new draft of the proposals is scheduled to be released early in April, and copies of the draft, a summary of its contents and a description of the process remaining before it is adopted will be mailed out to an extensive list of interested individuals and organizations that have participated in the process so far."

DNR Floodplain — Shoreland Administrator Ron Harnack has announced that the department will be establishing a review committee made up of representatives from all major interest groups involved, to discuss the proposed revisions. "The panel will be useful in helping us resolve some of the wide-ranging viewpoints being expressed on some of these issues," Harnack said.

"This committee will need to complete its work by mid-July to enable us to schedule official public hearings yet this recreation season. This committee may also be helpful later in developing training and implementation strategies, and also minimize a lot of the inaccurate information being spread about the revisions," he said.

Harnack added that, "contrary to some media and individual interpretations of the proposals, neither the public review draft last August, nor the new draft in April, will require existing houses to be moved or painted earth-tone colors."

Wildlife Award

A wildlife DNR manager at Morris who has worked in the department since 1956 was presented with the prestigious Minnesota Award recently by the Minnesota Chapter of the Wildlife Society at its annual meeting. John Scarf is being recognized for his dedicated service and innovative approaches to providing wildlife habitat.

"John Scarf has added greatly to hunting and other outdoor recreational opportunities in west-central Minnesota through the acquisition and development of wildlife management areas," said awards committee chair Don Svedarsky.

DNR Officials Explain Burning Permit Policies

State law requires a permit for all open burning, reminds Department of Natural Resources officials.

Minnesota Pollution Control laws were established primarily to control the emission of air pollutants. Forest laws were established to protect life, property, and resources. Therefore, forest laws apply only when the ground is not snow covered and P.C.A. laws all year.

To simplify matters, PCA authorized forest officers and township fire wardens to issue permits to burn vegetative debris year around, outside a city's limits. Within a city's limits the regulations are governed by the city. Burning permits are issued as a public service by foresters and township fire wardens free of charge.

Now that the snow is about gone in the woods, this is a good time to burn old hay meadows. However, the threat of uncontrolled wildfire will steadily worsen. Last fall was fairly dry, so if we don't receive much moisture in April and if the land you plan on burning is peat, there is a good chance the peat will burn.

From March 24, through April 10, permits were issued by township fire wardens and forestry personnel for three days, and all day burning. Since then, the weather has dried the ground and dead vegetation. Currently, regulations limit permits to three days after 6 p.m.

Special permits during restricted hours and for extended periods will be issued. However, authorization by Forestry personnel is required.

Please keep your burning under control, the expense of suppressing wildfires is a direct cost to the taxpayers, urge DNR officials.

Owls: Real Harbingers Of Spring

While we ourselves may feel no hint of spring in the winter air, invisible hormonal changes are taking place within many plants and animals as their internal clocks tick to the tune of imperceptibly lengthening days.

First signs of spring come earlier than the return of robins or the songs of bluebirds, or even the bursting into bloom of hazelnut and skunk cabbages. Late December-early January sees a cranking up of spring activities among two large species of fairly common North American owls: the great horned owl and the barred owl.

The great horned owl, the larger of the two, will be sitting on eggs come late January-early February, even in the coldest part of its nesting range. It starts setting up its nesting territories by Christmas, right around the shortest day of the year. That's a great time to listen for the hooting of pairs, as any hardy participant of the annual Christmas bird count will tell you.

These "big-eared", night flying tigers of the North American skies are incredibly powerful raptors. Though great horned owls are known to prey mainly on small mammals and certain bird species, there are legends about the size and diversity of their prey: small house cats, skunks, even young peregrine falcons. Owls, however, like most birds, are more feathers than body, and so can't fly off with prey that weigh more than they do.

Young great horneds are often feeding at the nest by late [illegible], and frequently leave the nest [illegible] less. At that stage they're known as "branchers," making their way from tree to tree by hopping and flapping. I once monitored a great horned owl nest for the entire nesting season in coastal New Jersey. During the six to eight week incubation and fledgling period I was surprised to find among various foods a very freshly-caught flounder at the base of the nesting tree.

The barred owl, slightly smaller than the great horned, seems to prefer stream bottoms and riparian woodlands, and perhaps it is more wary of suburbia than the upland-loving great horned. It does not have the great horned's ear tufts. Nevertheless, its hearing is acute, as is its night vision, and it too is a very active, aggressive predator. I recently heard of one that killed a [illegible].

Barred owls tend to nest later in the season than the great horned. They're more likely to take up residence in a hollow tree, or, not locating a suitable tree, a nest box. The great horneds invariably take over nests built by crows, herons or hawks.

A box in your yard won't of course guarantee a nesting owl, but you can try.

Many Tax Shelters Disappear But Some Remain In Tax Law

Tax shelters are one area of investing particularly hard hit by the tax reform act of 1986, according to Lynnea Pritchett of Thief River Falls, registered representative.

In the past, many tax shelters such as cattle feeding programs, oil and gas drilling, movie production and leasing were created primarily to establish tax losses. After all, investors in the maximum 50 per cent tax bracket could invest $100,000, show $12,000 a year in losses, and thus save $6,000 in taxes — the equivalent of a six per cent guaranteed return. If the investment actually paid off, that was icing on the cake. In the meantime, the U.S. government helped pick up the bill.

The purpose of the new law is to eliminate some, if not all, of this abuse and re-establish investing for what it's intended — to create profits. Subsequently, most tax shelters are now eliminated.

Although there are, and will continue to be, abuses in real estate, select properties, if properly designed and carefully invested, are still a viable investment that can produce income now and possible appreciation later.

Let's begin by reviewing the changes regarding real estate. This information is taken from a special bulletin published by the public accounting firm of Openheim, Appel, Dixon and Co. The three major changes to the current law affect three areas of real estate: (1) depreciation, (2) at risk rules and (3) passive loss rules.

The new law lengthens depreciation from the present 19 years on both residential and commercial real estate. Residential property placed in service after 1986 must be depreciated over 27.5 years while commercial property is extended further to a 31.5-year depreciable life. Both classes are figured on a straight-line basis.

The "at-risk" provision may apply to partnership interests acquired after Dec. 31, 1986. Generally, it will restrict taxpayers to claiming deductions from an activity to the extent of cash invested or loans for which the investor has personal liability.

Losses and credits for a "passive" activity, an active business in which the taxpayer does not materially participate such as rental real estate and limited partnership interests, will generally not be allowed to offset other income. This other income may include salary, active business income and portfolio income such as dividends, interest, royalties and capital gains derived from investment property.

There are exceptions to the "passive loss" rule which allow taxpayers who actively participate in real estate investments to offset other income with up to $25,000 of losses. This begins to phase out for those who have an adjusted gross income of $100,000 and is fully phased out for those with an adjusted gross income of $150,000.

The bright side is that losses disallowed here can be carried forward indefinitely and used to offset future passive income. Also, those disallowed losses may be used to offset gains when the taxpayer disposes of the entire interest in the properties.

For example: Mr. Smith takes a "passive" loss of $30,000 from rental property he owns and manages. His adjusted gross income, before itemized deductions, is $99,000. He can deduct $25,000 to offset other income and carry forward the additional $5,000 to future years.

In another example, Mrs. Jones has a $15,000 loss from a real estate partnership acquired on or before Oct. 22, 1986. However, she's gained $10,000 of income from another partnership. She can apply the $15,000 loss to the $10,000 income leaving a net loss of $5,000 of which $3,250, or 65 per cent (5,000 x .65 equals 3,250), can be claimed against wages and interest earned in 1987.

There's a five-year phase-out schedule for passive losses. In 1987, 65 per cent can be claimed; in 1988, 40 per cent; 1989, 20 per cent; and 1990, 10 per cent. In 1991 it will be phased out completely.

Some important changes have come about as a result of the new tax law. Highly leveraged real estate, where a minimum amount is invested and the rest borrowed, no longer offers tax appeal. Income-producing real estate with a real cash on cash return can be attractive — a seven per cent to nine per cent current return is acceptable.

Carefully selected and well-managed real estate can still offer a reasonable current income and a chance of appreciation in future years. However, real estate will once again have to stand on its own investment merit.

Gastric By-Pass Support Group To Host Dr. Howell

Dr. Howell of St. Luke's Clinic in Fargo, ND, will be guest speaker when the Thief River Falls gastric by-pass support group meets Monday, April 20, at 7:30 p.m. in the CNC chapel of Northwest Medical center in Thief River Falls.

A native of Lisbon, ND, who graduated from UND medical school in Grand Forks in 1964, has been doing obesity surgery in Fargo since 1973. He is considered an expert in gastric by-pass for morbid obesity.

Invited to attend the meeting are members of the local area medical staff, those persons who have had gastric by-pass surgery performed and members of the interested public. Special encouragement for attendance is given those who have had by-pass surgery.

In addition to his participation at the 7:30 p.m. meeting, Dr. Howell and two of his former patients — Kathleen Rux and Nancy Lebarr of Thief River Falls — will take part in a program on KTRF radio at 9:30 a.m. Monday. Mrs. Rux and Mrs. Lebarr were among several by-pass patients featured in a Times article on the subject this winter.

Further information is available by calling 681-6664.

People Over 65 Advised To Have Eye Examination

Medical studies show that people over the age of 65 are very prone to degenerative-type eye diseases. Therefore, doctors recommend if you are over the age of 65 you should see an ophthalmologist (eye doctor) at least every two years.

If you have a family history of diseases such as cataracts, glaucoma, diabetes and macular degeneration you should see your ophthalmologist at least once a year, suggests the Minnesota Medical association.

The old saying about the eye being the window to the soul may not be quite true, but it's certainly the window to various conditions such as high blood pressure, circulatory disturbances and other problems. Diagnosis of these conditions can't be made, but the eyes can indicate to the physician if further testing needs to be done.

A routine eye exam takes only an hour or so. The exam begins with office personnel taking various tests for muscle balance, pressure and vision. Then your eyes generally will be dilated with eye drops. When you see the doctor he already has quite a bit of information about your eyes. The physician will probably do several tests which involve looking at the eye's lenses, corneas and retinas. None of these tests are painful and each enables the doctor to look for signs of glaucoma, cataract or other problems.

If you do not know an ophthalmologist, ask your personal physician for a referral.

Council At Trail Pays Tribute To Its Late Mayor

Trail city council recently presented a letter of tribute to the Albert Aaknes family following the death of Albert, who had served for some time as mayor of the eastern Polk county community. Addressed to Mrs. Rose Aaknes, the letter was as follows:

Rose, we would like you and your family to know how much we appreciate Albert; who he was and what he stood for — as a friend, neighbor, councilman and mayor.

We would like to acknowledge the concern and devout dedication displayed by Albert to the community of Trail. There is no way to repay the benefits this community has received through him. Our intent of this letter is not to verbally try to portray an image of the concerns, dreams and accomplishments which Albert has contributed to Trail, but to rather exemplify the fact that the way Albert conducted his life clearly portrays the man Albert Aaknes will be remembered as. He lived his life with dignity, honor and equal respect to all and operated his business with the same humble character.

It appeared as though "no" was not part of his vocabulary. He was always there with a willing hand to extend to someone in need or to help promote a community function.

We could go on reminiscing of past moments and Albert's contributions to Trail and the surrounding area, but we are not telling you anything new. We do want you to know a part of him will always be with us. We will carry with us some of his knowledge and wisdom, share in his values and beliefs and hopefully, carry out some of his dreams. There is a void in the Trail Community and a chapter in Trail's history is closing.

The Aaknes corner is silent of the sounds from Albert's hammer pounding plow shares, the hum of his welder, the clatter of his tools, his hearty laugh and his welcoming smile, but his memory and spirit will live on with all of us. He was an irreplaceable friend.

Mesaba Aviation Sets New Record

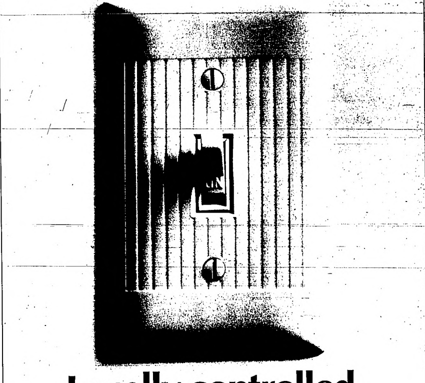
Mesaba Aviation, Inc., set a monthly boarding record during March by carrying 32,943 passengers, an 86 per cent increase over 17,737 passengers carried during March of 1986. System-wide load factor for March was a record 58.9 per cent, compared to a 38.4 per cent load factor experienced in March of the previous year.



Locally controlled.

You control your lights by flipping a switch. On or off. If you're served by public power, you also share in the control of the electricity.

Because public power is community owned, we all have a say in how it serves us.

Because it's nonprofit, consumers and the community reap all the benefits.

And, because public power is locally controlled, it helps set — and achieve — the economic and environmental goals of our community.

Local control at the flip of a switch: It keeps the 'public' in public power.

Look at public power in a new light. After all, it's yours.

School Board For Gatzke Votes 4-2 To close School

Grygla-Gatzke-Skime school district school board decided by a 4-2 vote Tuesday night to close the Gatzke elementary school. The decision to close the school for first through third grade students was made after two-and-a-half hours of public testimony. This will be the last year students attend the Gatzke school.

Grygla and Gatzke consolidated in 1974. It was decided at that time to put grades one through three in the school in Gatzke. There wasn't enough room in the school in Grygla to house all of the students. However declining enrollment has contributed to a decision to shut down the small school.

Enrollment in kindergarten through grade 12 in the district dropped from 381 in 1976-77 to 287 for the current school year and the projected enrollment has been determined to be 239 in the year 1992.

Rep. Wally Sparby Concerned About Sales Tax Bill

by David Hill
Times Reporter

Rep. Wally Sparby of Thief River falls was not overly optimistic about a bill that would place a six per cent sales tax on specific services and include a tax on radio and television advertising. He did indicate, however, that there was room for hope that it would not pass.

Sparby, speaking to representatives of radio and newspapers from Thief River Falls, Warren and Fosston, updated news on several key bills that would affect Northwestern Minnesota including an effort to help local businesses struggling with significant property tax increases, and a bill that might prevent fishermen from catching too many big female fish during the spawning run on the Rainy river.

Sparby commented that several individuals from Thief River Falls had talked to him that afternoon about the property tax situation in Thief River Falls. He said a committee chaired by Representative Gordon Voss has come up with a provision which he feels is a positive move.

As it stands, the provision would more than likely give credit to a business with a property valuation of up to $100,000, he said. This credit would be not unlike homestead credit, he said. In addition, any amount over the $100,000, up to three per cent, could be picked up by the state. Sparby said this appears to be a move in the right direction.

Of course, Sparby said, the other important issue being discussed is the sales tax on services. Sparby said it appears the House took the provision on advertising out of the service tax bill late Sunday evening, although the House appears to be waiting to see what happens with the

Citizens Complain Of Stench From Lagoons

About 20 people filled the Thief River Falls city council room Tuesday night at a regular city council meeting to voice their concern about the "intolerable smell" coming from the city's sewage lagoons.

"It was refreshing (no pun intended) to hear that citizens of Thief River Falls were made aware of the smell coming from the lagoons when the winds shifted from the west recently," said Rolland Sande, who lives to the north of the lagoons.

Duane Vatsaas, chairman of the North township board, said he was at the council to represent the large group as its unofficial spokesman. He said he was at the council on their behalf to see what was being done about the situation, which seems to get worse every year.

Also during the meeting, the council was shocked to learn from Don Stewart, community development director, that the City of Thief River Falls may have been the only city in a revolving loan fund directed by the Northwest Regional Development commission (NWRDC) to make an initial contribution.

Stewart said the city was told the other cities which had signed up to participate in the program had made their payments to the revolving fund. He said he learned just recently that none of the cities except Thief River Falls made payments to the fund.

"We are certainly due an explanation," said Stewart.

City councilmen called for an immediate accounting and explanation. "We should find out whether the other communities are really participating," said Mayor Bob Carlson.

Councilmen said they would like to hear from the director and staff of the revolving loan fund before taking any action. Such action could include consulting an attorney and taking court action. The city has approximately $50,000 invested in the revolving loan fund.

The community development advisory board recommended to the council that a resolution of jurisdictional approval be given which would allow Behavioral Dynamics, Inc. to make application to the Northwest Regional Enterprise Fund, Inc. The council adopted the resolution.

Behavioral Dynamics, Inc. is a newly formed corporation which intends to manufacture and market a product called the Intention Arousing Device (IAD).

Dr. Steve Levinson made a presentation to the advisory board at its March 6 meeting. The IAD is a portable battery operated electro mechanical device resembling a pager. The device incorporates a use adjusted electronic timing circuit and vibrator to periodically send the user a message devised to stimulate or arouse a particular intention. The device lends itself to the currently popular self-improvement area and could be a springboard for a company that would manufactur and market a number of similar types of self improvement products.

The resolution of jurisdictional approval was needed before the Enterprise Fund board would consider the application.

Rolland Sande said he was pleased with the response of the city council Tuesday night when he presented his complaints about the lagoons. He said he just wants to be able to walk outside without smelling the lagoons.

Sande also said painting his buildings was an exercise in futility. A large number of bugs, he said, come from the lagoons. The bugs have

Peterson Twin Elms Farm Wins Top Dairy Awards

Additional honors for dairy herd performance have been received by William Peterson and Twin Elms farm of rural Plummer. Peterson recently received the state outstanding breeder award for the Milking Shorthorn division of the Minnesota Purebred Dairy Cattle association and the national 1986 Silver Progressive Breeder award for the Polled Shorthorn division of the American Milking Shorthorn assoociation.

The national award was received early this month at Janesville, WI, where William and his brother Lowell attended the national meeting and consigned three animals to the national sale. The award is based on herd type and production. Peterson's herd of 31 cows classified 85.1 for type and 30 cows averaged 14,042 pounds (mature equivalent) in milk production. Peterson was a bronze award winner in 1984.

Twin Elms Flicka, a heifer calf born after December, 1986, sold in the intermediate class at the national sale and topped the nine animals in that division at the sale. It was purchased by Jesse Arthur of Paul's Valley, OK.

Twin Elms Ruth Ann, a bred heifer, was the second high bred heifer sold and went to Larry Highdale of Kensington. Twin Elms Gracie II, a cow in production, sold third high in that division and was purchased by Marc Howe of Carlisle, IA.

Indicative of the quality of purebred Milking Shorthorn cattle produced on the Peterson farm is Twin Elms Raggs, an eight-year-old cow which has been in the Harold and Curt Krause herd at Eagle Bend for the past six years. She received the W. C. Wood Memorial trophy for 1986 — her fourth win in five years — for the highest scoring and highest producing animal in the Polled Shorthorn breed. She also added the W. Arthur Simpson award for most butterfat in a 305-day lactation and the W.J. Harding bronze award for production of over 100,000 pounds of milk.

In her 305-day lactation completed in 1986, Raggs produced 22,904 pounds milk and 898 pounds of butterfat. She went on to complete a 347-day lactation with 23,832 pounds of milk, 3.9 per cent test and 948 pounds of butterfat. Her lifetime record through six lactations totals 118,088 pounds of milk and 4,371 pounds of butterfat.

A summary of some of the Peterson accomplishments is contained in a review prepared by the Minnesota Purebred Dairy Cattle association in connection with the outstanding Milking Shorthorn Breeder award. That information follows:

Twin Elm Farm of Plummer, owned by William O. Peterson and operated in conjunction with his brother Lowell, has gained increasing recognition as having one of the top herds of Milking Shorthorn cattle. Since the herd was established in 1936 by William and Lowell's father, the Petersons have made a number of significant contributions to the development of the Milking Shorthorn breed.

The Elm farm is perhaps most well-noted for having developed some of the top Milking Shorthorn sires in the nation. Within recent years, Petersons have developed the initial proofs on Nadolski's Bettina's Promise and Krause's MM Max. Nadolski's Bettina's Promise is now in AI service through 21st Centruy. Their current senior herd sire, Krause's MM Max, ranks eighth on the current sire summary list (ranked fourth in milk). Petersons also bred the bull, Twin Elm Joyce's Joey.

Breeders from across the nation have been fortunate for the opportunity to acquire some of the Twin Elm cattle that Petersons have offered as consignments to national and state Milking Shorthorn sales. Petersons consigned the top promotional heifer calf to the 1983 National Milking Shorthorn sale, and they have also consigned top sale lots to the Minnesota state sale on a number of occasions.

Cows carrying the Twin Elm prefix have gone on to earn national recognition class leading honors for Bar-D Farm of Pelican Rpaids. Twin Elm Raggs, owned by Krause Farms of Eagle Bend, Minnesota, has received the national W.C. Wood Memorial Trophy four times in the last five years as the top polled Milking Shorthorn cow of the breed.

The Twin Elm Milking Shorthorn herd is an official DHIA production testing. In 1983, Twin Elm Farm was honored as the most improved herd in the Red Lake county DHIA over 60 other herds in the association. The Petersons also received the recognition as Honored Dairyman for Pennington county in 1981. In ad-

QUALITY MILKING SHORTHORN cattle such as Twin Elms Wanda (pictured above) have been developed on the William and Lowell Peterson farm of rural Plummer. Wanda was classified 88 (good plus) for type recently and is an example of the Peterson herd quality which resulted in an average of 85.1 for 31 cows classified. None of the cattle scored below 81. That type average plus a mature equivalent milk production average of 14,042 pounds on 30 cows earned William Peterson the national Silver Progressive Breeder award for 1986. Peterson had won a national Bronze Progressive Breeder award in 1984. The award was presented at the national meeting and sale in Janesville, WI, early this month.

WILLIAM PETERSON of rural Plummer holds two of the awards he received recently for his dairying exploits. One plaque is for the national Silver Progressive Breeder award for 1986, the other for the Minnesota Purebred Dairy Cattle association Outstanding Breeder award for the Milking Shorthorn breed. Only one such award is given in the state each ear in each of the purebred dairy cattle breeds.

Quick, before you try Mrs. Anderson's recipe for lefse in Monday's edition of the Times, put "whipping cream" in place of "whipped cream" in your recipe. Hope you were all waiting for the weekend to try it!

Make dying your Easter eggs a creative adventure this year. Instead of using commercial dyes, use dyes extracted from natural substances, such as fruits, vegetables, spices or flowers.

The following list will give you natural materials and suggested amounts to provide beautiful dyes. Natural dyes were the original Easter egg colors the world over. Make your Easter egg dying a fun and informative family activity.

To make pink, use 1 bunch sliced beets. For a bright pink use enough undiluted beet juice to cover eggs in pan. Do not add water to the beet juice.

For lavender, use 2 cups frozen blackberries and juice or 2 cups frozen cranberries and juice. For a lavender with rust flecks, use peels from four yellow apples.

To make a blue-gray color, use 2 cups frozen blueberries and juice; for light blue, petals from six purple petunias may be used; and for turquoise, use 2 cups shredded red cabbage.

Light green can be made from 1 bunch of carrot tops; olive green from petals of six golden marigolds; and very pale green from a chopped, fresh bunch of spinach.

Rust eggs can be made from six red or yellow onion skins.

Bright yellow can be obtained from 2 tablespoons powdered tumeric.

Directions for dying all eggs: Place uncooked eggs in a glass or stainless steel 2-quart saucepan. Add enough water to come at least one inch above eggs. Add one tablespoon vinegar and desired natural material. Cover saucepan and bring to boil; reduce heat and let simmer 15-20 minutes. Rinse with cold water and let air dry. Polish eggs with vegetable oil for a vibrant sheen.

After cooking with beets, carrot tops, petunias and red cabbage, refrigerate eggs overnight in dye to deepen color.

To make natural designs on eggs, brush small leaves and flowers with vegetable oil and lay on egg shell before dying. Wrap a piece of nylon around egg and secure tightly with thread. Dye as desired. The protected areas will remain white, while the rest of the egg will color. Remove nylon and leaves and let air dry.

To make perfect hard-cooked eggs, place uncooked eggs in a single-layer in a saucepan with enough water to come at least one inch above eggs. Cover and quickly bring just to boiling. Remove from burner and let stand 15-17 minutes for large eggs. Adjust time up or down by three minutes for each size larger or smaller. Then quickly run cold water over eggs to cool completely. ## Jazz Dance Show Captures Audience At LHS Auditorium

by Heidi Hoks

The house lights dimmed, the grand curtain rolled back and onto the stage burst forth such exuberance in dance and spirit, it took one aback . . . momentarily. From then on excitement reigned in the auditorium as the Black Ballet Jazz concert held Tuesday, April 7 at Lincoln high school auditorium became one of the highlights of the 1986-87 concert series.

This concert was a combination of dance history and drama mixed together in a fast-paced, visually exciting manner. Much credit for the success of this concert is due to the choreographer and artistic director, Chester Whitmore. Whitmore obviously has stressed the importance of a total performance, not merely a technically accurate one: While the dancers were skillful athletes, they also performed their routines, faces alive with expression. Every person in each dance also gave a distinct character portrayal which added a dramatic note to the concert.

The concert began with a powerful African drum ritual dance much like those performed two centuries ago in New Orleans' famous Congo Square. The flirtatious "Cascades" duet and a high-kicking "Cannonball Run" followed. The high energy level of the first dance had been sustained through the next two numbers and the audience was exhausted; a change was needed — and Chester Whitmore, himself, provided it. "Swanee River Boogie" was a comic mime in which Whitmore proved he could dance utilizing every inch of his body and also could isolate body parts and have an individual part perform its own routine.

The sense of timing concerning the program was evident the entire evening. Each segment moved quickly one into another as songs and comic routines were interspersed with tap dances, struts, break choreography, jazz dance and ballet movements.

Adding to the visual excitement was the costuming. Interestingly, the first act costumes were clear, intense, vivid colors such as flame reds, sapphire blues and emerald greens. The second act was dominated by bright, spring-like colors such as hot pinks, lemon yellows, lime greens and baby blues. Obviously, the use of color was intentional, designed to excite the audience during the first half and leave the audience in a buoyant mood after the second half.

The choice of types of costumes was also interesting. The beautiful long dresses in "His Eye Is On the Sparrow" and "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot" accented the leg extensions and created the illusion of flight. The flapper costumes used in the dances in the Cotton Club Era segment of the program complimented the brassy, sassy struts and kicks in those numbers. And who can forget Chester Whitmore's hot pink suit in "Taparella." When he entered in that outfit, his number had to be hot itself; it was!

The Black Ballet Jazz concert was a total delight — one which should be discussed for a long time. The dance company demonstrated skillful execution of various dance forms, and did so with verve. Also, as true professionals, they performed to the best of their abilities not for themselves, but for their audience.

World Population Awareness Week Noted April 20-25

Governor Rudy Perpich has proclaimed the week of April 20-25 as World Population Awareness Week in Minnesota.

The governor observed that the current world population is five billion and is growing at the rate of 87 million a year.

"Ninety per cent of this increase is expected to occur in the poorest, least developed countries of the world, that are already struggling to provide their people with adequate food, housing, sanitation, employment, health care and other basic human services," Governor Perpich said.

"World overpopulation is a major cause of the problems of malnourishment and hunger, resource shortages, environmental deterioration and ecological degradation that lead to social unrest, rebellion and war," the governor asserted.

Werner Fornos, president of the Washington-based Population Institute, said that 50 per cent of the 10 million infant deaths and 25 per cent of the 500,000 maternal deaths that occur each year in the developing world could be prevented if voluntary child spacing and maternal health programs could be substantially expanded.

The Population Institute is the largest non-governmental organization seeking to bring about a more equitable balance between the world's population and its resources.

"Preceeding the generations have always been concerned about the future," Fornos said "but ours is the first to be faced with decisions that will determine the habitability of the earth our children will inherit.

"We have the technology to come to grips with the global population problem. The question remaining is whether we have the will and determination to mount the concerted effort that can solve this monumental problem," he said.

Rev. Luckiesh Is New Pastor For SDA Church Here

Rev. Mark Luckiesh has begun his duties as pastor of the Seventh-day Adventist church in Thief River Falls, having moved here from Oconto, NE, and being welcomed into the congregation at a special fellowship session March 28. Rev. and Mrs. Luckiesh (Shirley) have a son Joe and daughter Ann.

Born into a railroading family in Marshalltown, IA, Rev. Luckiesh attended public schools except for his senior year at a parochial school, Oak Park academy in Nevada, IA. He continued his studies at Union college in Lincoln, NE, where he met Shirley, who was born in Perham and raised on a dairy farm near New York Mills where her parents still live.

Rev. Luckiesh graduated from Union college in May of 1974 with a bachelor of arts degree in religion and married Shirley a month later. He served as a ministerial intern in Wichita, KA, for a year, then continued his studies at Andrews university in Berrien Springs, MI, graduating in August of 1977 with a master of divinity degree.

He pastored churches in Goodland, KA, Harper, KA, and Broken Bow, NE. He was ordained into the ministry on May 28, 1982.

Shirley graduated from Maplewood academy in Hutchinson in 1971 and went on to study nursing at Union college, but her studies were interrupted by a serious snowmobile accident in 1973.

"I've always been interested in the concept of team ministry," she said. "Since the time I was a little girl I said I was either going to be a missionary nurse or a pastor's wife. Being the wife of a minister is really challenging yet rewarding. I really love what I'm doing."

Rev. Luckiesh has a particular interest in small church ministry, either rural or in smaller cities. He enjoys lawn and gardening work and jogging in addition to his ministerial duties. Mrs. Luckiesh enjoys reading, sewing, small crafts and window shopping. The family also enjoys traveling together and sight-seeing.

We'll go to Antwerp, for the Diamond You've Always Wanted

Own A Masterpiece

April 13, 1987

Dear Friends,

Our diamond buying trip to Antwerp, Belgium last year was great, and we're going again. As you may know, Antwerp is the Diamond Capital of the World. For three days we'll be examining diamonds, selecting exceptional values in a variety of sizes for our inventory. Our membership in the Independent Jewelers Organization (IJO), a major buying group of over 1000 strong, makes this trip possible.

As a member of IJO we'll be combining our purchases with a group of IJO jewelers, which allows us access to this source for diamonds closed to an average retail jeweler. We expect to find some very good values. By importing directly we will have opened one more avenue of savings for our customers. When we buy better, you do too.

Some of our customers have heard about our trip and asked us to shop for a diamond for them while we're there. With this prior commitment we have agreed to select a diamond for them at an even greater savings. We think you might like to do the same. This will allow you to benefit from our buying power, the enormous selection of diamonds we'll be seeing, and having us hand pick a beautiful gem just for you. Our selection is subject to your approval, of course.

If you have an anniversary, a birthday, or would just like to invest in the diamond you've always wanted, please stop in or give me a call at 681-4837 for more information. I need to hear from you by April 25th. Do it today! For you we'll go to Antwerp!

Sincerely,
Jeffrey Hess

MN Sales Tax Bill Receives A Cold Reception By Media

by David Hill
Times Reporter

Leroy Lynch of Carmichael-Lynch advertising agency, Minneapolis, the second largest advertising employer in Minnesota, told members of a subcommittee on taxes that he did not think the legislature would make it more difficult for outstate business to advertise out of Minnesota. "I do not believe the legislature will inhibit and nip a growth industry in the bud," Lynch said.

Lynch was among the many individuals testifying at a continued public hearing before a senate subcommittee on taxes, chaired by Sen. LeRoy Stumpf of Plummer Monday night in St. Paul. No testimony in the long hearing, which was attended by several local media representatives, supported the measure that would place a six per cent tax on specific services. Included under the bill would be a tax on radio and television advertising.

Sen. Bill Diessner, Afton, perhaps frustrated with the state's need to find an additional $800 million and a promise from Governor Rudy Perpich to veto any measure that increases income tax, continued to ask speakers what alternative they would suggest.

Representatives of various media groups such as independent contractors, graphic specialists, radio broadcasters, newsprint, and labor representatives of craft unions, spoke of a common theme. The message heard most often was an appeal not to hurt a growing industry.

Many like Jim Anderson, president of MASA, and Richard Bruelle of United Mailing spoke of lay-offs to meet a sales tax on services which would give competitive businesses outside of Minnesota the competitive edge. They testified that the present tax system has allowed for a phenomenal growth in media related businesses and a six per cent tax increase would encourage Minnesota businesses to leave or make cutbacks in personnel.

However, Sen. Diessner said the current income tax system has caused an unstable system. "Our tax system," he said, "should reflect our economy."

Sen. Diessner argued that because our economy is becoming increasingly service related the tax structure should reflect that economy. Therefore, a service tax should be imposed.

One person finally responded, "If you need to add a tax to get more money, then tax the people who benefit equally, not the employers of the people."

Other comments thrown out for consideration in anticipation of Sen. Diessner's question, included personal willingness to see a tax on food services and clothing.

A sales tax on services was not seen as an answer to current fiscal problems, however. One individual giving testimony at the meeting pointed out that it is not the first time a service tax has been attempted. He stated that currently 14 states apply sales taxes, many of which either do not have an income tax, are in the process of reversing sales tax legislation, or make several exceptions.

The application of an add-on sales tax on advertising has been unsuccessful when attempted in other states. The city of Baltimore, MD, and the states of Iowa and Arizona all repealed their advertising taxes as unwise.

One individual pointed out that legislators would be wise to study a lesson being learned by Japan's current Prime Minister. According to an AP wire story filed on Monday and Tuesday, Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone's party failed to win two key governorships and suffered setbacks in local assembly elections in what was widely viewed as a protest vote against plans for a five per cent sales tax.

Those testifying before the committee cited a number of problems with the bill. Those testifying before the sub-committee questioned the wisdom of a tax that amounts to double taxation by taxing both advertising and the final cost of the product advertised; the wisdom of creating a system of taxation which could not be enforced against out-of-state business; the wisdom of a tax which would encourage out-of-state business to undercut the prices of an industry currently experiencing growth in Minnesota; and the wisdom of a tax which would jepordize taxes collected from workers employed in the industry which could easily leave Minnesota or lay-off workers so that they could continue to compete.

Rep. Wally Sparby Concerned About Sales Tax Bill

Senate version, which was introduced by Senator Doug Johnson of Cook. The Senate version was being discussed Monday evening in a hearing before a sub-committee chaired by Sen. LeRoy Stumpf of Plummer.

Sparby said the proposed tax would involve a lot of services and he is very concerned about it.

"If we waited to reach an agreement with Canada on limitations to fishing on the Rainy river we might wait a hundred years," Sparby said.

Sparby said he recently discussed fishing problems on the Rainy river with Dick Hassinger, fisheries supervisor of the Minnesota department of natural resources, in an appropriations committee. He said he is worried about the number of big female fish being taken in the Rainy river.

He said he has no idea how many are being taken, but compares it to going out this time of year and killing a doe and a fawn. Here, he said, we are taking females with eggs, ready to spawn. "Eventually we will be using up a valuable resource," he said.

The problem is further complicated by the fact that the river it is a unique boundary situation with Canada — half the river fishing is controlled by Canada and the other half by the United States, specifically the Minnesota department of natural resources.

Sparby said they have tried negotiation for many years without any success. He said maybe it was time Minnesota went ahead and did something about it anyway. By doing something about the situation, Sparby suggested closing the season during the spawning run.

PROMOTED to the rank of Major recently at Rock Island arsenal in Illinois was Gary E. Bruggeman (right), son of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Bruggeman of St. Hilaire. Present for the promotion ceremonies were his wife Audrey and children Guy, Jared and Kristen.

dition to the state level recognition, Petersons received the prestigious Gold Medal Progressive Breeder award from the American Milking Shorthorn society in 1985 for having achieved an average production of 13,570 pounds of milk and an average classification score of 80.2 on 23 cows. The herd was recently reclassified and had no scores lower than 81; one cow classified excellent, 18 very good and 12 good plus.

Petersons have expanded their milking herd within the last year, primarily through the addition of home-bred heifers. Their rolling herd average in December of 1986 was 12,150 milk and 431 butterfat on 39 cows, with about half of their herd consisting of first calf heifers. One of their cows, P-Twin Elm Reddy's Spot, won honors as a Minnesota state production class leader in 1986 for senior two-year-olds with a 2-8 record of 15,590 milk and 595 butterfat.

The Petersons have exhibited their cattle at a number of county fairs since the early 1950's where they have won numerous championship and showmanship honors. Their show ring participation has been expanded to include exhibiting at several state level shows. In their first showing at the 1986 North Dakota state fair, Twin Elm Farm won honors as Premier Breeder.

The Petersons have actively participated in the activities of the Minnesota Milking Shorthorn association. In addition to regular partiticipation in the state meetings and sales, Twin Elm Farm hosted the summer field day and picnic in 1983.

Citizens Complain Of Stench From City Lagoons

made it impossible to keep his buildings clean. "The bugs leach onto the buildings and stain them," he said.

Sande said he was aware that the city had contacted a contractor about the situation. A non-reproductive bacteria will be introduced to the lagoons at an initial cost of $8,000 and continued on a monthly basis for almost $1,000 per month.

He was assured by the council that a long-range solution was being examined. The long-range solution would include pre-treatment by the major contributor (Land O'Lakes Turkey processing) and changes in post-treatment by the city.

It was clarified that the smell at the lagoons was not due to an outdated lagoon system. The problem is believed to have been created by the introduction of a high level of solid biological material which caused a BOD problem.

Police Chief Ken Froschheiser introduced a police performance evaluation to the city council Tuesday night. Chief Froschheiser, on behalf of the local public safety committee, recommended that the evaluation be adopted. The council adopted the evaluation procedure.

Chief Froschheiser wrote in a letter to the council that "an important aspect of employee performance is the means by which the employee is given feedback about the level of performance that they are doing their assigned tasks. We have developed, with the aid of other police department systems, an evaluation system that is unique to the police service."

The evaluation is based on 10 dimensions that were determined to be critical in the performance of duties of police officers. The dimensions are: written communications, oral communications, relationships, quality of work, coping with serious matters, appearance and conditioning, officer safety, dependability, technical knowledge and ability and field performance.

Each dimension is evaluated by four defined categories — optimal, exceeds standards, meets standards and improvement needed.

Councilman Don Liden asked who will evaluate Officer Allen Melbye. A case involving Melbye and the police department is still pending resolution. Liden pointed out that it is still a delicate situation.

Artco received approval to hold a dance in its parking lot which celebrates the 25th year of the business in Thief River Falls. The dance will be held in conjunction with a three-day celebration beginning July 31. a representative from Arctco said a dance will be held in the parking lot July 31 and August 1.

Approval of a liquor license for the celebration was also granted, subject to compliance to specific ordinance requirements. The temporary license for July 31 and August 1 was granted to the Snowdrifters club. The dance and liquor will be confined within a large-snowfence area surrounding the parking lot at Arctco. Four uniformed police officers are expected to be at the events and several members of the Snowdrifters club will be checking identification and making sure the dance does not get out of hand. The representative for the Snowdrifters said liquor will cease to be sold 45 minutes before the band stops at midnight.

The Zehlian club, represented by Gretchen Beito and Carol Jung, proposed a walkway along the river front in Thief River Falls. Beito said about $4,200 would have to be raised to complete the project. She did not ask for city funds, but hopes to get grants and charitable contributions to fund the project. Beito said it is a natural location and would be an attraction for tourists. The council passed a resolution in support of the project.

In other business, the city council: approved a cigarette license for the Video vault at 114 East Third street; accepted an offer from Rufus and Violet Olson to purchase a lot at 1118 North Duluth avenue; passed a resolution in support of a "tobacco-free school"; passed a motion to conduct a public hearing, April 28 at 7 p.m. to consider improvements to Knight avenue, the arena parking lot, the Third street boat landing and the alley east of Kendall avenue between Third and Taft streets; passed a motion to install a light for the flag pole at the chamber of commerce building; noted that Hal Harbott will replace Gene Henrickson on the volunteer fire department; renewed a lease agreement at the airport with the FAA; and passed a matter of forming an energy council back to the utilities committee.

The city council also recognized recent complaints that they have not been notifying the media or public of committee meetings. The council voiced its support for an effort to make sure the media and public are notified of these meetings 24 hours prior to the meeting time.

YOUR TIMES

by John T. Anderson
Superintendent of Utilities
City of Thief River Falls

Electricity — those kilowatts which so influence our lives — is the same the world over. However, while the product is identical, the philosophy and orientation of those providing the services are not.

In the United States, there are two major types of electrical utilities. There are approximately 200 large private power companies and 3,100 consumer-owned public power systems. America is one of the few industrial countries with such diversity of ownership. According to a national public opinion poll commissioned by the American Public Power Association, the American people like it that way. The poll, conducted by nationally known pollster William R. Hamilton of Washington D.C., showed that 59 per cent think it's best for the country to have a mix of public and private power systems. This mix creates competitive pressures which benefit all consumers.

Public power encompasses all those utilities and rural electric cooperatives that are owned and operated by the people and the communities they serve — from small towns, to big cities, to entire countries and rural areas. All across the nation in 49 states, these public power systems serve some 60 million Americans.

The City of Thief River Falls Utilities Department, locally owned and controlled, is part of the nations' public power family. The local system was established in 1901, and today serves 3,140 residential customers, and 589 commercial businesses and industrial firms.

While small compared to the major private power corporations, its gross annual revenue of over three and one-half million dollars makes it a major economic contributor to our community. Because the consumers and the community own the system, and share common goals, it can be a powerful force in guiding our economic future.

Today, people tend to take electricity for granted. For that reason, public power's story and its role in the utility industry is not well known. In fact, public power is as old as electric service in the United States, which dates back to 1882.

During more than a century of service, the unique characteristics of public power have made it an important part of the utility industry as well as a major asset for local communities.

All utilities, whether consumer-owned or privately owned, provide an essential public service. The difference is that public power systems are locally owned and locally controlled, and because they are nonprofit, all the economic benefits produced at home stay at home.

Local control gives the citizens of Thief River Falls an active voice in policies affecting rates, service, and operations. Public power means commitment to community services and local people working together to meet local needs.

In Thief River Falls, the City Fathers and Utility staff are committed to YOU, the rate payer. A clear example of this is the fact that while wholesale power rates went up 4.3 per cent last year, there will still be NO increase in the 1987 rate structure. This is a vivid example of YOUR utility department working for YOU.

Because our public power system is nonprofit, its only mission is to provide an essential, reliable, service for local benefit at the lowest possible cost. The citizens of Thief River Falls enjoy electrical rates that are among the lowest in the nation. Prudent and expanded use of these services can and will help keep rates low now and in the future.

Most Americans support public power principles and the need to protect them. According to Hamilton, the APPA poll clearly shows that, "A majority of U.S. consumers believe public power is more concerned about the environment, offers lower rates, allows more control over utility operations, and has better service than private power companies."

In public power communities, like ours, the owners and the users are the same. That is consumer protection at its best.

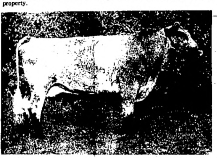
ALL THESE ITEMS were apparently stolen from automobiles in Thief River Falls, probably early Sunday morning, according to the Thief River Falls police with theft over $250, a felony punishable by a maximum of five years in prison, contact the department at 681-6161. According to investigator Dennis Kiesow, the department received a call at 6:40 a.m. from a resident of Country Estates apartments who said she had seen two men going through cars in the parking lot. She confronted them, asked for the FM converter which they had taken from her car, and was given the unit back — with the offer to re-install it. She took the unit instead, drove to work and called police with a description of the men. Less than an hour later police officers found a man matching the description of one of the men and arrested Brian Mathson, 19, Thief Rver Falls. Later they arrested Lee Hamre, 19, Thief River Falls. Both have been charged with theft over $250, a felony punishable by a maximum of five years in prison, a $10,000 fine, or both. They have been released on their own recognizance and are scheduled to make an appearance in Pennington county district court Wednesday. The items above were recovered in a search of one of the defendant's vehicles. Police are still attempting to find the owners of the stolen property.



TWINELMSRAGGS, produced on the William Peterson farm north of Plummer, has distinguished herself as an exceptional representative of the Milking Shorthorn breed. Part of the Harold and Curt Krause herd at Eagle Bend since she was sold by the Petersons in 1980, she has won the W.C. Wood memorial trophy for the fourth time in five years as the highest scoring and highest producing animal in the Polled Shorthorn breed. She also won the W. Arthur Simpson award for butterfat and the W.J. Harding bronze award for producing over 100,000 pounds of milk. Her lifetime total over six lactations is 118,088 pounds of milk and 4,371 pounds of butterfat.

Glass Fire Nearly Destroys The 1907 Country School House In Deer Park Township

A grass fire started when family members were cleaning up an old haystack bottom in the field. They did some burning along the ditches and around the school ground for prevention sake. The grass fire had been watered out when they left for home at suppr time. Mrs. Lana Nelson brought her son Tyler's birthday boys to their homes and noticed some smoke coming out of the attic and called for help. A spark from the fire had eventually started burning in the wall and worked itself to the attic. The neighbors came over and carried water from the ditch until the fire truck arrived. There was very little wind that Monday evening. Fire chief Dessilier said, "The sky was so lit up with all the grass fires around in the area it was hard to find the burning school house. Helen Chervestad also gave the fire department the wrong miles to the fire scene. But anyway to the old historic site of 1906 rural school house was saved. Many former teachers, students, friends come back to visit their old stomping grounds where they learned the basics in education.

Olaf Stolaas, who was a former student here, said he hated to see the old country school house go up in smoke. That's where he got his education. Lana (Chervestad) Nelson almost cried to see smoke coming out of the attic. Lana also went to school there first through sixth grade. Her 6 boys have said to her I wished I too could of walked to school there. Olaf Stolaas helped to carry back into the schoolhouse all the old furnishings and books that were taken outdoors during the fire. The entry was pretty well damaged by the fire and school house walls, and a great deal of smoke damage in the building. The school house will be restored again by the Orlando Chervestad family.

Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Peterson visited Tuesday with her sister, Art and Selma Begland in Thief River Falls.

Mrs. Sidney Omlid of Kodeack, AK, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hovet of Goodridge, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Lundeen were Sunday afternoon coffee guests at the Malcolm Stucy home.

They Saved It!

Williams — The city of Williams will remain the owner of the community center, since the city council received no bids to buy the building. At the council's first meeting of the year, they asked for bids on the building, hoping to sell it because of high maintenance costs and the fact that the building was not being used. Since then, citizens have formed a "Save Our Community Center" group and have raised funds to help pay for the utilities on the building and have scheduled various activities there. The council, at their recent meeting, expressed gratitude to the group for their interest and will form a community center board to take over management of the center and to make monthly reports to the council on their progress.

Demographic Data Indicates Changes Expected In Minnesota

Minnesota's population growth and labor force growth are slowing. The population is aging and the state is a more popular place for retiring. The suburbs are growing faster than the inner Twin Cities. Greater Minnesota is losing population faster than anticipated.

Those are a few of the projections for Minnesota's future made by two of the state's top demographic experts who testified at the Minnesota House of Representatives futurist subcommittee meeting. The new subcommittee, chaired by Rep. Dan Knuth (DFL-New Brighton), is taking on the task of thinking ahead beyond members' two-year terms to help the legislature responsibly plan for the state's future.

"As legislators, we must pay attention to what our future looks like. We can react to the predictions and make changes, and we should think about doing both of those before it gets too late," said Rep. Wally Sparby of Thief River Falls. "Some of these statements about our future are good for us all to hear."

The state's demographer said the pictures he draws of the state's future help plan development of health care facilities, water treatment plants, student population in schools, utility needs, roads and transportation and other community projects.

Demographic projections are an art, he said, not a science. "Luck is an important ally and humility is an important asset for us. There's an old saying that 'he who lives by the crystal ball usually ends up eating glass.'"

Here are some of the points that were presented to the subcommittee last week:

+ Minnesotans generally live longer than other people in our nation.

+ Minnesota is a "homegrown" state, meaning not many people move here or move away.

+ Minnesota's population growth and economy are projected to be stronger than in our neighboring states.

+ As the baby boom generation (people now aged 25 to 40) ages, more and more grey colors are showing up in our wardrobes and full-figured fashions are increasingly popular.

+ Our middle-aged population numbers are increasing fast. The number of elderly people is quickly rising, and the number of young people is dropping fast, which show up in the wide-open teen labor market and droping college enrollments.

+ Greater Minnesota is losing population fast, probably due to the depressed economy, but many people who are migrating out of those areas are expected to return. In 1900, half of our population lived on farms. In 1980, less than 10 per cent of our population lived on farms.

+ Minnesota historically is a very hard-working state. The number of women (by percentage) in the state's workforce is higher than the national averages, the number of two-income families in our state is higher than in the nation, and the family and per capita incomes are higher in Minnesota than in the rest of the nation.

+ The state's population is projected to be 4.6 million in 1990. It was 4.0 million in 1980. That increase is slightly larger than the increase between 1970 and 1980. The counties surrounding the Twin Cities (Sherburne, Isanti, Chisago, Wright and Dakota) will continue to have the fastest growth rates. Southern and western Minnesota and the Iron Range will lose population.

+ The state's labor force will grow 14 per cent between 1980 and 1990, less than half of what the growth was between 1970 and 1980. The drop is due to the baby boom aging itself out of the labor force and a slow-down in numbers of women entering the labor force.

Insurance Claims Are Subject To Regulations

Minnestoa law governs the way insurance claims are handled. The law is designed to ensure that insurance companies will handle claims in good faith by requiring full and open disclosure to consumers and prompt processing of their claims, according to the Minnesota attorney general's office.

The law is quite detailed and addresses all aspects of claims procedures. However, there are certain portions of the act, particularly those which relate to the time of claims procedures, which are fairly important to both consumers and insurance agents.

A person who files a claim under his or her policy has obviously suffered a loss of some kind. That loss may represent a personal disaster to the consumer, whose paramount thought, aside from "how much will I be paid?" is usually "when will I be paid?" The various steps in the claims process are now subject to strict deadlines.

The first step in the process occurs when a consumer notifies his or her insurance company of a claim. Notification is defined broadly as "any communication. . .which reasonably apprises the insurer of a claim. . ." under a policy. For all but health insurance claims, the company must acknowledge notification within 10 business days, and, unless the claim is settled within that period, must provide the claimant with all necessary forms and instructions for formal filing. Also under this definition, notice to one's inusrance agent is considered notice to the insurer. The provision implicitly places a responsibility on the agent to promptly relay notification to the company so that the 10-day deadline can be met. In addition to claims notifications, companies must respond to all other inquiries from claimants within 10 business days.

After notification of a claim, the company has 30 business days to complete its investigation and inform the claimant of its intended disposition of the matter. If 30 days is not enough to fully investigate, the company must, within that period, tell the claimant why it needs more time. The law sets 60 days after receipt of a proper proof of loss as the outside limit for final decision on payment.

Another provision applies specifically to automobile policies: if a damaged vehicle belonging to a company's insured cannot be safely driven, the company must exercise its right to inspect the vehicle within five business days of notification of the claim. For third party claimants (other individuals involved in the accident) the inspection must be made within 15 days.

If a claim is settled, the insurer must issue the agreed payment within five business days of its receipt of the agreement. If a claim is denied, the insurer must disclose the basis of the denial, the insured's claim and policy numbers, and the name, address and telephone number of the person who can take questions and complaints about the denial.

If the law is not followed, the state commerce commissioner can issue cease and desist orders to companies which commit even a single violation — the commissioner no longer needs to show a "general business practice" of unfair claims settlements. If a company requests a fact-finding hearing it must be held within seven days of the request. After the hearing, if the evidence warrants, the commissioner can assess civil penalties of up to $2,000 for each violation.

For any questions about handling insurance claims, contact the Minnesota Attorney General's Office, Commerce Division, 1100 Bremer Tower, 7th Place and Minnesota Street, St. Paul, 55101, (612) 296-9412; or the Insurance Division of the Department of Commerce, (612) 296-2488, or toll-free, 1-800-652-9747.

Redeemer Church Plans For 100th Anniversary

Redeemer Lutheran church in Thief River Falls will mark a milestone on June 20 and 21 when it will celebrate its 100th anniversary. Plans have been in progress for the past 18 months.

The festivities will begin on Saturday evening, June 20, with a potluck supper at 5:30 p.m. A youth service will follow at 7:30 p.m. Sunday worship services are scheduled for 8:15 and 10:15 a.m. with dinner to follow. Bishop Harold of Lohr of the Red River Valley synod, LCA, will speak at the anniversary clebration scheduled for 2:30 p.m. Preceeding the 2:30 p.m. service there will be a half-hour program of organ and piano music, duets, choirs and soloists. A tea will follow.

The public is encouraged to attend any or all of these services.

Those serving on the Centennial committee are Rev. Luther Anderson, Edna Thorstad, Enid Sande, Joyce Halbasch, Dale Folger, Iris Furuseth, Leonard Hellquist and Hazel Maves.

A history of the congregation prepared by the Centennial committee follows:

On June 11, 1887, at 2 o'clock in th afternoon, the Svenska Evangeliska Park Ridge Forsamlingen church was organized. Articles of incorporation and a constitution recommended by the Augustana Synod were adopted. This was the result of earlier work by the Rev. J. S. Ryding from Black River Lutheran church and Rev. Svante Udden, a young minister from Warren.

Charter members consisted of nine families and three single men — P. Peterson, wife and family; S. J. Swenson and wife; John Carlson, wife and family; John Bloom, wife and family; August Norlund, wife and family; S. Viberg, wife and family; John P. Swanson, wife and family; L. E. Erickson, wife and family; and P. B. Malberg and wife. The single men were August Soderberg, C. A. Swanson and Fred Edenholm.

First meetings of this congregation were held in rural homes or school houses. In 1902, the congregation located in Thief River Falls when several Swedish families settled in the community. Services were held in various places including the city hall, Johnson's Millinery shop and the Mission church.

In 1910, the congregation experienced a greater sense of mission with the construction of its first church, located in the 300 block on North Horace (north of the present Anderson Bros. 66, Inc.). The first parsonage was purchased in 1920 for $3,500 at 816 North Main. Prior to 1923, English and Swedish services were held alternately. Congregational minutes were recorded in English for the first time in 1921.

A parsonage at 421 North LaBree and an adjoining lot were purchased in 1939. The next year the church building was moved to the lot at 425 North LaBree and extensively remodeled.

Crowded conditions in 1956 necessitated two Sunday morning worship services as well as two Sunday school sessions, even with the conversion of the parsonage into classrooms (this parsonage was sold in 1967, and is presently a part of Bruce Pharmacy).

In 1957, a long-range building committee was elected to plan for the needs of an active, growing congregation. A parsonage was purchased at 228 North Merriam in 1958 (sold December 1975). An 11.3 acre site located in the southeast corner of Thief River Falls was purchased in 1961 at a cost of $7,500.

November 1, 1965, the congregation voted to build a new church. Groundbreaking was held that month at the present location — 1300 E. Nora street. This church was dedicated "to the Glory of God" on Dec. 11, 1966. Within 10 years consideration was already given to provide needed facilities for our rapidly growing Sunday church school. On Oct. 1, 1978, the congregation approved plans to move the kitchen, remodel the former fellowship hall into Sunday school rooms, and add the fireside room and new fellowship hall. Ground-breaking for this venture took place June 3, 1979, with dedication of the new addition on Sept. 21, 1980.

Since the church organized in 1887 as the Svenska Evangeliska Lutherska church, it has been renamed several times. In 1902, it was known as the First Swedish Evangelical Lutheran church of Thief River Falls; in 1922, it was renamed the Augustana Lutheran church. When the church was moved to the LaBree Avenue location in 1940, it was changed to First Lutheran church and in 1963 renamed Redeemer Lutheran church.

The pastors who have served this congregation include the first organizers — Rev. J. S. Ryding and Rev. Svante Udden; Rev. James Moody (1888-1896); Rev. T. Seashore (1896-1898); Rev. J. AS. Mattson (1899-1901); Rev. A Melin (1901-1902); and Rev. Alex Sand (1903-1907). From 1887 to 1907 the congregation was part of the Black River church.

From 1907 to 1915 it was served by laypreachers and students — Peter Dahlquist, August Westlund, Eugene Abrahamson, L. B. Benson and occasional visits from pastors of the district — Pastors G. Wahlund and W. Chellgren.

Rev. Albin A. Larson was first resident pastor (1915-1924); followed by Rev. Aner Bloom (1927-1930); Rev. H. L. Sjogren (1931-1935); Rev. C. W. Erickson (1936-1942); Rev. Carl F. Johnson (1943-1954); Rev. Marvin O. Carlson (1955-1963); Rev. Dennis Rodin (1964-1969); Mr. Otto Baker served intermittently as lay pastor 1969-1970; Rev. Phil Lathrop (1970-1972); Rev. Keith Prekker (1972-1982); Rev. Don Knudson (1978-1984); Gary Heaton was hired as part-time lay-pastor and youth director in September of 1982; Rev. Luther Anderson (1983 to present); and Rev. Allan Bray (1984-1986).

The internship program began in 1973 and has since included John and Sue Hagberg, (September 1973-1974); Joe and Paula Dillon (1974-1975); Ron and Barb Allen (1975-1976); Peter and Lo Ann Martinson (1976-1977); Doug and Jan Demlow (1977-1978); Paul Trenne (1984-1985); Doug Thompson (1985-1986) and Carl Hatlen, (1987).

Former members from the congregation ordained into the ministry are Willis Erickson and James H. Peterson in 1965, and Mark Anderson in 1972. Presently attending seminary are Terri Cuppett and Greg McEwen. Presently serving as missionaries are Allan and Gretchen Bray in Germany, and Randy and Eileen Johnson in New Guinea. Other former members who have served as missionaries are Lori Heidel, the Dr. Joe Norquist family, and the Ray Martin family.

When the congregation was organized in 1887, it consisted of 12 members. It grew to approximately 50 baptized members when the first church was built in 1910, and expanded to approximately 200 at the time of remodeling in 1940. The congregation increased to 750 when the church was built at 1300 East Nora, 1,300 members in 1980, and has 1,670 baptized members in 1987.

It is interesting to note that one charter member family, the J.P. Swansons, has had continuous membership in our church. Their son was Edwin Swanson, now deceased, and present members are grandson Curtis Swanson, great-grandson Wesley Swanson and great-great-grandchildren Heather, Stacy and Bethany Swanson. Present member Larry Swanson is alo a great-grandson and his children, Trisha and Trevor, are great-great grandchildren of J.P. Swanson. Kendall Jenson is a great-grandson and his sons Joshua and Aaron are great-great grandsons of another charter member, John Bloom.

The congregation was aligned for a number of years with Calvary Lutheran church in Strathcona. A vote was taken in 1955 to dissolve that congregation; in 1957 the members merged with a neighboring church, thus ending the relationship with Redeemer.

In 1966, the congregation voted to accept alignment with Black River Lutheran church, St. Hilaire. In a special meeting on Jan. 20, 1967, approval was given the pastor to accept a separate call to Black River. This arrangement still continues.

The ladies aid was organized in 1901 with 15 ladies. They met twice a month. In 1948, thanks to a gift from the ladies aid society, all congregational debts were paid. The ladies aid society had been giving financial aid to the congregation since it was organized.

Augustana Lutheran Church Women were reorganized Feb 17, 1959 Purpose of the LCW is: "To be a community of women, which in response to the Holy Spirit, engages in the mission of proclamation and reconciliation through its life and work, and through the life and work of the Lutheran Church of America."

The altar guild started in 1956, and consisted of 12 members. In 1981 membership was increased to 18, and the term of office was changed from two to three years. Their purpose is to serve the congregation by maintaining and improving the sanctuary for worship, and to minister to individuals as they are involved in the worship at communion, baptism, weddings and funerals.

In addition to their regular duties, in 1984 the members designed and stitched 10 symbols for the for the space above the windows in the church sanctuary. The purpose was to reacquaint members with the symbols and to add to the beauty of the sanctuary.

The Sunday school was organized in 1909, and has continued its uninterrupted work with rapid increases. As an example, the enrollment in 1947 was 75; present enrollment is 236.

Other organizations that have given, or are giving, support to the church through various ways are choirs, men's club, couple's club, Golden Age, Luther league (now called senior league, junior league and "King's Kids.")

Redeemer church is known in the community as the first home of Discovery Place, a daycare center serving pre-school and young children. The church facilities were used by this organization from 1971 to 1978, at which time it moved to a new building. Redeemer is also host to a number of community groups. The congregation has provided assistance to three refugee families being resituated in American culture.

"May the efforts of all the dedicated, faithful servants of Christ in Redeemer Lutheran Church through these 100 years be to the Glory of God. May there be even greater things ahead for the future members of this congregation!" stated Rev. Anderson. He quoted John 1:16 as follows:

"Out of the fullness of His grace He has blessed us giving us one blessing after another."

Halbasch, Folger Relate History Of Redeemer Church

"Celebrating a Centennial is an exciting time in the life of Redeemer Lutheran church. One hundred years is quite a milestone, a time to look back to reflect, as well as to look to the future," organist Joyce Halbasch told the congregation at a recent service. Her comments follow:

The story of Redeemer Lutheran church is an interesting one. In 1880 there were only a few settlers in the area. Hardships and sacrifices were continually parts of their lives. In fact, five miles north of Thief River Falls there was nothing but unsettled wilderness. There were no roads east or west, so settlers on either side of the ridge seldom met each other. St. Hilaire did have a railroad station, however, where most of the early settlers went for supplies.

There are many fond memories of the first church, and many special people — like Elmer Johnson (brother of Ray Johnson), who built the beautiful wood pulpit, with its hard woods and special carvings. This pulpit was dedicated in memory of Elmer and Ray's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Reynold Johnson, in 1957.

Then there were Art Wilson, Art Hanson and Walter Peterson, some of the first custodians; and Agnes Longren, who was the church organist for over 40 years; and Sigrid Griebstein, herself a centurian, having celebrated her 100th birthday. Her pioneer heritage, and all that she contributed to her family and the church are worth remembering.

The list of all the people who have made contributions to the growth and ministry of Redeemer is almost endless. Their work on behalf of Park Ridge congregation marked the beginnings of Redeemer Lutheran church. The upcoming Centennial, therefore, can serve to refresh memories and thankfulness for their efforts.

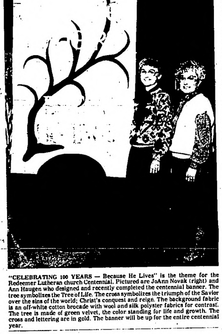
Those early pioneers were people of faith. Faith in their Lord, who was present with them as they lived in trust and love. It is fitting, therefore, that Redeemer's Centennial hymn be "Praise His Name", for it has been through God's guidance that the congregations has continued to serve. This hymn was written by Bonnie Wold Judes, daughter of Alvin and Pearl Wold, members of Redeemer.

In his comments Dale Folger related some of the history of the present church located at 1300 Nora Street. He said 11.3 acres of land were purchased in 1961 for $7,500. None of this area was developed at that time. Through the help of LLM, the necessary monies were raised to go ahead with the building.

Special thanks and recognition go to Hans Stensgaard, whose name is almost synonymous with building Redeemer in 1965. He not only served on the building committee but was the foreman of the actual construction. (Hans was also the contractor when the church was remodeled in 1940.)

"This new church didn't just happen. It was made possible by commitment, dedication and faith of many, like Hans, who looked to the future," Folger said.

REDEEMER LUTHERAN CHURCH in Thief River Falls will note its 100th anniversary June 20-21 with a special observance at the church. A number of activities are planned, including a potluck supper, youth service, worship services, dinner and anniversary program. The building above was dedicated in 1966 with an addition dedicated in 1980.



"CELEBRATING 100 YEARS — Because He Lives" is the theme for the Redeemer Lutheran church Centennial. Pictured are JoAnn Novak (right) and Ann Haugen who designed and recently completed the centennial banner. The tree symbolizes the Tree of Life. The cross symbolizes the triumph of the Savior over the sins of the world; Christ's conquest and reign. The background fabric is an off-white cotton brocade with wool and silk polyster fabrics for contrast. The tree is made of green velvet, the color standing for life and growth. The cross and lettering are in gold. The banner will be up for the entire centennial year.

Demographic Data Indicates Changes Expected In Minnesota

Minnesota's population growth and labor force growth are slowing. The population is aging and the state is a more popular place for retiring. The suburbs are growing faster than the inner Twin Cities. Greater Minnesota is losing population faster than anticipated.

Those are a few of the projections for Minnesota's future made by two of the state's top demographic experts who testified at the Minnesota House of Representatives futurist subcommittee meeting. The new subcommittee, chaired by Rep. Dan Knuth (DFL-New Brighton), is taking on the task of thinking ahead beyond members' two-year terms to help the legislature responsibly plan for the state's future.

"As legislators, we must pay attention to what our future looks like. We can react to the predictions and make changes, and we should think about doing both of those before it gets too late," said Rep. Wally Sparby of Thief River Falls. "Some of these statements about our future are good for us all to hear."

The state's demographer said the pictures he draws of the state's future help plan development of health care facilities, water treatment plants, student population in schools, utility needs, roads and transportation and other community projects.

Demographic projections are an art, he said, not a science. "Luck is an important ally and humility is an important asset for us. There's an old saying that 'he who lives by the crystal ball usually ends up eating glass.'"

Here are some of the points that were presented to the subcommittee last week:

+ Minnesotans generally live longer than other people in our nation.

+ Minnesota is a "homegrown" state, meaning not many people move here or move away.

+ Minnesota's population growth and economy are projected to be stronger than in our—neighboring states.

+ As the baby boom generation (people now aged 25 to 40) ages, more and more grey colors are showing up in our wardrobes and full-figured fashions are increasingly popular.

+ Our middle-aged population numbers are increasing fast. The number of elderly people is quickly rising, and the number of young people is dropping fast, which show up in the wide-open teen labor market and droping college enrollments.

+ Greater Minnesota is losing population fast, probably due to the depressed economy, but many people who are migrating out of those areas are expected to return. In 1900, half of our population lived on farms. In 1980, less than 10 per cent of our population lived on farms.

+ Minnesota historically is a very hard-working state. The number of women (by percentage) in the state's workforce is higher than the national averages, the number of two-income families in our state is higher than in the nation, and the family and per capita incomes are higher in Minnesota than in the rest of the nation.

+ The state's population is projected to be 4.6 million in 1990. It was 4.0 million in 1980. That increase is slightly larger than the increase between 1970 and 1980. The counties surrounding the Twin Cities (Sherburne, Isanti, Chisago, Wright and Dakota) will continue to have the fastest growth rates. Southern and western Minnesota and the Iron Range will lose population.

+ The state's labor force will grow 14 per cent between 1980 and 1990, less than half of what the growth was between 1970 and 1980. The drop is due to the baby boom aging itself out of the labor force and a slow-down in numbers of women entering the labor force.

Insurance Claims Are Subject To Regulations

Minneston law governs the way insurance claims are handled. The law is designed to ensure that insurance companies will handle claims in good faith by requiring full and open disclosure to consumers and prompt processing of their claims, according to the Minnesota attorney general's office.

The law is quite detailed and addresses all aspects of claims procedures. However, there are certain portions of the act, particularly those which relate to the time of claims procedures, which are fairly important to both consumers and insurance agents.

A person who files a claim under his or her policy has obviously suffered a loss of some kind. That loss may represent a personal disaster to the consumer, whose paramount thought, aside from "how much will I be paid?" is usually "when will I be paid?" The various steps in the claims process are now subject to strict deadlines.

The first step in the process occurs when a consumer notifies his or her insurance company of a claim. Notification is defined broadly as "any communication. . .which reasonably apprises the insurer of a claim. . ." under a policy. For all but health insurance claims, the company must acknowledge notification within 10 business days, and, unless the claim is settled within that period, must provide the claimant with all necessary forms and instructions for formal filing. Also under this definition, notice to one's insurance agent is considered notice to the insurer. The provision implicitly places a responsibility on the agent to promptly relay notification to the company so that the 10-day deadline can be met. In addition to claims notifications, companies must respond to all other inquiries from claimants within 10 business days.

After notification of a claim, the company has 30 business days to complete its investigation and inform the claimant of its intended disposition of the matter. If 30 days is not enough to fully investigate, the company must, within that period, tell the claimant why it needs more time. The law sets 60 days after receipt of a proper proof of loss as the outside limit for final decision on payment.

Another provision applies specifically to automobile policies: if a damaged vehicle belonging to a company's insured cannot be safely driven, the company must exercise its right to inspect the vehicle within five business days of notification of the claim. For third party claimants (other individuals involved in the accident) the inspection must be made within 15 days.

If a claim is settled, the insurer must issue the agreed payment within five business days of its receipt of the agreement. If a claim is denied, the insurer must disclose the basis of the denial, the insured's claim and policy numbers, and the name, address and telephone number of the person who can take questions and complaints about the denial.

If the law is not followed, the state commerce commissioner can issue cease-and-desist orders to companies which commit even a single violation—the commissioner no longer needs to show a "general business practice" of unfair claims settlements. If a company requests a fact-finding hearing it must be held within seven days of the request. After the hearing, if the evidence warrants, the commissioner can assess civil penalties of up to $2,000 for each violation.

For any questions about handling insurance claims, contact the Minnesota Attorney General's Office, Commerce Division, 1100 Bremer Tower, 7th Place and Minnesota Street, St. Paul, 55101, (612) 296-9412; or the Insurance Division of the Department of Commerce, (612) 296-2488, or toll-free, 1-800-652-9747.

Redeemer Church Plans For 100th Anniversary

Redeemer Lutheran church in Thief River Falls will mark a milestone on June 20 and 21 when it will celebrate its 100th anniversary. Plans have been in progress for the past 18 months.

The festivities will begin on Saturday evening, June 20, with a potluck supper at 5:30 p.m. A youth service will follow at 7:30 p.m. Sunday worship services are scheduled for 8:15 and 10:15 a.m. with dinner to follow. Bishop Harold of Lohr of the Red River Valley synod, LCA, will speak at the anniversary cleebration scheduled for 2:30 p.m. Preceeding the 2:30 p.m. service there will be a half-hour program of organ and piano music, duets, choirs and soloists. A tea will follow.

The public is encouraged to attend any or all of these services.

Those serving on the Centennial committee are Rev. Luther Anderson, Edna Thorstad, Enid Sande, Joyce Halbasch, Dale Folger, Iris Furuseth, Leonard Hellquist and Hazel Maves.

A history of the congregation prepared by the Centennial committee follows:

On June 11, 1887, at 2 o'clock in th afternoon, the Svenska Evangeliska Park Ridge Forsamlingen church was organized. Articles of incorporation and a constitution recommended by the Augustana Synod were adopted. This was the result of earlier work by the Rev. J. S. Ryding from Black River Lutheran church and Rev. Svante Udden, a young minister from Warren.

Charter members consisted of nine families and three single men — P. Peterson, wife and family; S. J. Swenson and wife; John Carlson, wife and family; John Bloom, wife and family; August Norlund, wife and family; S. Viberg, wife and family; John P. Swanson, wife and family; L. E. Erickson, wife and family; and P. B. Malberg and wife. The single men were August Soderberg, C. A. Swanson and Fred Edenholm.

First meetings of this congregation were held in rural homes or school houses. In 1902, the congregation located in Thief River Falls when several Swedish families settled in the community. Services were held in various places including the city hall, Johnson's Millinery shop and the Mission church.

In 1910, the congregation experienced a greater sense of mission with the construction of its first church, located in the 300 block on North Horace (north of the present Anderson Bros. 66, Inc.), The first parsonage was purchased in 1920 for $3,500 at 816 North Main. Prior to 1923, English and Swedish services were held alternately. Congregational minutes were recorded in English for the first time in 1921.

A parsonage at 421 North LaBree and an adjoining lot were purchased in 1939. The next year the church building was moved to the lot at 425 North LaBree and extensively remodeled.

Crowded conditions in 1956 necessitated two Sunday morning worship services as well as two Sunday school sessions, even with the conversion of the parsonage into classrooms (this parsonage was sold in 1967, and is presently a part of Bruce Pharmacy).

In 1957, a long-range building committee was elected to plan for the needs of an active, growing congregation. A parsonage was purchased at 228 North Merriam in 1958 (sold December 1975). An 11.3 acre site located in the southeast corner of Thief River Falls was purchased in 1961 at a cost of $7,500.

November 1, 1965, the congregation voted to build a new church. Groundbreaking was held that month at the present location — 1300 E. Nora street. This church was dedicated "to the Glory of God" on Dec. 11, 1966. Within 10 years consideration was already given to provide needed facilities for our rapidly growing Sunday church school. On Oct. 1, 1978, the congregation approved plans to move the kitchen, remodel the former fellowship hall into Sunday school rooms, and add the fireside room and new fellowship hall. Ground-breaking for this venture took place June 3, 1979, with dedication of the new addition on Sept. 21, 1980.

Since the church organized in 1887 as the Svenska Evangeliska Lutherska church, it has been renamed several times. In 1902, it was known as the First Swedish Evangelical Lutheran church of Thief River Falls; in 1922, it was renamed the Augustana Lutheran church. When the church was moved to the LaBree Avenue location in 1940, it was changed to First Lutheran church and in 1963 renamed Redeemer Lutheran church.

The pastors who have served this congregation include the first organizers — Rev. J. S. Ryding and Rev. Svante Udden; Rev. James Moody (1888-1896); Rev. T. Seashore (1896-1898); Rev. J. AS. Mattson (1899-1901); Rev. A Melin (1901-1902); and Rev. Alex Sand (1903-1907). From 1887 to 1907 the congregation was part of the Black River church.

From 1907 to 1915 it was served by laypreachers and students — Peter Dahlquist, August Westlund, Eugene Abrahamson, L. B. Benson and occasional visits from pastors of the district — Pastors G. Wahlund and W. Chellgren.

Rev. Albin A. Larson was first resident pastor (1915-1924); followed by Rev. Aner Bloom (1927-1930); Rev. H. L. Sjogren (1931-1935); Rev. C. W. Erickson (1936-1942); Rev. Carl F. Johnson (1943-1954); Rev. Marvin O. Carlson (1955-1963); Rev. Dennis Rodin (1964-1969); Mr. Otto Baker served intermittently as lay pastor 1969-1970); Rev. Phil Lathrop (1970-1972); Rev. Keith Prekker (1972-1982); Rev. Don Knudson (1978-1984); Gary Heaton was hired as part-time lay-pastor and youth director in September of 1982; Rev. Luther Anderson (1983 to present); and Rev. Allan Bray (1984-1986).

The internship program began in 1973 and has since included John and Sue Hagberg, (September 1973-1974); Joe and Paula Dillon (1974-1975); Ron and Barb Allen (1975-1976); Peter and Lo Ann Martinson (1976-1977); Doug and Jan Demlow (1977-1978); Paul Trenne (1984-1985); Doug Thompson (1985-1986) and Carl Hatlen, (1987).

Former members from the congregation ordained into the ministry are Willis Erickson and James H. Peterson in 1965, and Mark Anderson in 1972. Presently attending seminary are Terri Cuppett and Greg McEwen. Presently serving as missionaries are Allan and Gretchen Bray in Germany, and Randy and Eileen Johnson in New Guinea. Other former members who have served as missionaries are Lori Heidel, the Dr. Joe Norquist family, and the Ray Martin family.

When the congregation was organized in 1887, it consisted of 12 members. It grew to approximately 50 baptized members when the first church was built in 1910, and expanded to approximately 200 at the time of remodeling in 1940. The congregation increased to 750 when the church was built at 1300 East Nora, 1,300 members in 1980, and has 1,670 baptized members in 1987.

It is interesting to note that one charter member family, the J.P. Swansons, has had continuous membership in our church. Their son was Edwin Swanson, now deceased, and present members are grandson Curtis Swanson, great-grandson Wesley Swanson and great-great-grandchildren Heather, Stacy and Bethany Swanson. Present member Larry Swanson is alo a great-grandson and his children, Trisha and Trevor, are great-great grandchildren of J.P. Swanson. Kendall Jenson is a great-grandson and his sons Joshua and Aaron are great-great-grandsons of another charter member, John Bloom.

The congregation was aligned for a number of years with Calvary Lutheran church in Strathcona. A vote was taken in 1955 to dissolve that congregation; in 1957 the members merged with a neighboring church, thus ending the relationship with Redeemer.

In 1966, the congregation voted to accept alignment with Black River Lutheran church, St. Hilaire. In a special meeting on Jan. 20, 1967, approval was given the pastor to accept a separate call to Black River. This arrangement still continues.

The ladies aid was organized in 1901 with 15 ladies. They met twice a month. In 1948, thanks to a gift from the ladies aid society, all congregational debts were paid. The ladies aid society had been giving financial aid to the congregation since it was organized.

Augustana Lutheran Church Women were reorganized Feb 17, 1959. Purpose of the LCW is: "To be a community of women, which in response to the Holy Spirit, engages in the mission of proclamation and reconciliation through its life and work, and through the life and work of the Lutheran Church of America."

The altar guild started in 1956, and consisted of 12 members. In 1981 membership was increased to 18, and the term of office was changed from two to three years. Their purpose is to serve the congregation by maintianing and improving the sanctuary for worship, and to minister to individuals as they are involved in the worship at communion, baptism, weddings and funerals.

In addition to their regular duties, in 1984 the members designed and stitched 10 symbols for the for the space above the windows in the church sanctuary. The purpose was to reacquaint members with the symbols and to add to the beauty of the sanctuary.

The Sunday school was organized in 1909, and has continued its uninterrupted work with rapid increases. As an example, the enrollment in 1947 was 75; present enrollment is 236.

Other organizations that have given, or are giving, support to the church through various ways are choirs, men's club, couple's club, Golden Age, Luther league (now called senior league, junior league and "King's Kids.")

Redeemer church is known in the community as the first home of Discovery Place, a daycare center serving pre-school and young children. The church facilities were used by this organization from 1971 to 1978, at which time it moved to a new building. Redeemer is also host to a number of community groups. The congregation has provided assistance to three refugee families being resituated in American culture.

"May the efforts of all the dedicated, faithful servants of Christ in Redeemer Lutheran Church through these 100 years be to the Glory of God. May there be even greater things ahead for the future members of this congregation!" stated Rev. Anderson. He quoted John 1:16 as follows:

"Out of the fullness of His grace He has blessed us giving us one blessing after another."

DALE FOLGER and Joyce Halbasch (pictured in the above photos) related some of the history of Redeemer Lutheran church in Thief River Falls at a recent morning worship service. The church will observe its 100th anniversary with a special series of events June 20 and 21. Their comments are included in the accompanying story.

REDEEMER LUTHERAN CHURCH in Thief River Falls will note its 100th anniversary June 20-21 with a special observance at the church. A number of activities are planned, including a potluck supper, youth service, worship services, dinner and anniversary program. The building above was dedicated in 1966 with an addition dedicated in 1980.

"CELEBRATING 100 YEARS — Because He Lives" is the theme for the Redeemer Lutheran church Centennial. Pictured are JoAnn Novak (right) and Ann Haugen who designed and recently completed the centennial banner. The tree symbolizes the Tree of Life. The cross symbolizes the triumph of the Savior over the sins of the world; Christ's conquest and reign. The background fabric is an off-white cotton brocade with wool and silk polyster fabrics for contrast. The tree is made of green velvet, the color standing for life and growth. The cross and lettering are in gold. The banner will be up for the entire centennial year.

Halbasch, Folger Relate History Of Redeemer Church

"Celebrating a Centennial is an exciting time in the life of Redeemer Lutheran church. One hundred years is quite a milestone, a time to look back to reflect, as well as to look to the future," organist Joyce Halbasch told the congregation at a recent service. Her comments follow:

The story of Redeemer Lutheran church is an interesting one. In 1880 there were only a few settlers in the area. Hardships and sacrifices were continually parts of their lives. In fact, five miles north of Thief River Falls there was nothing but unsettled wilderness. There were no roads east or west, so settlers on either side of the ridge seldom met each other. St. Hilaire did have a railroad station, however, where most of the early settlers went for supplies.

There are many fond memories of the first church, and many special people — like Elmer Johnson (brother of Ray Johnson), who built the beautiful wood pulpit, with its hard woods and special carvings. This pulpit was dedicated in memory of Elmer and Ray's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Reynold Johnson, in 1957.

Then there were Art Wilson, Art Hanson and Walter Peterson, some of the first custodians; and Agnes Longren, who was the church organist for over 40 years; and Sigrid Griebstein, herself a centurian, having celebrated her 100th birthday. Her pioneer heritage, and all that she contributed to her family and the church are worth remembering.

The list of all the people who have made contributions to the growth and ministry of Redeemer is almost endless. Their work on behalf of Park Ridge congregation marked the beginnings of Redeemer Lutheran church. The upcoming Centennial, therefore, can serve to refresh memories and thankfulness for their efforts.

Those early pioneers were people of faith. Faith in their Lord, who was present with them as they lived in trust and love. It is fitting, therefore, that Redeemer's Centennial hymn be "Praise His Name", for it has been through God's guidance that the congregations has continued to serve. This hymn was written by Bonnie Wold Judes, daughter of Alvin and Pearl Wold, members of Redeemer.

In his comments Dale Folger related some of the history of the present church located at 1300 Nora Street. He said 11.3 acres of land were purchased in 1961 for $7,500. None of this area was developed at that time. Through the help of LLM, the necessary monies were raised to go ahead with the building.

Special thanks and recognition go to Hans Stensgaard, whose name is almost synonymous with building Redeemer in 1965. He not only served on the building committee but was the foreman of the actual construction. (Hans was also the contractor when the church was remodeled in 1940.)

"This new church didn't just happen. It was made possible by commitment, dedication and faith of many, like Hans, who looked to the future," Folger said.

Homeowner And Renter Refunds Are Discussed

Whether you own or rent, and especially if you are low-income, learn if you qualify for the 1986 Minnesota property tax refund. You may be eligible for a direct payment even if you have not earned enough to file a tax return, according to the community legal education program of the Legal Aid Society of Minneapolis.

You may qualify for the Minnesota property tax refund whether you are a homeowner or renter. This refund uses a sliding-scale to give special help to low-income, elderly and disabled persons. If you rent and are low-income, this especially helpful because you probably pay a larger portion of your income for property taxes. (Renters pay property taxes indirectly through their rent).

To qualify as a renter, you must have lived for all or part of 1986 in a building on which property tax is paid. Minnesota must be your permanent home whether you live there full or part year, and you cannot be someone else's dependent. You may qualify even if you live in a building owned by a non-profit institution, such as a nursing home or other health care facility. If you are not sure whether property tax is paid on your building, ask your administrator or landlord. If you live in public housing, you should be able to apply for the refund.

To apply, sign and file a completed Minnesota 1986 property tax refund form and return it with an attached rent certificate (Form CRP) by Aug. 17, 1987. (You can file up to one year after the deadline, but will lose up to 25 per cent of your refund by filing late).

Your landlord is required to give you a signed Form CRP by Feb. 2, 1987. It shows your share of property taxes paid in 1986. If you can't get one by March 2, or if it is incorrect, call the department of revenue at (800) 652-9094 toll-free. If you shared rent with a roommate, you must apply for separate refunds, and must attach separate Form CRP's showing each of you as entitled to equal shares of the property tax paid.

If you were a married renter for all of 1986, you and your spouse must apply for a single refund together. If you married during the year and rented separately before that, you can apply either for a single refund together or for separate refunds.

To qualify as a homeowner, you must have owned and lived in you home on Jan. 2, 1987, and must have been either a full or part-year resident of Minnesota during 1986. You must not be someone else's dependent. Minnesota must be your permanent home. When applying, you must include your spouse's income and that of anyone living with you, except for boarders, renters, you or your spouse's parents and your dependents.

If you are on AFDC, your property tax refund is excluded as income and is permanently excluded as income as long as it is kept identifiable and in a separate account. It is excluded as a resource in the month you receive it; however it will be treated as a resource in each following month that you have it.

Also, be sure to look at other state and federal tax credits which may be available to you. For example, if your 1986 earned income and your adjusted gross were each less than $11,000, and you had a dependent child living with you more than six months during 1986, you might qualify for the federal earned income credit. If you can take this credit — which can be up to $550 — you can subtract it from tax you owe, or get a refund even if you had no tax withheld from your wages.

If you are elderly, handicapped or low-income, there may be free tax help near your home through the VITA-TCE program. For locations, call toll-free 800-652-9094; for state tax information, call toll-free 800-652-9094, and for federal tax information, call toll-free 800-424-1040 if you live outside the metro area.

(This information, provided by the community legal education program of the Legal Aid society of Minneapolis, is distributed with the cooperation of Northwest Minnesota Legal Services and not meant to give complete answers to individual legal problems. If you need legal help, see your family attorney or call 800-452-3625 for information about legal services for low-income persons.)

Congress Must Adjust Capital Gains Rates

by Cesar V. Conda
Tax Economist
U.S. Chamber of Commerce

Investment, risk-taking, entrepreneurship, mobility of capital and even federal tax revenues are all endangered by the increase in the capital gains tax included in the new tax reform law.

The new tax bill's repeal of the federal differential between taxes on capital gains and other income for individuals and corporations will result in spectacular increases in effective tax rates on capital gains. Long-term capital gains will suffer from a one-two punch — first at the federal level and again at the state level.

On the federal level, the individual exclusion of 60 per cent of capital gains from taxable income is repealed, raising the top federal capital gains tax rate from 20 per cent to 28 per cent and after 1987 as high as 33 per cent. Thus, individuals in the highest tax brackets will face a 40 per cent increase in federal capital gains taxes. Corporate capital gains will be taxed at the same rate as all other corporate income, with the maximum rate rising from 28 per cent to 34 per cent.

Most states conform their tax structures to the federal tax base. Ending federal capital gains differentials will automatically require most states to do likewise. Consequently, unless state income tax rates are lowered, capital gains will be exposed to the maximum tax brackets. For most states, the top effective tax rates on individual capital gains will rise from between 20 and 22 per cent to between 36 and 37 per cent. Similarly, the top effective tax rate of corporate capital gains will rise to 39 to 40 per cent in most states.

Consider the plight of a New York state investor in the top income tax brackets. Under the old code, this investor paid a combined federal and state capital gains tax rate of only 22.7 per cent. Under the new tax code, this tax rises sharply. The top federal (28 per cent) and state (9.72 per cent) capital gains tax rates boost the effective tax rate to 37.72 per cent — a 66 per cent increase.

Eliminating federal differentials will widen the gap between effective capital gains tax rates from state to state. Today, the effective top tax rate on individual capital gains range from 20 per cent in states with no capital gains tax to between 22 and 33 per cent in high-tax states. After tax reform, rates will vary between states from a low of 28 per cent to as much as 42 per cent.

Wealthy individuals and corporations will have a powerful incentive to move to low-tax states. It may prove quite difficult for states to prevent capital flight. Political hurdles will likely prevent states from cutting their income tax rates or restoring the differentials.

For example, New York government officials have predicted that the state would reap a $2 billion windfall from tax reform unless they adjusted their tax rates downward. About half of this windfall would come from the automatic increase in capital gains taxes. While many agree that the capital gains tax must be reduced to prevent capital flight, others believe that the entire windfall should be redistributed to the poor through tax cuts or increased welfare spending. Should this issue be framed in terms of rich versus poor, the prospects for tax rate reductions would greatly diminish.

Sharp increases in tax rates on capital gains will have severe economic effects:

+ First, individual investment, particularly in high-risk activities, will be reduced. Past experience shows that capital gains tax hikes have a devastating impact on risk capital investing. In the early 1970s, the capital gains tax was doubled from 25 per cent to 49 per cent. As a consequence, capital invested in new small companies with growth potential fell from $117 million in 1969 to $10 million 1975.

+ Second, high capital gains tax rates discourage investors from realizing their capital gains, which impedes the free flow of investment capital. This is sometimes called the "lock-in" effect. If funds are locked into existing investments, it slows the creation of new technologies, new plants and equipment and new jobs.

+ Third, raising the capital gains tax rate further reduces the attractiveness of investment relative to consumption. An individual's return on investment in commercial enterprises is taxed once at the corporate level and again at the individual level. Thus, investment income is taxed twice. Policymakers should strive to eliminate the tax bias against savings and investment.

Higher capital gains tax rates reduce taxpayer's willingness to realize capital gains, thus reducing the amount of tax revenue the federal government actually receives from upper-income taxpayers.

Cutting the capital gains tax would produce more federal tax revenue and increase the proportion of taxes paid by the wealthy. Consider the evidence from the 1978 capital gains tax rate cut. After the reduction in the maximum capital gains tax rate from 49 per cent to 28 per cent, total tax revenue from capital gains rose sharply from $8.1 billion in 1978 to $13.9 billion in 1983.

Reducing the federal capital gains tax will reduce the tax bias against savings and investment, solve the one-two punch problem from federal and state capital gains taxation and promote a fairer tax distribution between the middle class and the wealthy. At the very least, high tax states must cut their capital gains tax in order to prevent the flight of capital and jobs to low tax states.

Incinerators Are Improvement But Not A Panacea

In terms of their potential health impact, power-generating incinerators represent "a significant improvement" over earlier methods for disposing of solid waste, according to Sister Mary Madonna Ashton, Minnesota commissioner of health.

However, they "are not a panacea for solid waste problems," Commissioner Ashton said.

Commissioner Ashton had earlier pointed out some of the health concerns associated with waste incineration, during remarks at a December 2 conference sponsored by the state environmental quality board.

"The point is simply that we need to be aware of the potential health risks associated with any disposal technology, and take appropriate measures to protect the public health," Commissioner Ashton said.

"Incineration is not a perfect solution to the solid waste problem," she said. "It does represent a significant improvement over landfill disposal, just as landfills represented an improvement over the open burning that took place in our state prior to 1970.

Staff from the health department's health risk assessment section have already been involved in looking at the potential health effects of two proposed incinerator facilities — one in Hennepin county and the other at a site located near Elk River.

A permit has already been issued for the Elk River site. Because it is located near farm land — raising the possibility that environmental contaminants could enter the food chain — the Elk River facility has been required to install a $6 million "dry scrubber" system. The system represents the state of the art in controlling airborne pollution, according to authorities at the health department and the Minnesota pollution control agency.

Because of considerations like those that went into the Elk River permit decison, officials at the two agencies say they'll continue to review proposed incinerator facilities on a case by case basis, at least for the time being.

Plans are currently underway for at least 10 different incinerator facilities in Minnesota.

Citizens From TRF Lobby Against MN Tax Reforms

by David Hill
Times Reporter

Representatives from Thief River Falls chamber of commerce, local businesses and media in Thief River Falls travelled to St. Paul Monday to voice their united opposition to a proposed six per cent sales tax on services and advertising as well as increases in other taxes.

"I think we made an important impression on legislators from our district," said Dale Olmstead, KKAQ and KTRF.

Sue Lillevold, chamber of commerce executive vice president in Thief River Falls, agreed that the trip was an important one especially during a year when so many bills are being proposed which would hurt business throughout the state and will have an even greater impact on outstate or greater Minnesota.

Rep. Wally Sparby said recently he receives more mail from constituents than most of the legislators in St. Paul. In fact he may be among the top five.

Sparby would be among the first to agree that hearing from individuals and groups from his district are improtant. Recently two delegations from Thief River Falls took an opportunity to express their thoughts on legislation important to them.

The two delegations were chamber of commerce and business representatives and a media delegation. Although different issues were covered by the media and the chamber of commerce group, both sought to influence tax reform changes.

Representing the media from Thief River Falls were Dale Olmstead, Curt Quesnell and Larry Mike of KKAQ in Thief River Falls and Fosston, Brett Carter of KSNR and KTRF and David Hill of the Thief River Falls Times and Warren Sheaf. Representing the business community of Thief River Falls and the chamber of commerce from Thief River Falls was Sue Lillevold, Ev Ault, chairman of the legislative committee for the chamber of commerce, Roger Schaffer, and Bob Flynn.

Lillevold said the chamber of commerce group met with Sen. LeRoy Stumpf and Rep. Wally Sparby as well as other influential legislators. They also met with Mark Anderson of the Minnesota chamber of commerce. Anderson is the Minnesota C of C attorney and special representative on property tax issues.

Lillevold said the group she was with brought letters from other chamber of commerces and signitures from other business operators in Thief River Falls. All were in opposition of a property tax system which this year raised commercial property taxes in Thief River Falls by as much as 50 per cent in some instances.

The media from this area met with Terry Montgomery, chief of staff for Governor Rudy Perpich, Rep. Wally Sparby, Sen. LeRoy Stumpf, state media representatives, and other legislators. Though not registered to speak formerly at a hearing held Monday evening in the Capitol, the group was able to express its dissatisfaction with the bill to district legislative representatives and deliver a formal letter expressing opposition to the bill.

The group presented the following fact sheet to present the adverse impact a tax on advertising would have:

Double taxation. Advertising is a cost of doing business and is included in the final selling price of a merchant's goods. That sales price is already subject to Minnesota state sales tax. Taxing both advertising and the final cost of the product advertised is double taxation.

Discriminates against local business. A state sales tax on advertising would only apply to ad space and time bought in Minnesota. Advertising circulated in Minnesota in national and regional media would be exempt from the tax. This drives advertising purchases out of the state. This tax would also enable out-of-state merchants to offer their products at reduced prices due to lower advertising costs. This would especially hurt border cities.

Stifles economic growth. Distribution and marketing are as important to a company's success as production of its items for sale. Most companies are likely to have reservations about locating in Minnesota if our state puts a tax burden on advertising, a vital ingredient in sales strategy in the modern competitive marketplace. Aside from failing to attract new business, an ad tax could also inhibit the expansion of existing business and induce some business to leave. This would affect jobs, the accrual of other business taxes, and overall amount of sales tax revenue.

Inflates prices. Advertising makes a major contribution toward holding down prices in that it fosters competition. Reduced advertising means reduced competition and higher prices. Advertising supplies shoppers with essential information on the location, availability and cost of goods and services. It enables consumers to obtain maximum benefit from shopping dollars.

Reduces state tax revenues. Recent university studies indicate that a tax on advertising will actually reduce state tax revenues. These studies show that each dollar spent on advertising generates $33 in sales. For each advertising dollar that must be used to pay tax instead of to purchase space and time, $1.65 will be lost in sales tax that would have been collected on the final sale of the item advertised.

When a tax is placed on advertising the advertiser can do one of two things: reduce the allotted amount for advertising to compensate for the tax or spend the same on advertising and pass the tax to the consumer in the form of higher prices for the advertised product. In the former case, the state loses since the reduced amount spent on advertising will eventually mean reduced sales and consequently reduced sales tax revenue.

If an advertiser does not reduce his advertising budget he will have to pass the tax on to the consumer in the form of higher prices for advertised product. The higher price for the product reflects a double tax on the consumer who will pay a tax on the sale of the product as well as on the advertising of the product. Aside from being unfair to the consumer, this double tax will, due to the law of supply and demand, diminish demand for the product. The diminished demand for the product will inevitably mean less sales and less sales tax revenue.

Lowers wages, increases unemployment. Merchants unable to pass the advertising tax expenditure along by increasing prices must reduce other operating costs accordingly. Since payroll is the largest cost component for most businesses, many companies will react to the expense of the advertising tax by lowering wages and cutting employee levels. Decreased sales caused by less advertising will also have an adverse effect on the work force.

Shackles free speech. A tax on advertising would be a heavy blow to Minnesota's information media, which depends on advertising revenues for their main support. This is vitally important in that our society values the open exchange of ideas and the information available through an unfettered press. The historic U.S. Supreme Court case of Grossjean vs. American Press (1936) notes: "A free press stands as one of the great interpreters between the government and the people. To allow it to be fettered is to fetter ourselves."

Tampers with free enterprise. Advertising is a cost-effective, time-honored means of selling a product or service. It is especially important to the success of new and small businesses which can least afford such increased costs.

Doesn't work. The application of an add-on sales tax on advertising has been unsuccessful when attempted in other states. The city of Baltimore, MD, and the states of Iowa and Arizona all repealed their advertising taxes as unwise.

How much more do they want? Minnesota Broadcasters have provided close to a million dollars in advertising for the state through our tourism dues-trade option. How much more do they want from us? And, since this is an advertising service providing revenue to MBA, will the state tax itself?

Penalizes business. An advertising tax would penalize a needed service. The advertiser sees advertising as the purchase of a service as opposed to a tangible product. This service brings the advertiser's message to potential customers and is the most cost-effective aid to personal selling. Consequently, there is no more justification for a tax on advertising than there is a tax on every salesperson for each call he or she makes on a prospective customer or a tax on store clerks when they wait on customers.

Competitive disadvantage. A tax placed on advertising would handicap Minnesota's ad industry in competition with ad industries in neighboring states that don't tax advertising. The advertising industry is extremely competitive and mobile. Often times an agency or production house wins or loses a project by a margin equal to many sales tax rates. Why give your business to an agency in a state with an ad tax? Why place advertising in media with a placement tax" An ad tax hurts both large and small business. However, it is likely that the impact of an ad tax on small business might be even harsher than its impact on larger business (i.e. smaller accounts).

Regressive. This tax would undoubtedly be passed on to the business community. Contact your local Chamber of Commerce to make a resolution opposing a tax that would so adversely affect business.

Clean Water Act Reintroduced By Sen. Durenberger

"Minnesota communities can't afford broken promises," U.S. Senator Dave Durenberger said Tuesday in introducing legislation reauthorizing the nation's clean water act.

"In 1981," Durenberger said, "the Reagan administration promised to support a 10-year program to support municipal waste treatment. This legislation makes sure we keep that commitment."

The legislation introduced today is identical to a bill adopted unanimously by the House and Senate in the 99th Congress, but which was vetoed by President Reagan. It commits $18 billion to building municipal sewage treatment systems over eight years, including about $44 million per year in sewage treatment grants for cities in Minnesota.

"Smaller, rural communities in Minnesota are in desperate need of this funding," Durenberger said. "Federal water quality standards are requiring them to upgrade their sewage treatment systems, and the federal government has an obligation to help pay the bill."

In all, Durenberger said, 173 Minnesota communities have been identified as "high priority" for municipal sewage treatment funding.

"Most are smaller communities in rural areas which would go broke," he said, "if they tried to finance the full cost of building a new sewage treatment system themselves."

In addition to the wastewater treatment program, the Clean Water bill includes new provisions to control "non-point source pollution" resulting from agricultural runoff and storm sewers.

Among the Clean Water Act's other provisions is a new section designed to restore and maintain water quality in the Great Lakes. About 26 million Americans receive their drinking water from one of the five Great Lakes.

"All of the demands placed on the Great Lakes — for transportation, recreation, power generation and other uses — have taken their toll," Durenberger said. "The water quality of the lakes has declined sharply."

The legislation appropriates $11 million per year for a series of programs to monitor water quality, reduce or remove toxic pollutants, and do research on both the causes and remedies for Great Lakes water pollution. The bill envisions close cooperation with Canada and with states bordering on the Great Lakes.

KENT WAGNER 794

New Family Bowl High Series . . .

Wagner Wins Title In Record Fashion

Highest three-game series in Family Bowl history was turned in by Kent Wagner Sunday as he won the Thief River Falls Men's Day Tournament.

In beating Lee Genereux, Rick Bottner and Dave Onkka during the tournament's five-man finals, Wagner bowled games of 279, 247 and 268 for a building record 794 series.

That topped by one pin a 793 recorded by Joel Carlson in 1979.

Wagner, who bowls regularly in Tuesday and Thursday night league action while subbing in other leagues, carries a 203 season average, with 290 high game. His best previous three-game series was a 747, turned in just recently.

Men's Day Tournament started with 50 bowlers in Saturday's qualifying round across the 16 Family Bowl lanes. Top five scores returned for Sunday's finals. Onkka led all qualifiers with a 247 game. Wagner had a 241 scratch score.

In Sunday's head-to-head competition, Genereux beat Louis Stine 231-209; Wagner outlasted Genereux 279-277; Wagner handled Boltner 247-181; and Wagner defeated Onkka 268-238.

Brian Johnston Is One Of Concordia Tri-Captains

Brian Johnston of Thief River Falls, who recently completed his junior year with the Concordia College hockey team in Moorhead, has been named as one of the Cobbers' tri-captains for the 1987-88 season, according to head coach Steve Baumgartner.

Johnston, Brad Lacomy of Winnipeg and Rob Deics of Regina, SK will serve as Concordia captains next winter.

It's a deserved honor for Johnston, indicated Baumgartner. "I think Brian had one of the best years he's had at Concordia last winter," said Baumgartner. "We look for a lot out of Brian next year. He's probably our best defenseman coming back. He's got all the talent to be an outstanding hockey player. He could really dominate our league (Minnesota Intercollegiate Athletic Conference) if he puts it all together."

Johnston earned MIAC all-conference recognition this year, although most of the Concrodia defensive attention was drawn to senior Mark Rice, named the outstanding player in the MIAC and a First Team All-American pick.

"We counted on Mark a lot," acknowledged Baumgartner, "and I think Brian learned a lot from him. But if you looked at them together, they're almost a clone. They can each carry the puck and have great shots. Brian, actually, was a better skater than Mark, and he's got one of the hardest shots I've ever seen. He (Brian) has a lot of talent. I don't mean to put any pressure on him, but I think he has the potential to be a First Team All-American."

Honorable Mention All-America . . .

Pahlen Earns Honors

Jody Pahlen, a Northland Community College sophomore, was awarded National Junior College Athletic Association (NJCAA) honorable mention All-America status for the 1986-87 basketball season, it was announced this week.

Pahlen is the first Northland player to be cited at the NJCAA national level in the 13-year history of the women's program at the school. She received earlier honors this year by being named to the All-Northwest Division team, the Minnesota Community College Conference All-State team and the NJCAA All-Region 13 team.

Doreene Heisler of Devils Lake, ND and Pahlen were the only area players earning NJCAA recognition. Heisler, who led the Royals to the NJCAA national tournament this year, was also an honorable mention All-America pick. No Region 13 player earned a spot on the First, Second or Third Team All-America lists.

Pahlen, a Plummer product, finished her two-year Northland basketball career as the school record-holder for points (768) and assists (226).

NJCAA year-end statistics also included two Northland names. The Pioneers' Janelle Lorsung ranked No. 13 in the national women's scoring charts with a 21.1 average, and the Pioneers' Anthony McCullough ranked No. 9 in the national men's rebounding charts with an average of 13 per game.

TRF Boys At Pirate Relays Tuesday . . .

Prowlers Have Three Winners

Paul Brandt, Rick Looker and Kyle Kisch were first place finishers Tuesday as the Thief River Falls boys participated in the Pirate Relays high school track meet at the Crookston Winter Shows Building.

East Grand Forks won team honors by a narrow 84-80 margin over runner-up Crookston. Stephen was third with 69 points, followed by Thief River Falls with 53½, Fertile-Beltrami 40, Hallock 36, Clearwater County North 31, Gary 4, Win-E-Mac 3, Warroad 2, and Redlake 1.

Brandt made a familiar appearance in the winter's circle with a 7.21 in the 60 meter dash. The senior sprinter is considered one of the top runners in Region 8AA. Thief River Falls coach Tim Olson juggled the Prowlers' line-up in building up a potential winning relay team, keeping Brandt out of the other Sprints.

That opened the door for Looker, and the sophomore turned in a 25.28 first place finish in the 200 meters.

Kisch, a senior, made the most dramatic improvement among the Thief River falls runners Tuesday with a five-second drop in the 800 meters, where he won in 2:10.

"That's what we're looking for — drops in times," explained Olson. "The kids did a nice job. They had fun."

Olson's plans for points in the sprint medley relay appeared to work when the Prowlers finished second in that event, but an infraction on a baton exchange disqualified them.

Thief River falls boys and girls will participate in the large field at the Sioux Relays Thursday beginning at 10 a.m. at the University of North Dakota in Grand Forks.

Thief River Falls winners Tuesday included Kent Holmes and Grant Larson at No. 2 and No. 3 singles, respectively, plus John Dondelinger and Troy Hanestad at No. 1 doubles. Holmes is a sophomore; the others are juniors.

"Those kids did a nice job," reported Thief River Falls coach Whitey Olson. "They played well. All of the kids played hard. I was pleased with their efforts."

Cheerleading is an important part of the Lincoln extracurricular activities program, and Bendickson is trying to promote the activity while giving the girls the recognition she feels they deserve.

NCC Softball Team Splits UMC Doubleheader

Third straight doubleheader split for the Northland Community College slow pitch softball team Tuesday put coach Patty Chiodo's Pioneers at 3-3 for the year.

Northland handled University of Minnesota-Crookston 16-6 in a five-inning twinbill opener yesterday afternoon in the Pioneers' 1987 home opener, but the Trojans won Game 2 by a 14-11 margin.

Janelle Lorsung and Tricia Armstrong both tripled and collected two singles on the day for the Pioneers. Annette Kofstad also had three hits — all singles. Shari Larson and Sharmon Monkman both collected two hits, and Cherie Deihl had a three-run home run.

Northland will be in International Falls Thursday for a 3 p.m. doubleheader against Rainy River. That's a make-up date from an April 3 season-opening postponement.

Private Lands

Minnesota DNR Forestry reports that over one million trees will be planted on private lands in our area this coming spring.

Bulk of this is due to the Conservation Reserve Program. Under this program, farmers are setting aside highly erodible acres and in most cases, less productive acres. The landowner must protect the soil from further erosion. He may plant grasses, trees, or a combination of both.

Some individuals, planning for the future, are planting three to five acres of their 40 or 80 into trees and the rest into grass. This is hoped to add considerable value to the location as a potential building spot, especially with the expansion of Marvins, Polaris, and Arctic Cat.

Other farmer-outdoorsman enthusiasts are developing their property into a wildlife sanctuary. Cost-shared practices available under the program allow virtually limitless combinations and potential. A 50 - 50 ratio of grassy openings and hardwood tree shrub plantings can develop an area into ideal sharptail grouse habitat. Well thought-out combinations of openings, fruiting shrubs, hardwoods, conifer cover, and pond development will provide diversity beneficial to many wildlife species.

Yet other farmers are going with solid block plantings of valuable "forest" trees for maximum timber production.

Most landowners, planting trees this spring, realize that it may not cost as much to establish trees as grass. In many cases, where the individual plants the trees himself, it can actually cost less. Fifty per cent of these costs, including the individual's time, will be reimbursed, thus reducing or eliminating out-of-pocket expense.

Another incentive to the farmer to plant at least a few acres to trees is that he does not have to pay for the trees at this time. Through the "Assignment of Payments" Program, the ASCS office will delay payment until his trees are established. The cost-share payment is simply reduced by the cost of the trees.

Participants may take up to three years to establish trees. Therefore, landowners can minimize the workload by one-third each year.

State nursery stock is sold at the cost of production, $75 to $95 per thousand. Although the landowner can obtain his tree seedlings from any nursery, generally the "price tag" for state seedlings is a big incentive.

Other reasons to plant trees are many. To reduce erosion, improve water quality, enhance aesthetics, reduce surplus commodities, and assist the farm economy.

Upon notification of bid acceptance, landowners must decide whether they will control erosion with shrubs, trees, grass or with a combination.

If you are considering planting trees or have any questions, contact the DNR Forestry at Wannaska 425-7666, Warroad 386-1304, Grygla 294-6115, or Clear River 386-1671.

RIM Legislation

"The 1987 Re-Invest in Minnesota legislation reflects our commitment to restoring, protecting and managing Minnesota's valuable land, water, fish and wildlife resources or the use and emjoyment of present and future generations," said Senator Steve Novak, upon introduction of the 1987 RIM bill. Novak is the lead sponsor in the Senate.

"The 1986 RIM law was the most significant agriculture-natural resources legislation ever passed in Minnesota," said Rep. Willard Munger, lead House sponsor of RIM. "It's hard to believe it, but the legislation we're introducing today only makes it better."

The 1987 RIM bill provides for the establishment of a wetlands restoration program, encourages farmers to place acres under permanent easement, requires a DNR accountability work plan, allows for flexible easement payments and requests $36 million in bonding for the biennium.

Senator Novak and Representative Munger were joined by other Senate and House sponsors and members of the RIM Coalition at the Capitol today.

"We're excited about RIM," said Dorothy Waltz, Chairman of the RIM Coalition. "RIM is good for everyone in Minnesota. Farmers, hunters, fishermen, foresters, conservationists and environmentalists are working together to guarantee Minnesota's future."

Based on the report of the Governor's Commission to Promote Hunting and Fishing in Minnesota, the RIM program was established to restore the quality of fishing and hunting for which Minnesota was once renowned, and to bring hunters and anglers — everyone who enjoys the out of doors, fish and wildlife — back to Minnesota.

"The 1987 legislation is only the second step toward a full RIM program," Waltz added. "The RIM Coalition supports a long-term, $60 million per year, program for RIM. We will be working with legislators to find a permanent funding source. We've got a long way to go. But we're committed."

Other Senate sponsors are Jerry Willet (D-Park Rapids), Randy Peterson (D-Wyoming), Duane Benson (R-Lanesboro), and Bob Lessard (D-International Falls). House sponsors include Glen Anderson (D-Bellingham), Bob Neuenschwander (D-International Falls), John Rose (R-Roseville) and Elton Redalen (R-Fountain).

RIM Coalition members are: Advanced Hunters Education, Aggregate Ready-Mix of MN, Clean Water Action Project, Fish and Wildlife Legislative Alliance, Friends of Minnesota Valley, Izaak Walton League, Land Stewardship Project, Lew Jewett Federation of Fly Fishers, Metro Northerns, MN Assoc. of Soil and Water Conservation Districts, MN Audubon Council, MN Bowhunters, Inc., MN Conservation Federation, MN Corn Growers, MN Deer Hunters Assoc., MN Public Interest Research Group, MN Society of American Foresters, MN Sportfishing Congress, MN State Archery Assoc., MN Taxidermy Guild, MN Trappers Assoc., MN Waterfowl Assoc., MN Wild Turkey Federation, MN Wildlife Heritage Foundation, Muskies, Inc., National Audubon Society, The Nature Conservancy, Northerns, Inc., Pheasants Forever, Ruffed Grouse Society, Safari Club, Sierra Club-Project Environment, Southern MN Conservation Assoc., T.R.O.U.T., Trout Unlimited-Twin Cities, Turn in Poachers, Walleyes Unlimited.

One-third of all accidents on Swedish roads are caused by collisions with large wildlife, especially moose, according to a study by Swedish physicians. International Wildlife magazine reports that the doctors calculated that one in every 10 Swedes who drives more than 12,500 miles a year will collide with a moose during his lifetime.

DNR NEWS

Minnesota Department of Natural Resources (DNR), Division of Forestry, is again recruiting volunteers to work as campground hosts at selected state forect campgrounds this summer.

Campground hosts are unpaid volunteers who are given a campsite, free of charge, at a primitive campground in exchange for assisting other campers and visitors.

"Foresters say the ideal campground host is a mature, experienced camper who loves the outdoors, has a genuine interest in protecting natural resources and is willing to assist other campers," said John Hellquist, forest recreation specialist.

Campground officials say they would like to employ hosts who can stay all summer, but will consider those who will stay a minimum of four weeks as well.

"Hosts will stay at their own camping unit at one of the larger primitive campgrounds managed by the DNR's Forestry Division. The site is provided free of charge, and campground facilities include fire grates, picnic tables, pit toilets and drinking water," Hellquist said.

Hosts will work a part of each day, five to seven days a week, answering questions, giving out information and performing minor campground maintenance such as litter pick up.

Anyone interested in receiving further information and an application form should contact John Hellquist, Forest Recreation Specialist, Box 44, DNR Building, 500 Lafayette Road, St. Paul, MN 55155.

Public Notices

and 29, 1987

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS

Notice is hereby given that sealed bids will be received at the office of the Middle River-Snake River Watershed District 453 North McKinley Street, Warren, Minnesota until 4:00 o'clock PM on May 7, 1987 for the rental of fully operated excavation equipment. Proposals are being requested for dozers, scrapers, graders, and crawler mounted draglines or backhoes. The draglines and backhoes must be equipped with a boom, bucket and counter weights appropriately matched for the type of machine. All equipment must be equipped with a servis recorder.

The works to be done consists of; but is not limited to, the clearing and disposal of trees and brush, the disposal of rocks, the construction of dikes, the grading of roadways, the leveling of spoilbanks, the installation of culverts, and the removal of sediment from drainage channels. The work required and the locations of the work will be designated by the engineer for the district.

The equipment must be modern and in good operating condition and furnished with capable and experienced operators. Deficient operations or maintenance which results in reduced production or poor workmanship will be cause for contract cancellation.

All equipment proposed will be considered and evaluated based on many factors including but not limited to the following; price, horsepower, machine rating, machine weight, track length, track width, track gauge, buckets available, boom lengths available and counterweights available.

Work will be paid by the hour and payment will be based on the time recorded on the Servis Recorder discs which must be turned over to the Engineer. Payments will be made on a monthly basis. The minimum hours per week will be 40 unless delayed by weather or equipment operating problems.

In addition to the payment for hourly work, the contractor will be eligible for a demobilization payment. The amount will be equivalent to 5 hours rental rate for each type of equipment authorized for use by the Engineer.

Demobilization payment will be included in the last payment for hourly work satisfactorily completed.

The District may cancel the contract at any time without cause by paying the demobilization payment.

The contractor may cancel the contract at any time without cause but forfeits the demobilization payment.

The type of equipment best suited for this project is dependent on the weather and other unknown job conditions. The district intends to rent equipment which in its opinion, will perform the required work at the least cost. Its evaluation factors will depend on conditions expected and encountered which will likely change along the course of the work. The District will release and rent different equipment from time to time as it deems necessary to economically perform the required work.

The contractor, in making this proposal, promises to furnish the equipment listed for the prices shown subject to its availability. He does not promise to make or keep the equipment available to the district. He understands, however, the equipment availability may be a factor in the district's evaluation of equipment.

The contractor will be required to furnish certificates showing that he has Workmans Compensation Insurance and Liability Insurance.

The Middle River-Snake River Watershed District reserves the right to reject any and all bids and to award contracts to other than the apparent low bidder.

Dated at Warren, Minnesota this 6th day of April, 1987.

Notice is hereby given that the City Council of Thief River Falls will conduct a hearing on Tuesday, April 28, 1987, at 7:00 p.m. in the City Council's meeting room in the City Auditorium, 123 Main Avenue North, to consider the making of the following improvements pursuant to Minnesota Statutes, Sections 429.011 to 429.111:

1. Reconstruct Knight Avenue — B.N.R.R. Grade Crossing

The recommended construction, which would be done subsequent to removal of trackage by the Railroad, would consist of re-excavating the grade crossing to lower the profile of the street approximately 18 inches, aggregate backfill, construction of concrete curb and gutter and driveway entrances, and placing of four (4) inches of bituminous binder and wearing course mixtures. The estimated cost of the proposed improvement is $14,900.

The area proposed to be assessed for the improvement is the property abutting Knight Avenue South at this location and includes:

Unplatted Burlington Northern Railroad Company right-of-way in the Southeast Quarter of the Southwest Quarter of the Northeast Quarter (SE¼ SW¼ NE¼) in Section 33, T. 153 N., R. 43 W.; Lots 1-3 in Block 65 of the Original Town and vacated Bay Street.

2. Arena Parking Lot

Construction of a 2-inch bituminous wearing course layer would be completed under the 1987 Street and Utility Improvement contract. Estimated cost of the wearing course layer is $7,700. No special assessments will be levied.

3. Third Street Boat Landing

The recommended construction would consist of excavation and backfill by City forces to stabilize the area adjacent to 300 feet of concrete retaining wall along the Red Lake River. After improvements were made a 1.5-inch bituminous wearing course would be placed over the entire boat landing and parking area under the 1987 Street and Utility Improvement contract. Estimated cost of the wearing course layer and fabric liner adjacent to the riverbank is $7,400. No special assessments will be levied.

National Guard, Reserve Honored During April

Governor Rudy Perpich has signed a proclamation calling for all Minnesotans to honor the 25,000 state citizens who serve patriotically in the reserve components of the U.S. armed forces during the month of April. This annual proclamation was sponsored by the American Legion — Department of Minnesota.

In the proclamation, the governor declares that "the 25,000 Minnesota volunteer members of the guard and reserve have demonstrated their dedication to the defense of our communities, state and nation during times of disaster and conflict..."

The governor said that current world tensions clearly emphasize the essential role of the guard and reserve forces in our national defense.

As a minimum, guard members and reservists serve two days each month and 15 days of active duty training annually. However, many of these citizen-soldiers give much more time and labor to insure the smooth functioning of their units.

All of the reserve components have the mission of training for the possibility of war or national emergency. They would be mobilized at the call of the President. The army and air national guard have the additional mission of serving the state during disasters and other emergencies at the request of the governor.

Research On Peat Conducted At BSU To Purify Waste

Scientific investigations at Bemidji state university are being conducted in the use of microorganisms to purify the organic waste materials of peat and make it a more useful project. Seventy-five per cent of the nation's peat resources are located in Minnesota.

Dr. Fu-Hsian Chang, BSU associate professor of environmental studies, is researching different techniques of bioconversion in order to change peat from one form of fuel into another. Composed of partially decayed organic matter, peat is very combustible and often used as a fuel source. Burning peat, however, is not an efficient method of obtaining energy. Converting peat into ethanol would increase its productivity and value.

Working under a grant provided by the Minnesota department of energy and economic development, the BSU scientist is experimenting with peat as a food source for protozoa, microorganisms which have the capacity to convert digested peat into starch. Approximately 33 to 51 per cent of the peat is changed to protozoa biomass, or dry weight. Separating out the waste products yields a starch content of 20 to 30 per cent. The ending procedure would change the starch into ethanol through yeast fermentation.

"The results I've received so far are significant and promising," says Chang. "It has taken a year to get to the starch production. Further research would extend into the next two years if funding continues."

According to Chang, the next step in the process is to incorporate genetic engineering as a means of improving the bioconversion rate. Efforts are underway to hire a microbial geneticist capable of manipulating the microbial genes.

Ghang traveled to New Orleans in November of 1986 to present his results at the annual meeting of the American Society for Microbiology.

"People were excited to learn that peat can be converted to starch and then ethanol using biotechnology methods," he commented. "Microbial geneticists at the meeting agree that gene manipulation of bioconverters can significantly enhance the production of more valuable energy."

With an extensive background of presenting and publishing articles on peat use, Chang assisted in hosting the second international peat symposium at Bemidji in 1983.

Chang was selected for inclusion in "Who's Who in Technology Today" in 1984 and 1986, a publication presenting the most informative, up-to-date biographical reference available about the leaders in American techology. Named as a consultant to the United Nation's development program, which assists developing countries in solving environmental and pollution problems, he was also invited to visit and lecture in China from May 20 to June 17, 1985.

Further information concerning the research on peat bioconversion may be obtained by contacting the Center for Environmental Studies, Bemidji State University, Bemidji, MN 56601-2699 (218-755-2910).

Selective Service Registration Is Noted In April

Governor Rudy Perpich has signed a proclamation designating the month of April as "Selective Service Registration Awareness Month" in Minnesota. This is part of an informational campaign to inform 18-year-old males of their responsibility to register.

Throughout the country, 96 per cent of the men who are required to register do so. Cities, counties and other units of government in Minnesota are being asked to adopt resolutions in support of this information effort.

The Minnesota army national guard and other reserve components have selective service sections, with a nucleus of part-time people who could be activated and mobilized in time of war or national emergency.

Selective service registration was suspended in 1975 and was resumed in 1980. Since then, all young men born during and after 1960 have been required to register with selective service during the 120-day period starting 90 days before their 18th birthday.

County Expenditures Climbing As Result Of Economic Trends

State Auditor Arne Carlson recently released a report indicating that some of the unfavorable regional economic trends in farming and mining are driving up overall costs of county government. The report noted that total county expenditures grew 9.8 per cent, led by welfare expenditures which account for 45.7 per cent of total county spending.

Welfare expenditures in Pennington county were the single largest expenditure on the proposed 1987 county budget this fall. According to information provided by the Pennington county auditor's office, welfare expenditures in Pennington county are expected to climb above $1 million in 1987. According to that information, welfare expenditures showed the single highest increase over all other expenditures. The Pennington county commissioners budgeted an increase of over $210,000 for the welfare department.

"The fact is," Carlson said, "the county unit of government is the safety net for society. The problems of unemployment will automatically show up in the costs of welfare and human services."

In addition, the report noted a sharp increase in county debt starting in 1984 and continuing through 1985, rising from over $182 million to almost $348 million in 1984, and then on to over $433 million in 1985.

"This breaks down to $168 million of new indebtedness in 1984 and an additional $110 million in 1985. Much of this increase can be attributed to $66.6 million expected by Olmsted county to develop its new waste-to-energy facility and the human services campus," Carlson said.

"Counties tend to be very reluctant to use bonds," Carlson said. "We still have 14 of the 87 counties with no

Employee - Owned Business Promoted To Aid Development

One new innovative approach to creating jobs in a community is being practiced in a small southern Minnesota community. Once again former Thief River Falls city planner Jack Quinlivan has managed to make his way into the news.

Faribault county local redevelopment agency has added a new twist — an employee-owned and initiated business. The following release explains the proposal:

Faribault county economic development agency director Jack Quinlivan recently proposed to the Quality Workers in Winnebago that they explore the idea of developing an employee owned business. The Quality Workers are former Electro-Craft employees who have continued to seek an industry since the plant closed.

Acknowledging their past experiences with Plastics, Inc., when the workers in effect "worked themselves right out of a job", Quinlivan emphasized the highly productive labor force and building space available in Winnebago. He said these are prime assets to market to companies with peak demands for assembly work or repackaging.

The initial meeting the Quality Workers was with representatives of the city council, local economic development corporation, the Region Nine development commission, the Private Industry council and their county commissioners.

Initially committing themselves to forming an employee owned business, the Quality Workers dug into their pockets to contribute dollars. Then committees were formed and they went to work identifying all the necessary tasks.

The past few weeks members of the group have met with the city attorney to draw up articles of incorporation

'86 Traffic Toll Down Slightly From 1985 Mark

Minnesota's 1986 traffic fatality toll will be about 45 fewer than the number of deaths in 1985, according to a preliminary report released by the department of public safety

Through Monday, January 5, the preliminary figure for 1986 was 554 compared to a total on that date last year of 603. The final figure for 1985 was 610. A record low for the past 30 years was 558 reached in 1983

Motorcycle and pedestrian crashes in 1986 accounted for 128 fatalities compared to 143 in 1985. Motorcycle deaths were down to 64 from 78 in 1985, and there were 64 pedestrian deaths in 1986 compared to 65 a year earlier. Bike fatalities went up to 12 from 10. These categories are currently being examined more closely to determine possible contributing factors

Commissioner Paul Tschida of the Minnesota department of public safety said the decrease is encouraging but more has to be done to make the roadway safer. "We know that there is a considerable deterrent factor working in the area of drunk driving related crashes. This was shown by figures reported from the roadside drunk driving survey in 1985."

Tschida also stated that increased safety belt use will reduce the number of injuries and deaths. "We know traffic deaths are down in states where seat belt use laws have been passed. We're hoping more Minnesotans will start buckling up. We believe an 80 or 90 per cent use rate could result in approximately 100 fewer deaths and almost 6,000 fewer injuries with economic savings amounting to $50 million dollars."

He added that there has been an increase in the number of persons recently who have reported being saved from death or serious injury because they were using safety belts.

In 1985 Minnesota had a fatality rate per 100 million vehicle miles traveled of 1.84. This was significantly better than the national rate of 2.70 and a marked improvement.

DAWN OLSON of Newfolden, reigning Northwest Beef Princess, was a participant at the cattleman's carnival conducted Friday evening in the Thief River Falls area vocational-technical institute. Dawn has made appearances on behalf of beef producers at the Minnesota state fair, Red River Valley winter shows and about 10 county fairs in northwestern Minnesota as well as a number of other events throughout the state. She will surrender her crowned hat soon as a new beef princess will succeed her in May.

Used Book Store Planned

by David Hill
Times Reporter

Northern Lights community residence readily admits the theraputic importance of self-worth. That self-worth, says director Terry DeMars, can be enhanced with work for the residents of the facility.

DeMars has initiated a project which will hopefully lead to jobs for the residents. DeMars hopes to solicit about 50,000 books for a proposed used book store.

DeMars believes in the idea, citing the fact that there isn't a used book store in Thief River Falls, and used book stores in many area communitites are making a go of it. In Grand Forks alone there are four used book stores and other new book stores.

DeMars believes work for the residents at the home will serve as therapy for them and teach them valuable skills at the same time. DeMars said any money raised from working at the store will go to the residents to supplement their small allowance. He said it would provide a wide variety of work from clerical positions to janitorial positions.

Work should be a good foundation for the program, DeMars said. It has several benefits which DeMars listed as helping the residents become integrated into society, giving residents more money to spend, and by giving them confidence.

The drive to collect 50,000 books began only one week ago and already donations have started to arrive. DeMars said they are still a long way from 50,000 books but any donation helps. DeMars said the local Lioness club donated a couple of boxes of books and the hospital auxiliary has donated some fixtures. DeMars said he hopes support like that from these two organizations will encourage support from the community and he believes there is plenty of support out there.

A book collector himself, DeMars believes he has the skills to get the program off the ground. He is confident that it will not only succeed in a planned downtown location, but do so in one year.

"Our intent is to run a very clean, high-quality used book store and give the community a wide variety of books to choose from," DeMars said.

Northern Lights community residence is a 15-bed supervised facility for mentally ill adults, which is supported by Northwest Medical center in Thief River Falls. Presently nine of the 15 beds are filled. The facility averages about a 12-bed occupancy rate per year.

DeMars said the residents are not overly enthused about the project right now. However, he is willing to bet that once they see some of the profits in their own pockets they will turn around in their thinking. He said a number of the residents have been looking for jobs to supplement their allowance. However, finding work in an economically depressed community is not an easy task. DeMars believes work will help in their healing.

Despite his hopes for a book store, DeMars is also practical about the project. If they don't get enough books to fill a store, DeMars said, they will look at selling books at book fairs and other local events.

Response has not been overwhelming, he said, but that's because the word hasn't really gotten out. All

DIRECTOR of the Northern Lights community residence in Thief River Falls is Terry DeMars, who has proposed the creation of a used book store for this community. He believes it can provide work and be creative therapy for residents of the residence.

Mobile Homes Are Eligible For U.S. Interest Break

Owners of mobile and manufactured homes will have the same federal interest deduction on their home as do other home owners. Since the loan on a mobile or manufactured home is an installment loan and not a mortgage, there has been great confusion on the interest deductibility of mobile home loans.

Bill Knight, a spokesman for IRS in Minnesota, confirms that the interest on an installment loan secured by the mobile home is deductible under the 1986 tax reform act.

Joan Archer, executive vice president of the Minnesota Manufactured Housing association (MMHA) recommends that "mobile home owners make their tax preparers aware of the pertinent sections of the Internal Revenue Code.

For more information on purchasing a mobile or manufactured home or the tax implications of owning a mobile or manufactured home contact the Minnesota Manufactured Housing association, 222 E. Little Canada Road, Suite 222, St. Paul, MN 55117 or call (612) 482-8875.

I Have Seen The Lord

Too long persons have been hung-up on Easter's empty tomb. Jesus Christ is never found inside any tomb.

The proof of His resurrection is not found in the proof of an empty tomb.

An empty tomb can always be explained away. "His friends came during the night and removed him," they said. Who can disprove that?

"A soldier was bribed," some might say, and one cannot really unlodge that theory.

The validity of Easter—the fact of resurrection—rests not on the emptiness of the tomb, but on the fullness of Mary Magdalene's testimony: "I have seen the Lord!" There's proof of resurrection. That's the fact of Easter!

The reality of Easter is found not even in the words of the angel, "He is not here!" but in the words of Mary Magdalene, "I have seen the Lord!"

Pennington county obviously is not one of those 14 counties with no bonded debt. As of the end of 1986, Pennington county had total bonded debt of $2,225,000, auditor Olson said.

In addition to welfare, major county spending categories include streets and highways (the second largest item, totaling $365 million in 1985), general government ($253 million), and public safety ($207 million).

The report covers revenues and expenditures of the county government funds, and does not include any indirect payments made on behalf of welfare recipients by the state department of welfare.

On April 2 an informational meeting was held in Winnebago to gain the area communities' enthusiasm and commitment to making the employee owned company become a reality.

Already Quinlivan has been contacted by one firm which is interested in contracting with the Winnebago company.

Thought Provoking Comment On Subjects Of Public Interest

The Competitive Edge

Edward Donley, president of the U.S. chamber of commerce, has some timely thoughts on the trade situation which affects all Americans. Here is what he wrote in a recent opinion piece:

For a long time, the U.S. Chamber of Commerce has been sounding the call for more competitiveness in the international trade by U.S. companies. Of course, the primary responsibility for this lies with business itself. But there are many things our government can and should do to help assure that U.S. companies are not at a disadvantage. We believe that lower government spending, a reduced deficit and an improved tax structure -- while not directly related -- would do a great deal to help U.S. competitiveness.

Before we move into a discussion of what kind of legislation would be good or bad for improving America's competitiveness, let us not forget that the United States is still the largest exporter of goods and services in the world, that we have inflation under control, that interest rates are down to more manageable levels and that more civilian employees are at work than any time in our history. In fact, more than 10 million new jobs have been created in the last four years and the earning power of our civilian labor force continues to rise.

America's global trade position is crucial. Our nation has enjoyed the highest standard of living in the world, thanks to the innovation and leadership of American business. But foreign competition threatens that standard.

The U.S. Chamber advocates a level international playing field and a comprehensive program to enhance American international competitiveness. We will work in the following areas to achieve these goals:

- We have urged tougher enforcement of trade laws and worked to identify and recommend the removal of marked access barriers. To date, we are the only major business organization supporting mandatory presidential retaliation when trade agreements are violated.
- Through legislation, we are advocating Foreign Corrupt Practices Act clarification, telecommunications market access, presidential multilateral negotiating authority and strong intellectual property protection. Recently we won Export Import Bank reauthorization and a mixed credit program to provide U.S. firms with the flexible financial assistance most foeign companies receive.
- The Chamber also has sought the elimination of foreign barriers to services and pressed for the inclusion of the services sector in the new General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade round.
- We are uniting the diverse industries experiencing intellectual property violations overseas to develop a common strategy to correct these problems.

We are also active on the domestic front in furthering policies to improve competitiveness, such as reducing the cost of capital, cutting government spending, improving education, opposing the "mandated" benefits movement that seeks to increase the benefits businesses must provide employees and insisting that our product liability laws be reformed so American industry does not incur legal costs not associated with foreign industry.

We are also working closely with congress and the Reagan administration which have proclaimed competitiveness as a major priority. I anticipate we will be working closely with both Congress and the administration in coming months to secure legislation and policies that will enhance our country's competitive edge.

I cannot overemphasize the importance we attach to this agenda. If we are to preserve our country's standard of living and provide for a more prosperous future, we simply must focus our attention and energies on the need to become more competitive.

When I assumed the chairmanship of the U.S. Chamber last April, I used my inaugural address to punctuate that message. The United States simply must become more competitive in the world. At that meeting, the U.S. Chamber adopted "Let's Sharpen America's Competitive Edge" as its theme and for the past eight months I have carried that message around the country, stressing it before groups large and small. At each and every stop, audiences were intensely interested and responsive. I firmly believe the American people are well aware of the economic problems that beset our country and are determined to do all they can to make our nation more competitive.

Communication Gap

Undoubtedly theologians the world over are rushing back to the Bible in the past few days, searching for passages which might indicate that God is going to need $8 million a year until the second coming of Christ. It must be so, because evangelist Oral Roberts says God told him so, and that should be good enough authority for anyone.

There is a possibility that Roberts could be mistaken, however. He might have heard wrong or possibly even misunderstood when he was up in his prayer tower chatting with God. At first, back in early January, Roberts apparently understood only that God needed the $8 million by April 1.

Of course, Oral could be excused for being a little shaken at the time. God not only told him that He needed the $8 million, but that if He didn't get it by April 1 He was going to call Roberts home. Well, how could Roberts be expected not to respond to a request like that? The need was so great and Roberts' desire to serve was so strong.

Obediently, Oral shared his dilemma with the world and the world responded. The $8 million was raised by April 1 and Oral stayed on earth rather than going home. But when God got back to Roberts it became clear that brother Oral had missed part of the message, as he revealed to the waiting world:

"We must raise the $8 million every year, for the rest of our lives, until Jesus returns," Roberts told the television audience. "And the Lord warned me when I came down from the prayer tower to tell you that we must continue doing this. There's no way out."

"We don't recall hearing exactly what it was that God intended to do with the money, or perhaps he didn't confide in Roberts as to an exact plan. There wasn't really any specific description of how the financial transaction was to take place, but we have a pretty good idea about the latter.

Oral will collect the donations from across the land and accumulate them in a Swiss bank account. When enough money comes in, he'll write God a check.

CAPITOL COMMENTARY

by LeRoy Stumpf
State Senator — District I

Pleas from voters, lobbyists and legislators for major governmental reform takes place annually. Dramatic changes are not only difficult and take months of planning, but they also demand compromises that many might be unwilling to make.

That's why dramatic changes are so rare. History reminds us that the most extensive reform in memory occurred in 1971 when the "Minnesota Miracle" created a progressive tax system based on the ability to pay. Property taxes were kept down as we relied more heavily on revenue from income and sales taxes. The system was based on the belief that people with higher income should pay more taxes.

In 1987, several major reforms have been identified by voters, lobbyists and legislators, including welfare and tax reform. And we are making progress in those areas.

Regarding taxes, our "Minnesota Miracle" tax system has become riddled with economic and social policy. Let me give you some examples. On the one hand, through things like capital gains, income exclusions and sales tax breaks on new capital equipment, we reward only certain kinds of investments.

On the other hand, by exempting unemployment compensation income and providing preferential property tax classifications for the disabled and for subsidized housing, we make special allowances for only certain kinds of hardships.

Just a brief look at the 1986 federal income tax form 1040 and the itemized deduction schedule shows that there are more than 20 kinds of deductions and credits — from varius business expense credits, to deductions for medical expenses and for the "two wage-earner married couple."

While such special exemptions may or may not be good economic and social policy, they ought to be directly addressed. Why? Because integrating them into our tax system makes that system too complex, costly and volatile.

Concern has been raised that we may destroy the fair and progressive nature of our tax system, especially when it comes to income tax reform. With respect to fairness, let me ask a few questions. Is it fair to tax a minimum wage of $3.35 an hour but not tax unemployment compensation? Is it fair to tax interest earned on personal savings accounts but not tax other profitable investments, like "capital gains"? Is it fair to tax a young, struggling family on all their income, but to exampt that same income for retired people because it is pension income? Is it fair to make many pay for exemptions and exclusions that benefit the very few?

We have no intention of changing a tax system based on ability to pay. As a matter of fact, if we conform to the 1986 federal income tax changes — eliminating most credits and deductions, while lowering our overall tax rates — the income tax burden will lessen for many people. For example, eliminating the tuition tax credit and lowering the income rates means lower taxes for two-thirds of those who now claim that credit. And, on the whole, conforming to the federal tax changes would mean a tax increase for high income people and a decrease for low and middle-income taxpayers. Approximately 125,000 very low-income families would pay no taxes at all.

It may be difficult to give up the exemptions and deductions to which we're accustomed, but the fact is that our current system of exceptions provides more loopholes for the rich than it provides privileges for the midde-income and the poor.

Another important point is that the proposed income tax bill would place a "minimum tax" on corporations, corporations that now do $30 billion in business in Minnesota but, because of the loopholes in our system, avoid paying taxes. These are not "Ma and Pa" grocery stores, but multinational corporations like Standard Oil.

There are many individuals and groups lobbying for their needs and interests, and the work of the tax committee is to sort out all of these concerns and come up with a viable tax package that is in the best interest of all of us.

REPORT
From The
MINNESOTA HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

by Rep. Wallace Sparby
District 1B

For over two weeks, meeting mornings, late nights and weekends, a panel of state legislators negotiated an interest buy-down program for Minnesota farmers. Scratching numbers on paper seemed to be an endless task, as the program was figured and re-figured. Finally, a comprise between the House and Senate versions of a buy-down program was reached.

The buy-down proposal that originally passed the House, identical to last year's program, was considerably broader than the Senate version. The House did not tie any part of the program to the Farmers Home administration, as the Senate proposed.

Specifically, the bill offers an interest write-down on agriculture loans up to $60,000. Of the 11.5 per cent cap on total interest charged, the state would pick up 2.8 per cent and the lender 1.7. This gives a qualifying farmer, with a debt to asset ratio of at least 50 per cent, a maximum interest rate of seven per cent. A $14 million appropriation has been allotted for this 1987 program.

An additional $3 million, over two years, will be appropriated to a program tied to the FmHA. Borrowers, who meet FmHA's eligibility standards, could receive an interest write-down of up to two percentage points from the federal program, up to two points from the lender and an additional 2.8 points from the state. The loan would be guaranteed for up to three years by the federal government.

If the $1.5 million appropriated for the 1987 FmHA-tied program isn't used within 180 days, the money transfers to the independent state-lender program.

A non-controversial provision in the bill is funding of last year's $14 million deficit. The buy-down debt to lenders accumulated after the $5 million appropriated for 1986 was used up and Governor Perpich reopened the program.

This bill is expected to be signed by the governor. Applications should soon be in the hands of farmers who urgently need the program to put seed in the ground this spring.

If you have any questions about the Interest-Buy-Down program or other issues, I can be reached at Room 351, State Office Building, St. Paul, MN 55155. Phone number is (612) 296-1198.

MACULAR DEGENERATION

One of the most common causes of decreased vision is macular degeneration. This is a deterioration of the retina, the layer of nerve tissue lining the inside of the back of the eye. Light rays entering the eye through the pupil are focused by the lens of the eye onto the retina, which transforms the light rays into electrical messages sent back to the brain for "processing".

In macular degeneration, the center of the retina gradually deteriorates. The older we are, the more likely this will happen, although we don't know why it affects one person and not the next. It may tend to run in families. Unfortunately, this blurs the sharp, central vision we use for looking directly at an object. The side, or peripheral, vision remains unaffected. Macular degeneration usually affects both eyes, although not necessarily to the same degree. The blurring of vision may be gradual, noticed as trouble reading small print for example, or the blurring may be sudden and profound. Some of these cases can be helped with laser treatment, and there is some evidence that vitamin A may help prevent macular degeneration.

THE VOICE of BUSINESS

by Richard L. Lesher, President
U.S. Chamber of Commerce

When I hear people complain about airport congestion, I am reminded of what Yogi Berra said when a friend took him to a restaurant of which he had never heard. "No wonder nobody comes here," Yogi said, "it's too crowded."

We would do well to remember why some airports are crowded. Because of airline deregulation, air travel is now available to a much larger segment of the population. Indeed, deregulation has taken what was once essentially an elite service for a few and made it affordable and available for almost the entire traveling public. One study by the Brookings Institution estimated that deregulation has provided $6 billion a year in direct benefits to travelers.

Deregulation also has done wonders for the airline industry. The number of full-time employees of certified carriers increased by 24 per cent — 76,000 jobs — between 1978 and 1986. In addition, the industry employs 45,000 part-time workers and thousands of other employees in the noncertified commuter and air taxi sector.

Nor has airline deregulation debased the safety factor in the airline industry. Contrary to popular belief, statistics clearly show that the number of mishaps and fatalities per 100,000 flight hours has declined since deregulation.

I realize, of course, that such facts come as little comfort to people who are required to spend an inordinate amount of time in airports, waiting in lines and experiencing flight delays due to increased traffic that sometimes exceeds the capacity of airports. As a frequent flier, I am well acquainted with the complaint.

Currently, the major problem in airport congestion centers on eight major airports, and the Federal Aviation administration predicts that the number of airports having a major congestion problems will grow to 61 by the year 2000 if current trends continue.

However, the proper response to this problem is not a return to regulation. Rather, we must act now to maintain the many benefits of deregulation by building the airports and air traffic control facilities needed to meet our needs.

Congress should act straightaway to reauthorize the airport-airway trust fund, financed by user fees, to provide financial assistance for airport construction and improve the national air control network. We can have the benefits of both deregulation and convenience if we simply use the resources and technology available to us. Returning to the outdated and inefficient regulations of the past will not solve the real cause of congestion or improve safety. It would be a major step backwards in efficiency and productivity at a time when we clearly need to move forward.

MACULAR DEGENERATION

One of the most common causes of decreased vision is macular degeneration. This is a deterioration of the retina, the layer of nerve tissue lining the inside of the back of the eye. Light rays entering the eye through the pupil are focused by the lens of the eye onto the retina, which transforms the light rays into electrical messages sent back to the brain for "processing".

In macular degeneration, the center of the retina gradually deteriorates. The older we are, the more likely this will happen, although we don't know why it affects one person and not the next. It may tend to run in families. Unfortunately, this blurs the sharp, central vision we use for looking directly at an object. The side, or peripheral, vision remains unaffected. Macular degeneration usually affects both eyes, although not necessarily to the same degree. The blurring of vision may be gradual, noticed as trouble reading small print for example, or the blurring may be sudden and profound. Some of these cases can be helped with laser treatment, and there is some evidence that vitamin A may help prevent macular degeneration.

THE VOICE of BUSINESS

by Richard L. Lesher, President
U.S. Chamber of Commerce

When I hear people complain about airport congestion, I am reminded of what Yogi Berra said when a friend took him to a restaurant of which he had never heard. "No wonder nobody comes here," Yogi said, "it's too crowded."

We would do well to remember why some airports are crowded. Because of airline deregulation, air travel is now available to a much larger segment of the population. Indeed, deregulation has taken what was once essentially an elite service for a few and made it affordable and available for almost the entire traveling public. One study by the Brookings Institution estimated that deregulation has provided $6 billion a year in direct benefits to travelers.

Deregulation also has done wonders for the airline industry. The number of full-time employees of certified carriers increased by 24 per cent — 76,000 jobs — between 1978 and 1986. In addition, the industry employs 45,000 part-time workers and thousands of other employees in the noncertified commuter and air taxi sector.

Nor has airline deregulation debased the safety factor in the airline industry. Contrary to popular belief, statistics clearly show that the number of mishaps and fatalities per 100,000 flight hours has declined since deregulation.

I realize, of course, that such facts come as little comfort to people who are required to spend an inordinate amount of time in airports, waiting in lines and experiencing flight delays due to increased traffic that sometimes exceeds the capacity of airports. As a frequent flier, I am well acquainted with the complaint.

Currently, the major problem in airport congestion centers on eight major airports, and the Federal Aviation administration predicts that the number of airports having a major congestion problems will grow to 61 by the year 2000 if current trends continue.

However, the proper response to this problem is not a return to regulation. Rather, we must act now to maintain the many benefits of deregulation by building the airports and air traffic control facilities needed to meet our needs.

Congress should act straightaway to reauthorize the airport-airway trust fund, financed by user fees, to provide financial assistance for airport construction and improve the national air control network. We can have the benefits of both deregulation and convenience if we simply use the resources and technology available to us. Returning to the outdated and inefficient regulations of the past will not solve the real cause of congestion or improve safety. It would be a major step backwards in efficiency and productivity at a time when we clearly need to move forward.

Albert D. Hottis, Associate Professor of Business and Holder of the Schwan Endowed Chair for Free Enterprise, Southwest State University, Marshall

In the 1950's, Chicago was the nation's butcher, with stock yards and meat factories operated by Swift, Armour, Cudahy, Oscar Meyer and most of the other big names in meat. Their work force included some of the highest paid employees in the nation, and labor contracts provided for annual raises, passed on to consumers. As wages went up, production per worker did not rise. All costs were out of line from freight, operating supplies and construction, to taxes. Shipping the cattle, carcasses and meat products with over the road truck drivers who earned more than managers, added to the problem.

Finally, some new meat packers started up out in the country, where the hogs and cattle were being fed. Their new factories, at reasonable wages and with modern equipment, were more cost efficient. Chicago saw its stock yards and meat plants become empty buildings with tens of thousands of workers permanently laid off. These workers, many with good records, tried picking up jobs with comparable salaries and benefits. They couldn't. Their skills were limited. Recognizing the problem, the City of Chicago decided to organize retraining programs to prepare these unemployed meat workers for jobs in growing industries.

This retraining program sounded good. But when the students finished their training, the jobs for which they had been trained did not exist. These unemployed meat industry workers were even more discouraged. The deterioration in attitude was visible in their faces and personal appearance.

There were, officially, three million unemployed Americans during the 1950's. Our definition of unemployment was "those actively searching for a job." Individuals who had given up the search or were unemployed, were not included in that total. It was estimated that there were really four to seven million unemployed and underemployed people.

The unemployed have access to short term unemployment compensation, varying from state to state, but averaging about $130 per week, with benefits lasting from 26 to 36 weeks. It is estimated that $22 billion in unemployment compensation benefits will be paid out in 1987. Those receiving unemployment compensation merely appear and pick up checks, while being willing to accept a suitable job.

There is a better solution than unemployment compensation and welfare for the unemployed that might even reduce some of the cyclical problems of our economy. Let's drop unemployment compensation and welfare for the unemployed, anyone who can not get a full-week job. Let's eliminate the term, unemployed. If someone loses a job and cannot locate another job, the federal government would provide a backup real job program, with jobs paying the minimum wage. This low wage would encourage a continuing job search. The availibility of a job for anyone who is unemployed would eliminate the worry that stops many of us from making purchases that involve a long term payback. That may even eliminate some of the big fluctuations in demand. It might reduce unemployment.

This new jobs program would apply only to those physically and mentally able to work. With proper planning, the job placement would be immediate. A recognition of this need occurred during the Eisenhower adminstration. At that time, backup construction projects were sitting on the shelf waiting for a recession. In typical poor government fashion, it took months to get the plans updated, out for bids, and contracts let. On some of these projects, the work actually got out for bids, and contracts let. On some of these projects, the work actually got out when we were in a recovery, and some work assignments contributed to a shortage of construction people and an increase in construction costs.

Can we afford this program? If there are nine million unemployed people who would cost $8,000 per year in wages and benefits, that's $72 billion. If that $72 billion is spent, it will become almost $300 billion in sales. The income and sales taxes should produce $90 billion in government revenues. That is more than the program cost. At the present time our unemployment compensation program and related welfare cost for expired unemployed people is costing about $45 billion. The program produces nothing but demoralized people.

This new concept, a backup jobs programs, is worth some study.

Many have claimed that if government regulation of industry was eliminated, there would be more competition for the consumer, producing lower prices, better service and improved products. I believe that this claim can be true. I am concerned that it might not be true.

Deregulation has now been experienced for a number of years and the results are easy to see. The first degrulated industry was the airlines. New airlines started, and old airlines expanded into new routes. They offered better rates and improved schedules. They cut back on service that wasn't very profitable. They produced lower costs and even lower rates. These results were used to demonstrate that dergulation really works.

The airlines industry has had some amazing rate reductions. When People's Express came to my favorite airport, all of the other airlines reduced rates to be competitive. Rates to big cities came down. Rates did not go down on flights with no competition. For example, a flight to a competitive city with the same distance costs about $49 versus $155 to a city with no competition. A 175-mile flight costs the same as a flight from coast to coast. If I travel about 150 miles east, I can get a flight going west for 30 per cent less than if I go to an airport 90 miles southwest of my home, right on the path of that other plane. So there have been some rate rreductions, estimated to average 10 to 15 per cent, with most of the benefit in the competitive "hub" cities.

The problem is, most of the new cut-rate airlines have been pushed so hard by the big sirlines, that they are not surviving. As they fail, the big airlines, cooperating with one another are pushing fares up. What concerns me is what will happen when we are down to a few large airlines that will be able to manipulate rates as they see fit, eliminating service they may not feel is economically justified. Lots of cities have lost their airline connections.

In trucking, many large trucking companies fell by the wayside because of their operating costs. Many small companies with tight controls have started up. Their freight charges are so competitive that many of the small truckers are having a problem surviving. My concern is that trucking is going the way of the airlines, with many drop outs and the survivors then pouncing on the consumer with jacked up rates. The railroads have also gone through some consolidations and are now in a position, much faster than anticipated, to raise rates for certain commodities where trucks are not an alternative.

The telephone industry is an interesting example of deregulation. By breaking up AT&T into many regional companies and one long distance company, the court created an interesting dilemma. Long distance business developed lots of competition, with many new companies. This competition grew because the industry was not deregulated, since AT&T had been placed in a straight-jacket so that it could not effecitvely price its service. The new long distance companies came to the market, rented time from AT&T, and sold it for less than AT&T. With more deregulation, AT&T has reduced its rates and most of its competitors are in big trouble. Some have dropped out, and others will.

With deregulation there are big potential problems for the consumer. In airlines, trucking, railroads and telephones, the competition is declining and the rates are going up. In the telephone industry, the AT&T breakup has seen long distance rates come down a bit, but local services have gone up a lot, so that the overall cost has been an increase in the cost of telephone service that is also less reliable. Deregulation is producing concentration and reducing competition and that could mean higher prices, poorer service and less in the way of product improvements.

The last word on deregulation has not yet been written.

My dictionary defines scandal as, "Any revealed wrongdoing that causes widespread indignation and disgust; a disgraceful or discredited action; and malicious gossip." The broadcast and print press took the Iran weapon situation and built it into what they called, repeatedly, a scandal. The repetitious use of the word made believers of many Americans who don't realize that there was no scandal, even if you disagree with the policy. The press did much more damage to the United States than to Ronald Reagan.

One newspaper headline tells the story, "Speakes resigns, Investigations continue." For those who only read headlines, another head had rolled because of the Iranian weapons matter. In truth, the president's press secretary had been negotiating for a job that tripled his pay, and this had been commonly known months before. There was no connection between the two stories.

The press started using the term "scandal" with its first coverage of the Iran weapons story, implying something bad. It was repeated in newspapers, on the raido and over TV. Those who said that no one had personally profited and there was no scandal got little or no press coverage. Those who said that trying to develop a relationship with Iran made sense, also didn't get heard.

The press even asked the Russians what they thought of the Iranian weapons matter. As expected, the Russians got in a few kidney punches. The press did not ask these same Russians about weapons they had supplied to Iran or Iraq. The Russians sales and provision of weapons in this and other conflicts did not, for some reason, constitute a scandal. If that isn't a "double standard," what is?

Conversations with members of congress were very interesting. The politicians, with encouragement from so-called "objective" reporters, took pot shots at the president and got lots of support. Those who attempted to objectively define what happened were trimmed down and cut off.

I happen to believe that every effort should be to realign the Iranians. I don't know whether it is possible. But I do know that Iran is too important to sink into a morass of confusion or end up as a Russian slave state without our making some effort.

The press discussed the impact on our allies and other nations, and kept describing our Iran weapons action as confusing or a "violation" of something. It was neither confusing nor a violation of anything. Violation implies law breaking, and when pinned, the reporters with whom I spoke talked about violations of policy. When asked who set the policy, everyone agreed it was the president and that he had the right to modify it.

Most foreigners don't understand our political system and the way our press likes to kill our leaders. Many never understood the "Nixon" situation, which was different, and these same foreign governments invite Richard Nixon to be their honored guest. Most foreign governments are sophisticated enough to understand the need to probe and try new approaches. They can not understand American reporters who "put words that were never stated into foreign mouths," usually "unnamed sources."

Americans tend to read little to get at the what is happening. They depend on the news. The press can cut down a president's support by description if not facts. When the president has lost his support, which is surveyed weekly, his ability to perform is reduced. The Russians and others read the surveys. The cutting down of Ronald Reagan, regardless of your party affiliation, hurts his ability to negotiate and operate. His staff ends up spending time with the past instead of working on the future. The country pays.

I am concerned about the damage the press has done to the president in these times, not by disclosure of facts, but by sensational phrasing, twisting and careless opinions. I didn't like what was done to Jimmy Carter, either, and said so at the time. The cost of this butchery isn't paid by the press, it's paid by the nation! In this instance, it was also paid by Americans still held hostage and their families because the press could not just "back away for awhile" as one released hstage had begged.

That's Straight Talk!

New Tax Law Gives Greater Value To Municipal Bonds

Under the new tax law, long-term gains are treated as ordinary income and thus offer no tax benefit for the risk involved. Many tax shelters have gone by the wayside due to a change in the law regarding depreciation, risk rules and passive loss rules.

In short, according to Lynnea Pritchett, registered representative, the tax reform bill of 1986 will force investors to reevaluate old investments and select new ones on their investment merit rather than their tax consequence. The good news is that tax-exempt municipal bonds have emerged relatively untouched and stronger than ever.

Municipal bonds have always been free of federal taxes because they're issued to finance projects beneficial to the public. However, in the past, numerous business people have deliberately misconstrued the definition of "beneficial to the public" to abuse this tax-free status. For example, is a building constructed to house deparment stores or fast food operations "beneficial" because it creates jobs? Does a community really need another hospital? These and similar questions have crept into the final decision of whether a bond is labeled tax-exempt.

Although the new tax law by no means plugs all these holes, it does define the limitations of tax-free bonds more clearly. In general, the less essential to the public a bond issue is, the more unfavorably it's treated for federal income tax purposes. As a result, four categories of tax-exempt bonds have been created.

The first category consists of "public purpose" bonds. These bonds are issued by state and local governments to finance major public improvements such as highways, bridges and schools. These have always been tax-exempt and, with rare exception, will continue to be so.

The second category consists of bonds issued for "non-governmental purposes." Housing bonds are an example of these. There will be a limit on the amount of housing bonds a state can issue. Such bonds bought after Aug. 7, 1986, although still tax-exempt, must be reported and treated as "preference items" and added to taxable income for those individuals who calculate the alternative minimum tax. This point should be discussed with an accountant or tax specialist because it affects only a limited number of taxpayers. These non-governmental bonds will generally pay 0.5 per cent to 0.75 per cent more than public purpose bonds.

The third category is taxable municipals. These bonds are issued for purposes not considered essential to the public. They're bonds used to build sports facilities, build or upgrade pollution controls, finance farm loans and the like. Although they'll be subject to federal taxes, in most cases they'll be free of state and local taxes. This is a new category of bonds, and it appears individual investors must learn more about this market which traditionally is institutional.

According to an article in the "Wall Street Journal," there are still "numerous exceptions and special situations" unresolved in these first three categories. "Bonds issued to finance hospitals and higher education projects . . . are not technically considered public purpose by Congress but will be treated as such. Airport bonds will generally be treated as non-governmental purpose issues, but they will be taxable if private involvement in the airport exceeds a certain level."

The key to determining the taxability of these bonds is to read the outside legal opinion in the bond prospectus. A reputable bond broker should be able to assist you in this.

The last category of municipal bonds is probably the easiest to identify — those issued prior to Aug. 7, 1986. These bonds will generally continue to retain their tax-free status.

As you see, the new tax laws do not completely eliminate the tax advantage of owning municipal bonds. They simply categorize them more specifically to eliminate some past abuses. Tax-free municipal bonds are one of the few remaining tax benefits. If carefully selected and properly identified, they can be solid income-producing investments that not only offer a generous income but also the advantage of being tax free.

Dangers Of ATV Use Reported In Medical Studies

American Academy of Physician Assistants joins the U.S. consumer product safety commission this winter season in warning users of the potential risks associated with all-terrain vehicles, commonly called ATVs.

ATVs are small, motorized recreational cycles with three or four large, soft tires, designed for off-road use on a variety of terrain. In recent years the popularity of ATVs has soared, along with injuries and deaths resulting from their use.

"Deaths associated with ATVs have increased 570 per cent in the three year span between 1982 and 1985," says Randy Jackson, a physician assistant from Maine who has spearheaded a drive for stricter safety standards in that state. "During the same period, injuries treated in emergency rooms have increased a staggering 900 per cent to 85,000."

Jackson says many of those injured and killed were small children and young people. Fifty-six per cent were wearing no protective equipment whatsoever. "These are not toys for children," says Jackson. "ATVs are powerful machines, capable of reaching high speeds."

Based on recent studies by emergency physicians in California and Minnesota, the evidence is mounting that the unwieldy, three-wheeled ATV is the most dangerous type. Researchers and the consumer product safety commission have made the following recommendations:— Require helmets for all drivers and passengers of ATVs; — Require helmets for all drivers and passengers of ATVs;

— Allow no one under 14 to operate an ATV unless under the direct supervision of an adult;

— Require everyone operating an ATV to pass a written and operating examination on the vehicle;

— Prohibit riding double;

— Encourage use of protective clothing (gloves, heavy boots, goggles);

— Enact strict laws regarding the operation of ATVs under the influence of alcohol.

Terrain plays a large role in ATV accidents, and riding double is particularly dangerous. "Even with new safety laws enacted in Maine, we've had two tragedies involving ATVs in recent months," says Jackson. "A 13-year-old riding double with a friend was decapitated when he didn't see a cable before him, and a two-year-old riding with her grandfather was thrown and killed when the ATV hit a bump."

Bicycle Riding Proves Popular In Minnesota

Compared to the national average, nearly twice as many Minnesotans ride bikes. That's one of the findings of a survey conducted for the Minnesota department of transportation.

Commissioner Leonard Levine of MnDOT says the survey shows that a surprising 59 per cent of all Minnesotans age 16 and over rode a bicycle in 1985. "That is nearly twice the national average, which indicates that Minnesotans are biking record numbers," he said.

Jim Dustrude, state bicycle coordinator, attributes the popularity of biking in Minnesota to the growing national interest in bicycle racing, and to Minnesotans who find that biking contributes to fitness, environmental quality and independence.

He also credits the foresight of state and local leaders who have helped to make bicycling an attractive and enjoyable option in Minnesota. "A lot of people have worked hard to provide a safe bicycling environment for both cyclists and motorists." Minnesota has approximately 25,000 miles of roadway, over one third of all roads and streets in the state, that are suitable for biking. These bikeways are mapped out in a series of Explore Minnesota Bikeways maps that are available, for a fee, from the Minnesota Department of Transportation (phone 612-296-2216).

Other results from the survey include:

+ Of approximately 1.5 million households, 73 per cent own one or more bicycles.

+ Bikes are being used both for recreational and transportation purposes. Ten per cent of Minnesotans age 16 and over used a bicycle for transportation to and from the workplace in 1985.

+ Many people do not realize that there is a statewide bicycle license system; only six per cent of all bikes are actually licensed.

The survey, conducted for Mn-DOT by the Minnesota center for survey research at the University of Minnesota, has a 95 per cent confidence rating.

Coalition Airs Water Quality Concerns In RRV

Quality of water resources in the Red River basin and ways to improve it was the concern as over 150 Red River basin citizens, water managers, local leaders and agency officials gathered at the fourth annual land and water international summit conference at the University of North Dakota in Grand Forks recently.

Sponsored by The International Coalition for Land and Water Stewardship in the Red River basin, water management experts from North Dakota, Minnesota and Manitoba presented participants with information on this year's topic of water quality. Small groups discussed water concerns and searched for courses of action the coalition can take in the future to help improve water quality in the basin.

Lance Yohe, TIC president, said he saw this year's conference as very successful and the participants were enthusiastic about the information presented and the opportunity to talk with other people around the basin.

"One thing I've noticed happening is that people who make up the coalition are taking a much stronger role in leadership," Yohe said. "There is greater understanding that this is their organization and they can make it go."

Yohe said the greatest concern at the conference was about non-point pollution, pollution which gets into the water and it is not evident where it is coming from.

"Basically the two priorities that came out of the conference were non-point pollution and point pollution," he said. "Non-point pollution was by far the most important to people."

The use of agricultural chemicals and the disposal of chemical cans were thought to be the most disturbing factors regarding non-point pollution. Yohe said the areas of action the coalition will be taking in addressing these issues will be through education, communication, research and information. Committees of the coalition will focus on these areas of concern the coming year.

Most Nosebleeds Not Symptom Of Another Disorder

Most nosebleeds occur suddenly and to only one nostril, reports the Minnesota Medical association. Usually nosebleeds occur on the partition separating your nasal chambers. In this area there are a number of tiny, fragile blood vessels. These delicate vessels break very easily and because there is little protection, a nosebleed can begin from an injury as simple as a sneeze or as obvious as a blow to the nose.

In many cases there are no apparent reasons for the bleeding. Generally, you need not be concerned about a nosebleed because usually it is not a symptom of another disorder.

If your nose begins bleeding, sit down and lean forward. Pinch your nose with your thumb and forefinger and breathe through your mouth for 10 to 15 minutes. Avoid frequent checks to see if the bleeding has stopped. To prevent the nosebleed from recurring, try not to blow your nose for 12 hours. Blowing your nose could dislodge the clot which had originally stopped the bleeding.

Apply petroleum jelly to the tender area as this helps to protect the tiny blood vessels. Also, increase the humidity in the air you breathe with a humidifier. Finally, don't pick your nose; this will only irritate your nose further.

If bleeding continues, consult your physician. He or she can pack a strip of gauze into the bleeding nostril. By applying this pressure to the ruptured vessel the blood should clot. However, the gauze should remain in place for several hours to ensure the nose has stopped bleeding. If the bleeding still continues, your physician may find it necessary to cauterize the blood vessels or use other treatments to stop the bleeding.

Area Chamber Plans Weeklong Celebration

Thief River Falls Mayor Bob Carlson has proclaimed April 21 through 25 chamber of commerce week in accordance with a statewide chamber of commerce week proclaimed by Minnesota Governor Rudy Perpich.

Chamber of Commerce organizations throughout the nation have become more than just another map shop. Activities carried on by local volunteers and staff members have reached deeply into the hearts of their communities, the governor said.

The beginnings of the chamber of commerce movement can be traced back almost 6,000 years to the city of Mari in Mesopotamia.

The evolution of the modern chamber began in 1959 when merchants in Marseilles, France, formed an independent voluntary organization to represent commercial interests of the port city. During the 18th century, chambers were established in other French cities and in England and Ireland.

The first chamber of commerce in America was located in the State of New York. It also represented the businessman. By 1870, there were chamber of commerce organizations in 40 major American cities.

A group of Ohio businessmen organized the first state chamber of commerce in 1893. Today there are 49 state and regional chamber of commerce organizations in the United States. Minnesota's first chamber of commerce was organized in 1867 by Captain Blakely to promote river and transportation interests. According to recent figures, there are more than 38,000 businesses and individuals who are chamber of commerce members in Minnesota alone.

"We're all aware that chambers are misinterpreted by many as far as what they are and what they do," says co-chair Larry Dowell, executive director of the South St. Paul-Inver Grove Heights chamber. "Misconceptions abound. Some people think the chamber is a tax-supported organization or that the chamber is part of city government. Perhaps the most widely spread misconception is that the chamber focuses on a Pollyannish type of boosterism and spends much of its time handing out maps to the city.

"Not that we're not probably the leading advocate of pride in the local community, because I believe we are," Dowell said, "but we may have been a little more superficial in the past about economic health and visibility of our community. Today's chambers are willing to address the tough economic issues that surround their communities."

The Thief River Falls chamber of commerce is no exception to that practice. Recently a group of chamber of commerce representatives was in St. Paul lobbying for a reduction in property taxes and against any bill seen as damaging to business interests in a community hard hit by a poor farm economy.

In his proclamation, Mayor Bob Carlson states, "Thief River Falls is fortunate enough to have many active chamber of commerce members willing to take leadership roles in matters of business concern."

The chamber of commerce deserves much-desired recognition as community business leaders,

Delegates, Alternates To Boys' State Selected

American Legion Post 117 in Thief River Falls has selected two students from Lincoln high school in Thief River Falls and one from Goodridge high school as delegates for American Legion Boys State. Alternates were also selected for each of the positions.

According to Terry Soine, principal at Lincoln and Boys State chairman for Ecklund-Holmstrom Post 117, scholars to Boys State must be juniors in high school. They are named through cooperation of the post, high school faculty and leading citizens in the community and must meet high selection qualifications and requirements.

Delegates from Lincoln high school are Brian Christianson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Delbert Christianson, and Paul Spyhalski, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Spyhalski. Goodridge delegate is Dean Wiskow, son of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Wiskow.

Alternates from Lincoln are Mark Olson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Whitey Olson, and Jason Brunkhorst, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lambert Brunkhorst. Goodridge alternate is Shawn Groven, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Groven.

"Legion Boys State is a practical learning experience in local and state government," stated Floyd Fredrickson, commander of Post 117. "Its citizens will apply knowledge provided through instruction by competent individuals from selected governmental areas, to organize and operate their own city, county and state governments.

"They will be encouraged through participation toward a better civic behavior and appreciation of our democratic ideals," he said. "Although the participants have fun in the learning process and are provided with opportunity for athletic and other activity, Boys State is not intended to be a recreational outing."

Soine also pointed out that the experience is without consideration to any particular political party. Political affiliations at Boys State are fictitious and arranged only to provide the participants with a working knowledge of the political election process.

American Legion Boys State has been conducted for 38 years and has grown from 169 participants during its first year in 1949 to 467 boys taking part in the 1986 program.

Cook's Choice

Here are some ways to use up those multi-colored hard-cooked eggs you have lying in your fridge:

SPRING TART

- ½ cup mayonnaise
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice
- 1 tablespoon mustard
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 cup diced cooked ham
- 8 hard-cooked eggs, chopped
- 1 10-ounce package frozen asparagus cuts, thawed and well-drained
- ¾ cup chopped green onions with tops
- ¾ cup shredded cheddar cheese
- 1 package refrigerated pie crusts (15 ounce)
- 1 beaten egg

In large bowl, blend together mayonnaise, lemon juice, mustard and salt. Add ham, eggs, asparagus, onions and cheese. Toss until well combined. Set aside.

Prepare pie crusts according to package directions. Place one of the crusts in a 9-inch pie pan. Press on bottom and up sides of pan. Spoon reserved filling onto crust. Moisten edge of crust with water. Top with second crust; letting excess pastry overlap sides of pan. Tuck edge of top pastry under edge of bottom pastry and pinch to seal. Trim excess pastry. Roll out pastry scraps to ¼ inch thickness and cut shapes with cookie cutter or knife. Moisten bottom of cutouts with water and arrange on top crust. Brush top crust with beaten egg. Slit crust in several places.

Bake in reheated 425 degree oven 30 minutes. Reduce temperature to 350 degrees and continue baking until crust is golden brown, 9 to 11 minutes. Let stand five minutes before cutting into wedges to serve.

EGG SALAD CUPS

- ½ cup mayonnaise
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice
- 1 teaspoon onion salt
- ½ teaspoon dill weed
- 1 10-ounce package frozen chopped broccoli, thawed and drained
- 1 5-ounce package frozen tiny cooked shrimp, thawed and drained
- 6 hard-cooked eggs, chopped
- ¼ cup sliced almonds
- 1 package (7.5 ounces) refrigerated biscuits
- spinach or lettuce leaves

In medium bowl, blend together mayonnaise, lemon juice, onion salt and dill weed. Add broccoli, shrimp, eggs and almonds. Toss until well combined. Cover and refrigerate to blend flavors.

Separate biscuit dough rounds. Place one round on each of 10 well-greased overturned muffin tin cups. Pat dough evenly on tops and down sides of cups. Bake in preheated 450 degree oven until lightly browned, 4 to 6 minutes. Immediately remove biscuit cups and allow to cool slightly on wire rack.

Line each baked bisuit cup with spinach leaves and fill with about one-third cup reserved egg salad filling.

And here are a couple more recipes that are a little more simple:

ZIPPY DEVILED EGGS

- 8 hard-cooked eggs
- 2 tablespoons mayonnaise
- 2-3 tablespoons lemon juice
- 1 teaspoon mustard
- 1 teaspoon Worcestershire
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ⅛ teaspoon pepper

Cut eggs in half lengthwise. Remove yolks; mash with fork. Combine with remaining ingredients; blend well. Refill whites using approximately 2 tesaspoons mixture per egg half.

EASTER EGG DIP

- 4 hard-cooked eggs
- 1 cup or 1 carton (8 ounce) dairy sour cream
- 1 jar (5 ounce) pasteurized Neufchatel cheese spread with pimento
- 1 tablespoon sweet pickle relish
- 1 teaspoon mustard

Peel the eggs and chop them. Add sour cream, cheese, relish and mustard and stir until mixed. Use the dip right away or refrigerate until ready to serve.

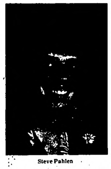
Plummer Legion Selects Boys State Delegate, Alternate

Shane Freyholtz



Steve Pahlen

Paul Wilkens, Plummer Post 623 American Legion commander, announced at a recent post meeting that Steven Pahlen was selected as Plummer's delegate and Shane Freyholtz the alternate to the 39th annual American Legion Boys State, to be held on the campus of St. John's university, Collegeville, June 14 to 20.

Steve Pahlen is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Randolph Pahlen of Plummer and is a junior at Pershing high school. He is active in football and basketball and has lettered in both sports. Steve is also a member of the Cardinal band at Pershing high. His future plans after high school include attaining a degree in wildlife biology or some related science, possibly from the University of Minnesota at Duluth.

Shane Freyholtz is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Freyholtz of Red Lake Falls and is a junior at Pershing high school where he has been active in football and basketball. He has lettered in both sports and has been chosen All conference in football; All Tri-County conference in basketball and All Polar conference in basketball. Shane is also on the student council and participates in chorus. He plans to attend a four-year college and get a degree in business administration in addition to continuing his sports interests in college.

Scholars to Boys State must be juniors in high school. They are singally honored in view of the outstanding qualifications set forth as requirements in selecting them. They are named through cooperation of the American Legion post, high school faculty and leading citizens in the community.

Legion Boys State is a practical learning experience in local and state government. Its citizens will apply knowledge already gained through their school experience and additional knowledge provided through instruction by competent individuals from selected governmental areas, to organize and operate their own city, county and state governments.

They will be encouraged through participation toward a better civic behavior and appreciation of our democratic ideals. Programs will be considered without reference to any existing political party and will be free from political propaganda. It is in no way a military training camp, nor is it a recreational outing.

Legion Boys State was first held in Minnesota in 1949 with 169 boys attending on the St. Paul campus, University of Minnesota. Last year there were 467 Boys Staters on campus for 1986 Boys State.

The Plummer post has been represented by several boys through the history of the program.

Chamber Joins In Observance Of National Week

Carlson said. More than 250 businesses and individuals are chamber of commerce members in Thief River Falls.

Mayor Carlson said the chamber has been instrumental in helping Thief River Falls businesses develop new and innovative ways to improve and to better serve the citizens of Thief River Falls.

The chamber of commerce in Thief River Falls is much more than a one-stop map shop. It is an organization of individuals and businesses joined together to advance the commercial, financial, industrial and civic interests of a community. It is a resource, a civic clearinghouse and legislative representative at the local, state, regional and national levels of government. It is an action agency run by a volunteer board of directors elected by the chamber's members.

The chamber of commerce is interested in a wide variety of activities. It generally concentrates its efforts on economic development, community development, small business assistance, public affairs and legislative action. These broad and encompassing areas, however, include many activities.

Some of the activities that many people don't know about, said Sue Lillevold, executive vice president in Thief River Falls, include a planned calendar of events for businesses and other organizations to use as a planning tool for their event; a worldwide directory of chamber of commerce organizations; parking passes for visitors to Thief River Falls; and a valuable green card which indicates to chamber members whether a visiting salesman or organization has proper credentials.

A summary of some of the activities sponsored by the chamber of commerce last year included: the farmer-merchant mixer, support of farm policy legislation; participation in the Minnesota hay train to Alabama and the Thief River Falls truckload haylift to Waynesboro, GA; official greetings to new businesses in Thief River Falls; highway signs and banners promoting Thief River Falls; the fifth annual world series snowmobile race; Agassiz national wildlife refuge tours; support of and travel to sports and travel shows; career information day; teachers appreciation brunch; retiring teacher recognition; meet the local candidates session; meet the legislative and congressional candidates session; opposition to nuclear waste disposal near Thief River Falls; the pumpkin fest; Santa bucks promotion; Christmas tree lighting ceremony; winter crazy days; the dairy princess contest; and many other events.

These events are primarily successful because of the efforts of local volunteers on seven different committees. Those committees within the chamber of commerce include the agribusiness committee, ambassadors committee, convention and tourism and lodging tax committee, education committee, legislative and transportation committee, membership committee and retail business association.

The president of the St. Cloud area chamber of commerce, Tom Scholough, believes citizens of a community should become a member of their chamber of commerce because the chamber needs a continuing flow of talented and enthusiastic volunteers to keep the community up-to-date and progressive in all economic areas. In addition, the chamber offers each of its members an opportunity to meet new and interesting people who will enrich their personal and professional lives.

VFW To Elect Officers In Detroit Lakes

Pauling states that he will be seeking the title of Commander at that time and has not been named as such, as previously reported in the Red Lake Falls Gazette.

The official swearing-in of new officers will take place at the state convention in East Grand Forks June 18, 19 and 20.

Normal Childhood Behavior Makes Poisoning Danger

It's important for parents and caregivers to realize that when children investigate their world, they are just being normal," said Barbara Qualley, R.N., education director, Minnesota regional poison center.

But normal childhood curiosity can be fatal because of the large number of products in homes which are potential poisons. The age group at highest risk for poisonings is from one to three years. During these years children are usually beginning to walk, to open things and to rearrange things. Later they begin to unfasten, unlick and hide things.

Martha Greiner, B.S., education director, Hennepin regional poison center, warns parents and caregivers to put medicines away. "Medicines and vitamins can be very attractive to children. Colorful cartoon character vitamin tablets can be 'pretty poisons'; children simply do not realize the danger involved.

Staff members at the two poison centers want parents and caregivers to be aware of some special characteristics of children that make them especially vulnerable to poisonings:

(1) Children are able to "parrot" safety messages, but this does not mean they understand the dangers. Parents must stay cautious, despite promises and assurances from children.

(2) Children sometimes try to gain the attention of parents and caregivers by doing something "naughty," especially when caregivers are stressed or busy with other activities. These are prime times for childhood poisonings. For this reason, it's important to keep chemicals and medications locked up and away from children.

(3) Children from two to five years old want to do and be like adults. As children see their parents and caregivers use cleaning products and medicines, they imitate. They don't understand that these activities can be dangerous to them.

"Children who have swallowed poisons in the past are nine times more likely to do it again," said Thomas Rolewicz, M.D., pediatrics, Ramsey clinic. "Parents and caregivers of these children need to be particularly cautious."

Some of the most deadly products children swallow are medications, pesticides, oven cleaner, alcohol-containing products and beverages, windshield washer solution, drain cleaner, antifreeze and petroleum products such as furniture oil, lamp oil, gasoline, kerosene, turpentine and lighter fluids.

If you have a poison emergency or questions on any type of poisoning, contact the poison center in your area, anytime. The toll-free state WATTS number is 1-800-222-1222.

Screening Tests Available For Cystic Fibrosis

University of Minnesota is offering genetic screening tests for possible carriers of cystic fibrosis and Duchenne muscular dystrophy.

Screening is done by personnel at the university's institute for human genetics, directed by Anthony Faras, using relatively new DNA analysis techniques to compare genetic markers on the chromosomes of family members of people with either disease. Scientists and physicians can then determine which family members are capable of passing along the disease to their children.

The university is the only Midwestern center and one of a handful of universities across the country that offer the tests, said Harry Orr, director of the institute's molecular diagnostics laboratory.

Genetic screening tests are just one part of a complete genetic counseling program available at the university, said Dr. Richard King, director of the institute's clinical genetics program. Interested families are first referred to either the university's cystic fibrosis center, directed by Dr. Warren Warwick, or the neuromuscular disease clinic, directed by Dr. Robert Roelofs and Dr. Stephen A. Smith.

Counseling and early detection of either disease are also available through the university's prenatal detection program, directed by Dr. Preston Williams. The clinical genetics service coordinates counseling services provided before and after the genetic screening test.

"This counseling and testing can relieve a great deal of anxiety in families affected by these diseases," King said. "Many relatives of individuals with one of these diseases fear that they are carriers, and therefore they just don't have children."

Cystic fibrosis and Duchenne muscular dystrophy are caused by single-gene defects. They are inherited as recessive traits, meaning that a person can be carrying the defective gene but not have the disease.

Cystic fibrosis is the leading genetic killer of children in the United States. Most victims die before the age of 21, although improvements in preventive therapy are helping to control the lung damage caused by the disease and are prolonging life expectancy for people who have it. It is estimated that 10 million Americans carry the gene for cystic fibrosis. There is a 25 per cent chance that a child of two carriers will be born with the disease.

Duchenne muscular dystrophy is the most common form of muscular dystrophy. Like cystic fibrosis, it is an incurable disease that usually leads to death around age 20. However, Duchenne muscular dystrophy affects only boys because it is caused by a defect in the X chromosome. It is estimated that 50,000 males in the United States have Duchenne muscular dystrophy.

Females are usually not affected because they have two X chromosomes, and a defective gene in one X chromosome can be cancelled out by a normal gene in the other X chromosome. Males have only one X chromosome, which they receive from their mother.

If the mother is a carrier, her sons will have a 50 per cent chance of inheriting the disease, and her daughters will have the same chance of being carriers. Work on the diagnostic probe for Duchenne muscular dystrophy was performed at the university by Dr. Berengere De Martinville, assistant laboratory medicine and pathology professor.

People who would like more information about the genetic screening tests and counseling can call the Institute of human genetics at (612) 624-3110.

State's Farmers Are Confused By Farm Regulations

Some Minnesota farmers are facing a serious loss of income due to confusion concerning conservation provisions in the 1985 farm bill, according to the Minnesota Farmers Union.

Farmers across the state are getting mixed signals from Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation service (ASCS) and Soil Conservation service (SCS) officials regarding compliance with sodbuster and swampbuster regulations in the federal farm program. The rules prohibit farmers from planting or draining highly erodible land or wetlands. Failure to comply means the loss of eligibility for USDA farm program benefits.

Sources at state ASCS and SCS offices have told Minnesota Farmers Union (MFU) that the agencies are operating under temporary rules and other states are apparently being more lenient in their interpretation of the regulations. The question is whether improved drainage on existing cropland should be exempted from the new rules.

"We don't feel farmers should lose their benefits because the land they have traditionally planted is suddenly declared off limits under the temporary rules," MFU president Willis Eken said.

But, according to reports from farmers, that's exactly what's hap*pening in come parts of Minnesota.* State officials told Eken several other Midwestern states are routinely exempting existing cropland.

"Loss of USDA benefits could put a farmer right out of business," Eken continued. "This shouldn't be happening given the current atmosphere of differing interpretations, misinformation and confusion surrounding these temporary rules."

MFU is working with state ASCS and SCS offices and the Minnesota congressional delegation to seek an immediate suspension of enforcement of the sodbuster and swampbuster rules until permanent and uniform rules are established. Eken urged farmers to contact their congressmen to make them aware of the problem and request immediate action.

TIMES Around The Region

by Sharon LaCoursiere

Simple Celebration

Baudette — Sacred Heart church in Baudette had their annual meatless soup supper on Good Friday featuring assorted kinds of home-baked breads that had been blessed during the Holy Thursday services the evening before. Families brought two loaves of home-baked bread to the service Thursday night and took home a different loaf, not their own, to be eaten on Easter Sunday with their family. The free will offering taken at Friday's supper was sent away to feed the hungry in other countries.

Mini Minutes

Red Lake Falls — The Red Lake Falls city council decided recently to publish abbreviated versions of their minutes in the Gazette instead of full versions. The "mini minutes" will save the city about $250 per month.

One-Vehicle Rollover

Karlstad — Karlstad police and the Kittson county sheriff's department are investigating a one-vehicle accident near Karlstad in which the vehicle left the road and rolled several times. Daryl Robert Anderson, 15, of Halma, was seriously injured in the accident, which happened about 12:30 a.m. April 12, 2 miles north of Karlstad. Anderson was taken to Karlstad hospital and then transported to United hospital in Grand Forks, ND.

Out-Of-Court Settlement

McIntosh — A lawsuit against the city of McIntosh and its former police chief has been settled out of court for a five-figure sum, according to Barry Hagen, attorney representing the city. Hagen refused to reveal the exact amount of settlement made to Armand Blais, self-styled missionary, by the city's former insurance carrier, Home Insurance of St. Paul. Blais claimed he was the victim of police brutality during his June, 1986, arrest at the hands of police chief Bill Pischke. Blais claimed a broken collarbone, facial injuries and paralysis after the arrest for an alleged sesual incident.

Less Than A Week's Worth

Winger — The Winger volunteer fire department put in plenty of working hours a couple of weeks ago. April 7, they responded to fire calls at the Dale Schabacker and Martin Hagen farms; April 8 they were called to the Ernest Uhlir farm at 2:20 a.m.; and April 9, a grass fire was reported at the Heb Hauge farm; and during the lip sync contest, they were called to a fire in an electric wall heater at the home of Paul Carlson. The night of April 12, they were once more summoned to a grass fire one and one-half miles north of Winger.

Stayed On Condition

Crookston — Jerome Wermager, 35, of Crookston, was recently sentenced to 52 months imprisonment after being found guilty by a jury of assault in the second degree and making terroristic threats in an incident in Crookston in which he threatened police officers with a linoleum knife. Sentence was stayed on condition that Wermager serve five years' supervised probation, spend one year in the Regional Corrections Center and pay a $750 fine, $75 surcharge and reimburse the public defender's fund in the amount of $250. He must also enter chemical dependency treatment.

No Smoking

Bagley — The Clearwater county commissioners are considering a no-smoking policy in county facilities. If the policy is approved the county will hire only those applicants who are willing to adhere to the county's non-smoking policy effective July 1, 1987. The policy would apply to the county courthouse, County Memorial hospital, the county office building and the Human Services office building. Designated smoking areas would be permitted in lunch rooms, reception rooms, entryways and county vehicles.

Rest Assured — It's Funny

Bagley — "Rest Assured," a three-act comedy, will be presented by the Bagley high school drama club April 23, 24 and 25 at 8 p.m. in the Bagley Little Theater. Tickets will be available at the door.

Getting Prettied Up

Fertile — The city of Fertile is making plans to get all gussied up for their centennial this summer. The city council discussed painting fire hydrants, street light poles, curbs, crosswalks and the community center in preparation for the big event. They also plan to renovate the restrooms in the park. Summer youth workers from the Ag Co-op Work Program will assist the city maintenance department in their clean-up, paint-up, fix-up work.

Burglary Sentencing

Fosston — A guilty plea to burglary in the second degree earned Ricky Theis, 25, of Fosston, a prison sentence of three years and one month in St. Cloud reformatory. He and an accomplice broke into the Fosston civic center in February.

Get There Early

Fertile — The Fertile Community Club is planning a "Roll Into Fertile" May 1. Local businesses will open as early as 6 a.m. with merchants providing discounts on merchandise and passes for free breakfast coffee and rolls.

Theft Charges

Red Lake Falls — Two juveniles from Red Lake Falls were apprehended in connection with thefts of citizen's band radios and stereos from vehicles at Thibert Chevrolet, Wilcox Plumbing and Heating and the Terry Nelson residence in Red Lake Falls recently. Red Lake county sheriff Allan Morken stated that charges were pending in the incident.

Scholarship Recipient

Baudette — Jonathan Drewes, son of Gerald and Mary Drewes, Baudette, has been selected to receive a four-year, $12,000 scholarship from Concordia college in Moorhead. To be eligible for the scholarship, students must rank in the upper five per cent of their classes and must score in the top 10 per cent in the ACT, SAT, or PSAT college entrance examinations. In addition, an essay and a record of the student's involvement in extra-curricular activities are considered by the scholarship committee.

First In, First Out

Argyle — Leonard Hapka of Argyle seeded Marshall wheat Monday, April 13.

Five And One-Half Years

East Grand Forks — Charles Bush of East Grand Forks was sentenced to 66 months in Stillwater state penitentiary by Judge Russell Anderson on two charges of criminal sexual conduct involving two juvenile girls ages 10 and 14 in East Grand Forks in October of 1986.

And All 25 Were Striking

Bagley — The Bagley Women's Bowling association has been a part of that community for 25 years, and one of the original members, Lorgaine Theis, has bowled continuously and also been captain of her team during all of those years. Three other ladies have bowled together as a team for just over 25 years, first in Oklee, then Clearbrook, and finally in the Bagley league. Hazel and Helen Engebretson and Beulah Richards began bowling in 1958.

Collision

Red Lake Falls — Kenneth Konickson, 32, of Thief River Falls, was uninjured in an incident the weekend of April 11 when his vehicle collided with two horses on county road one near Plummer. The horses were owned by Diane Knutson of Red Lake Falls and in the care of Sheila Erickson, who was attempting to capture them at the time of the accident. Both horses were killed and Konickson's 1982 Oldsmobile Cutlass Ciera was damaged.

State's Farmers Are Confused By Farm Regulations

Some Minnesota farmers are facing a serious loss of income due to confusion concerning conservation provisions in the 1985 farm bill, according to the Minnesota Farmers Union.

Farmers across the state are getting mixed signals from Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation service (ASCS) and Soil Conservation service (SCS) officials regarding compliance, with sodbuster and swampbuster regulations in the federal farm program. The rules prohibit farmers from planting or draining highly erodible land or wetlands. Failure to comply means the loss of eligibility for USDA farm program benefits.

Sources at state ASCS and SCS offices have told Minnesota Farmers Union (MFU) that the agencies are operating under temporary rules and other states are apparently being more lenient in their interpretation of the regulations. The question is whether improved drainage on existing cropland should be exempted from the new rules.

"We don't feel farmers should lose their benefits because the land they have traditionally planted is suddenly declared off limits under the temporary rules," MFU president Willis Eken said.

But, according to reports from farmers, that's exactly what's happening in come parts of Minnesota. State officials told Eken several other Midwestern states are routinely exempting existing cropland.

"Loss of USDA benefits could put a farmer right out of business," Eken continued. "This shouldn't be happening given the current atmosphere of differing interpretations, misinformation and confusion surrounding these temporary rules."

MFU is working with state ASCS and SCS offices and the Minnesota congressional delegation to seek an immediate suspension of enforcement of the sodbuster and swampbuster rules until permanent and uniform rules are established. Eken urged farmers to contact their congressmen to make them aware of the problem and request immediate action.

Thought Provoking Comment On Subjects Of Public Interest

And Life Goes On . . .

I don't really want to remember Charcoal the way I saw her last. Twelve years old, her once sturdy body gaunt from lack of nourishment, her strength gone but her eyes still clear and filled with trust and affection. It was a favor by veterinarian Bruce Pierce to make a special Sunday evening trip to his clinic and mercifully put the old black Labrador to sleep.

I didn't think she would make it through Saturday night, but Sunday morning she was able to rise of her own accord and totter outside as she had done for all these years. Exhausted, she lay down on the driveway. I helped her up and she came into the back hallway to lie down again. She stayed there until the afternoon when she somehow found the strength to walk into the living room where I was working. She always wanted to be close by. She never moved from that spot until we made the call and the trip to the clinic.

Good dogs are more than pets; they're even more than friends and companions. They become a part of you and when they die it's almost like a removal of one of your members. Anyone who has had the privilege of sharing part of his or her life with a good dog knows the feeling. Anyone who hasn't probably shouldn't try to understand.

Charcoal was a good dog. From the day she arrived as a squirming armful of puppy fur and wet tongue through a summer of training sessions and many happy seasons of bird hunting, she devoted her life to pleasing me and doing what was expected of her. To eat, to sleep, to retrieve, to be included in the family circle was all she asked. In return she provided effort and abilities that will live long in my memory.

Those are the things I will remember . . .

. . . The opening morning of her first hunting season as a 10-month-old pup when she retrieved nine ducks in 15 minutes for me and my hunting partners at a favorite pothole;

. . . The first time she came back with a ruffed grouse that I would have sworn I missed as it disappeared in heavy cover;

. . . Her struggle through muck and mire to retrieve her first goose — a high flying snow that was also the first goose for my son who had just reached his teens;

. . . The South Dakota snow storm when we hunted the slough behind Gordy's barn, shot three rooster pheasants and Char retrieved five;

. . . How quiet she was on a pre-dawn drive to the duck marsh — and how well-chewed the floor shift knob was when we got there;

. . . How she and her canine companions quickly taught native South Dakotans that pheasants shot over cattail marshes were fair game and seldom lost;

. . . How many times she disregarded my directions and came back with a crippled bird;

. . . Her chin in my lap as I drove home after a tiring day in the field or march;

. . . How her experience accumulated over the years and she earned the nickname of "The Bounty Hunter" for her persistence and success in tracking, flushing and retrieving cagey rooster pheasants;

. . . That she wouldn't let the furnace repairman in the house, but if he let her out with him when he went to his truck, she willingly came back in the house with him;

. . . How she patiently accepted the pup she came to live with her last fall and who I hope will create many new memories;

. . . Her remarkable recovery from tendon surgery which gave her the last half of her lifetime to hunt;

. . . How our minds meshed in the last few years and we could anticipate and understand each other's actions while hunting, rarely needing a spoken word to communicate;

. . . All of these and hundreds of other memories are tucked away in the folds of my brain, awaiting recall if I ever have time to sit down and drag them out to laugh about or wonder at.

I realize writing this is taking advantage of a situation that many people have available to them, but I wanted to tell you about Charcoal. Psychiatrists could probably provide their theories why. I've heard them on talk shows telling about how talking helps a person cope with grief.

I don't grieve over Charcoal. In the order of things I will certainly miss her and I suspect that the "Duchess" who takes her place now that she is gone will be frequently called "Char" by mistake. Old habits are hard to break. Char lived a good life and helped make life worth living. Her life ended among friends. No animal, canine or human, can ask much more than that.

Now there are new muddy footprints on the carpet, new nose prints on the car windows, new droppings on the lawn. There are dummies to be thrown, shells to be fired, ponds to be crossed and lessons to be taught. And when the frost turns leaves to crimson and the grass to brown, there will be anew beginning — God willing — for the making of another legend.

And life goes on . . .

Machine Shed Treasure

Following article appeared recently in "Farming" magazine:

Darned if you do; darned if you don't. There aren't many frustrations worse than trying to run an under-equipped farm. But your odds of earning a decent return on a piece of machinery that collects dust 11 months out of 12 — or four years out of five — are mighty slim. Check out your line of equipment and you may very well find a piece or two that'll be worth more to you sitting in someone else's shed!

One of the maxims of sound business management is to put your money where it'll do you the most good. Depending on your financial situation, the most profitable way you can use your money is very likely to be paying down your loan principal balances. That includes the money you have tied up in machinery "because it comes in handy once in a while."

Let's assume, for example, that Joe Farmer buys a farm. His $150,000 loan is amortized over 30 years at 13% interest. During his first year, Joe sells an underused tractor for $3,000. Smart guy that he is, he uses the income to pay down his principal over and above his regular payments. In one shrewd move, he slices five years from his 30-year repayment schedule for an interest savings of about $100,000.

The question is whether that little-used piece of equiment is worth $100,000 to you over the next 30 years.

"By selling off that excess equipment, you can lay your hands on cash, pay down your debts and better your financial standing. The savings in interest alone generally are substantial enough to merit liquidating underutilized assets and devoting the proceeds to principal repayment," says Bruce Jones, University of Wisconsin-Madison agricultural economists and former ag lender.

The hefty interest savings and shorter repayment may be reasons enough to liquidate underused machinery, but there are other factors to consider. "Whenever you reduce your principal balance ahead of schedule, you're strengthening your relationship with your lender," Jones notes. "By selling an unproductive asset and using the proceeds to reduce your debt, you'll impress your lender with your sound ligic and good business sense."

You'll also make yourself less vulnerable to interest fluctuations on variable-rate loans. "By paying down your debt, you'll pay interest on a smaller principal balance," Jones says.

Putting a few pieces of machinery on the block doesn't sound like a bad idea but what equipment should you sell, and what should you hang onto?

"Your first choice is to sell the machinery that's hiding in corners collecting dust. Odds are, it's completely paid for, fully depreciated and may even have been dropped from your list of assets," Jones says. On the other hand, if you need to rent a machine in an energy situation, the rental payment is fully tax deductible.

Next in line for sale is machinery that hasn't earned its keep on your farm, but still sells well in your area. "You have to be cautious liquidating recently-purchased machinery," Jones cuations. "If you still owe money on the piece, be careful to sell it for enough money to pay off the principal and interest due. If you sell for substantially less than the asset value listed in your financial statement, you could actually deplete your equity and put yourself on less stable financial footing."

YOUR TIMES

by Win Borden, President
Minnesota Chamber of Commerce

It's been awhile since I spent spring on the family farm. But I remember our first chore. As soon as the snow melted, we headed into the fields with hammers, nails and boards to repair the fences and keep the cows in. That was always a challenge, because our cows were particular. If our neighbor's grass looked greener than ours, they'd find a way to get to the good stuff . . . fence or no fence.

This spring, some Minnesota lawmakers are trying to build an economic fence around the state. The "fence" is a perennial plan called the Hostage Shop, and that's a good name for it because the law would require businesses in trouble to give between 90 to 120 days public notice before they would have the option of closing down. Businesses failing to do so would be fined $25,000. In other words, businesses facing hard times would literally become "hostages" in Minnesota.

Those who favor the bill say it protects jobs. That's a nice theory. But in the real world, it doesn't hold water. Suppose, for example, that the hardware store down the street is losing money. It may or may not close, but the owner files notice just in case. Now what happens?

If you need a lawnmower, do you buy it from that store? Of course not. It may not be around when warranty work needs to be handled, so you play it safe and buy elsewhere.

If you're the town banker, do you extend more credit? No way! Not for a business about to go under.

If you work at the hardware store, do you stay and help get things back on track? Not likely. Instead, you'll be out looking for a new job.

So thanks to the Hostage Shop law, what happens to the hardware store in trouble? After losing customers, credit and employees, the only alternative is bankruptcy . . . when the business might otherwise have had a chance.

Before legislators pass a Hostage Shop bill (and for the first time in 15 years, it has a good chance of passing), they should remember what Albert Lea voters did when they were presented with a hostage shop ordinance for their town.

On Dec. 4, 1984, citizens in Albert Lea turned thumbs down on Hostage Shop by a vote of 3,948 to 114. Civic leaders, business people and even organized labor opposed it. In effect, they refused to build an economic wall around Albert Lea. Minnesota voters know a stupid idea when they see one. Let's hope Minnesota legislators understand the issue as well as their constituents . . . and as well as lawmakers in 15 other states where similar bills were killed last year. In fact, no state has a Hostage Shop law anywhere near as tough as the one being proposed for Minnesota.

For his part, Governor Perpich has promised to "go anywhere" to help the cause of jobs for Minnesota. In this instance, he doesn't need to go very far . . . just up one flight of stairs from his office to the House and Senate chambers to tell lawmakers to protect jobs by turning thumbs down on Hostage Shop.

Letters to the Editor

To The Editor:

In regard to a letter printed in the April 13, 1987, issue of the Times, signed by Bonnie Wichterman, there are areas that need to be addressed:

An informational meeting was held concerning the issue of sharing classes and boys and girls basketball. The meeting consisted of about 181 residents which gave verbal feelings and facts. The residents also voted with the majority in favor of sharing classes and girls and boys basketball. The school board voted in favor of sharing girls and boys basketball for the 1987-88 season two days later.

As to the part in speaking on behalf of the girls basketball team being stripped, I feel she should speak on behalf of her own children and her own parental feelings. Feelings are mixed concerning this issue and it should be the individual's right to air them. Not all parents feel they should be included in this statement of betrayal.

As for the statement "dumb farmers," I am proud to be from a farming community, and feel I have as much educational background to stand toe to toe with almost anybody.

Yes, this is a joyous time, for Jesus died on the cross for our sins to be forgiven and for us to forgive those who sin against us. How can anyone compare our Lord's crucifixion and death to girls basketball.

To The Editor:

In response to the letter of Monday, April 13 about Arlen Merrill who worked for the city and received a back injury: I received a back injury at work in 1984 and was restricted to the living room floor for one week. I was to the chiropractor every day and twice on some days. To this day I wake up with a back ache every day (You learn to live with it).

I have pride, too, and that's why I'm still working, even with a back ache. If you hadn't settled with the city you'd probably still have your job. How many garbage bags weigh 20 pounds anyway?

When you settled with the city, you knew what the outcome would be. So why start a new vengence against the city now?

CAPITOL COMMENTARY

by LeRoy Stumpf

State Senator — District I

In 1971, Minnesota not only increased state funding for elementary and secondary education, but we also attempted to decrease the disparities in education funding across the state. Our goal was to equalize resources so that school districts in the northern and southern ends of our state would have the same money available for each student as those in central or metro Minnesota.

But now, in 1987, one of the most controversial education issues is, once again, the funding disparities among Minnesota school districts. We seem to have lost the equalization battle of the 1970s. School funding has become complex, unpredictable and inconsistent — the spread between the highest and lowest funding is more than $600 per pupil. And that doesn't even include the differences due to referendum levies.

It is, of course, inherently unfair to have such discrepancies in our shcool funding system. Yet, I don't believe that sheer dollar differences define the real issue. The question is really what those education dollars are buying. The problem is, we aren't sure.

There are enormous differences in teacher salaries at every level of pay — a $9,000 difference in the lowest salaries paid and a $23,000 difference in the highest salaries paid. Further, the majority of teachers in our small school districts have no access to either dental or life insurance.

We are also told that, in some school districts, high school students have access to only one math class or only one science class in their entire four years, whereas other school districts offer a full range of college-preparatory programs. Clearly, students from schools with limited offerings are at a disadvantage when competing for entry into college or into the job market.

Are these differences due to differences in funding? The unfortunate fact is that we now have no systematic or reliable way of knowing. Our information is largely anecdotal.

However, steps are being taken to help correct these problems. the department of education is developing a system for tracking program offerings on a statewide basis. Additionally, Senator Randy Peterson has authored legislation which not only incorporates a 13.6 per cent increase in funding, but also redistributes the money on a more equitable basis among our school districts. This means that some districts will lose funding, while others will gains. His legislation also specifies minimum requirements for program offerings in all our school districts.

Additionally, local school districts will have more discretion over the use of their state education aid. Currently, our "categorical aids" formula provides specified amounts for a large number of specified programs, such as arts education and programs of excellence. Under Senator Peterson's proposal, most of these categories would be eliminated.

While the proposal still retains a few specially targeted programs (including special education and transportation aid), the money now being spent on categorical aids will simply be included in the lump sum per pupil aid we provide for each school district. This means that school districts will be able to choose the programs for their students rather than having that determined by the state. It appears that too often school districts are making decisions about program offerings based on the money being offered. This new approach would allow local school districts to offer programs based on local needs of students, rather than on available funding.

Senator Peterson's bill is still being modified, but the final version will make substantial changes in the way we fund elementary and secondary education to provide greater equity between school districts, better access for students to quality programs wherever they live, and more discretion by school boards over their district's curriculum.

If you have questions or comments, please write to me, Senator LeRoy Stumpf, at 306 State Capitol, St. Paul, or call me at (612) 296-8660.

Letters to the Editor

To The Editor:

This is in reference to the letter written about the pair and share program between Plummer and Oklee schools.

(1) The name of this program should have been called Caring, Pairing and Sharing.

(2) If this program has to be compared to Christ's Crucifixion in order to get a rise out of people, it should instead have been referred to as Christmas: a birth and a new beginning.

You know, it's really sad to see that the main concern of people is the issue of pairing sports. Our real main concern should be that our children have the opportunity to receive a proper and adequate education and have the ability to utilize it in the future.

How many children do you know who have graduated and made a career out of playing professional sports?

What happened to the day when being able to play sports was a privilege? Why not show a little bit of this competition in the classroom?

As far as pairing in sports, the public was given the chance to vote on this matter: The vote went down 54 per cent to pair and 46 per cent not to pair. The school board took this into consideration and voted 6-0 in favor.

Right now there are over 600 applications that have been sent to the Minnesota State High school League to Co-op sports, so this is nothing new.

The vote that night for sharing academics were 60 per cent yes, 40 per cent no. As far as sharing teachers and classes, we are given money from the state for each student no matter which school they attend. So why not keep that money in our own school? Sharing will help by:

(1) It will help us to be able to offer more classes to our students;

(2) It will give the school the ability to increase the classes to teachable sizes.

(3) It will help utilize our teachers' teaching abilities more efficiently.

(4) We will also be putting our tax dollars to better use for our students.

It was really great to see how many concerned citizens turned out for the last open meeting. The meeting was conducted in an adult mannered fashion. Everyone was given the chance to voice their opinions and ask questions. After the question and answer session they had the opportunity to vote: Pair sports, yes or no and to share academics, yes or no. The final outcome was to pair and share. It's good to see the Democratic process at work.

Also, at the meeting no one was referred to as a "dumb farmer." The comment was made that "not everyone will want to be a farmer," meaning that we have to do the best we can to help others establish a vocation or career of his or her choice. Plummer is a farming area and there are other work forces beyond here, but you must be ready to adopt to them.

The children of the future are our responsibility and we have to help open all the doors to their future that we can.

Like someone commented, if we can be neighbors to go to church with, dance with, and even marry each other, why can't we do something as important as caring, sharing and pairing with each other.

Wake up people. "Don't be like dinosaurs. It's time to adapt to the future or perish."

IRA Rules Change, Benefits Continue

Two things to understand about taxes are that you must pay them and you must change with them. Just as working Americans began to appreciate the benefits of the Individual Retirement Account (IRA), Congress changed it. But, while many people believe the benefits of IRAs have been totally eliminated, this is not true, according to Lynnea Pritchett, registered representative.

In the "1986 Money Guide, Your IRA," it was reported that in the five years since Congress has made IRAs available, "roughly 40 million Americans have opened the accounts." IRA assests have grown from $26 billion at the end of 1981 to more than $170 billion in 1986. It's estimated that about half of all zero coupon bonds are purchased for IRA accounts.

Originally, the IRA provision covered only those persons without the benefit of an employer retirement plan. It was later expanded to include anyone who had earned income, and it even threw in a special provision for a spouse not employed outside the home. So, an income-earning spouse could annually deposit the lesser of total earned income or $2,000. A non-working spouse could deposit up to $250 which was then tax-deductible. And, so it was through 1986.

Beginning in 1987, the rules will change again. If neither you nor your spouse is covered by a retirement plan, you can still deposit $2,000 annually into an IRA or $2,250 into a spousal IRA, if your spouse doesn't work, and it will still be tax deductible. No change here. However, if either spouse is covered by a qualified retirement plan, the deductible amount of the IRA contribution is limited if adjusted gross income, without regard to the IRA deduction, is between $40,000 and $50,000. If it exceeds $50,000, no deduction is allowed for an IRA contribution.

If you're a single taxpayer, you can benefit from the total IRA deductions if your adjusted gross income is less than $25,000. If it's more than $35,000, no deduction is allowed. If it's between $25,000 and $35,000, a partial deduction is allowed.

So far we've discussed only deductible IRA contributions — that is, contributions made before taxes are paid, thus lowering your tax bill. However, even if you discover you're not eligible for deductible IRA contributions, you can still benefit by either beginning or continuing your IRA plan. There's the same contribution limit, $2,000 or $2,250, but now it's non-deductible. However, all interest and earnings are still allowed to accumulate and compound free of current income tax.

So, an IRA still offers attractive benefits even though the annual contribution may not be deductible. In later years, when withdrawals are necessary, you pay taxes on only the income and gains your deposits have earned. The actual dollar deposits were taxed at the time they were made so, obvisously, you owe no taxes on them. By taking advantage of these IRA tax laws, you can build a substantial "nest egg" for retirement.

If you're considering non-deductible IRA contributions, you should discuss this with an investment specialist. There are other alternatives which could benefit you. For example, tax-free municipal bonds, bond trusts or tax-free municipal bond funds not only allow interest and dividends to accumulate tax free, but they also allow them to be withdrawn at any time with no federal taxes or early withdrawal penalties. They have no restrictions as to when, or if, withdrawals can be made. Finally, they're more flexible than IRAs, but at this time there are few investments available that offer a combination of these benefits and good growth potential.

On the other hand, an IRA, even if funded with a non-deductible contribution, offers a variety of investments which can be monitored and changed throughout the years.

New tax legislation has dealt a blow to some people by reducing IRA benefits. It has not, however, eliminated these benefits. The Individual Retirement Account is alive and well.

GOODRIDGE SIXTH GRADERS who recently completed their annual class trip are shown during a visit in the State Capitol in St. Paul with Rep. Wally Sparby and Sen. LeRoy Stumpf. The trip is a three-day jaunt to the Twin Cities with emphasis on Minnesota history, according to teacher Duane Howard. The class conducted a number of fund-raisers to pay for the trip, including the chaperone's expenses. Places and events visited included Fort Snelling, a Minnesota Twins game at the Metrodome, airport, shopping centers, Omni theater and museum, State Capitol, other historic sites and the Ford plant. The above photo was taken just before the session opened for the day in the senate chambers.

House Not Only A Home — also An Investment

Owning a home is an expensive proposition in today's economy. But remember, a house is more than a home in many instances; it is an investment. The Minnesota Society of CPAs shares some tax tips for homeowners to help them make the most of this investment when filing their 1986 tax returns.

Specific tax deductions which may be available to homeowners include mortgage points, home equity loan interest and real estate taxes. These can save tax dollars for many homeowners if they meet specific criteria.

Mortgage points may be deductible on your tax return. If, in 1986, you paid points on a loan to buy your principal residence, not an additional home, you may be able to take a full deduction on your tax return. To qualify for this deduction, you must meet three criteria: the loan must be secured on your principal residence, points must be a common practice in your geographical area and the points you paid cannot exceed the average fees for loans in your area.

If you refinanced your home, or if you purchased a second home, you may be able to take a partial deduction. In this case, each point is equal to one per cent of the amount borrowed and is usually amortized (gradually deducted) over the life of the mortgage. For example, if you secured a 30-year mortgage, each point is deductible to the extent of one-thirtieth of the fee paid in 1986. Depending on the amount borrowed and the number of points paid, this can add up.

All homeowners are eligible for the mortgage interest deduction. When you take out a mortgage, your monthly payments may include principal payments, interest, fire insurance and taxes. Of that payment, your interest and taxes are deductible. At the end of the year, your bank will send you a statement of precisely how much interest and taxes were paid over the year. Don't forget to deduct this interest and taxes on your tax return.

Did you sell your house in 1986? If so, you may also have elected to pay off your mortgage. If you did, and were charged a prepayment penalty, the good news is that it is totally deductible on your tax return. However, if within two years you bought a new home which was less than the cost of selling your other home, you will have to pay taxes on any realized capital gains. The cost of any home improvements you made in 1986 can be used to reduce the gain. If you're over 55 and meet certain requirements, you can elect to exclude up to $125,000 of the gain.

Another deduction available to homeowners is for the interest paid on a home equity loan in 1986. Based on the market value of your home after subtracting what you owe through any outstanding mortgages, this money can be used to finance anything. After Aug. 16, 1986, you cannot deduct interest on loan amounts exceeding the original cost of your house plus any improvements, except for medical and educational purposes.

Depending on your personal financial situation, these and other deductions could save you a substantial amount on your tax bill. If you need more information regarding these and other deductions available to homeowners, contact a CPA. He or she can give you more detailed information regarding your specific needs.

Owning a home is the American dream. These deductions might help homeowners sleep a little easier.

Fuel Filter Can Clear Up Debate About Ethanol

The retail cost of a $2 to $3 fuel filter could go a long way to clear up the state's ethanol controversy.

Al Dols, a veteran of 21½ years of servicing state vehicles, claims there is little or no problem with pumping ethanol blended fuel into your gas tank.

Dols is the shop foreman of the Minnesota department of natural resources southern service center, which is responsible for keeping a fleet of 1,600 vehicles finely tuned. Those cars, he said, use ethanol blended gas. "We haven't had many problems," Dols said.

When Gov. Rudy Perpich issued an executive order in 1983 that all state cars would use ethanol blended gas, Dols put in a requisition for fuel filters. "I stocked up on filters in anticipation of any problems and most of those filters are still in stock," said Dols, who is based in St. Paul.

Dols said that minor problems that have arisen have been corrected by the filters. "The ethanol used in some of our older vehicles cleaned out fuel tanks and loosened the residue," he said. "When we changed a clogged fuel filter, the problem was eliminated."

The shop foreman said that some DNR vehicles have more than 120,000 miles on the odometer, yet there have been no major ethanol related problems.

"We have some truck units that are 1950s," Dols said. "The problem is not ethanol; the problem is because of what was built up in the gas tanks using other fuels. Replacing the gas filter usually takes care of the problem."

Minnesota department of agriculture commissioner Jim Nichols was heartened by Dols' report to MDA staff persons. Ethanol is a product blend of 90 per cent gasoline and 10 per cent ethanol produced from corn.

"There are too many people blaming engine problems on ethanol while ignoring such common problems as timing or faulty carburetion systems," Nichols said. "Hundreds of things can precipitate engine malfunctions. It's vogue to blame the problem on ethanol."

Nichols said that his department has use of 122 state vehicles. Of those, only five are located at the MDA offices at 90 West Plato.

"We thought it more appropriate if we could contact a vehicle service center with a larger fleet to determine if ethanol actually affected performance of hundreds of cars and trucks," Nichols said. "we assigned staff to interview at the DNR, and the results are most gratifying."

Nichols feels the major problem confronting an acceptance of ethanol is education.

Every time I see one of the 'No Ethanol' signs, I just cringe," Nichols said. "It reminds me of the '50s and '60s when the raging dispute was fluoridated water supplies. People thought that if you used fluoridated water to give you healthier teeth, you were endangering national security. Hardly anyone is concerned about it nowadays."

Part of the problem, Nichols said, is that ethanol is commonly confused with methanol.

"Ethanol is not methanol," Nichols said. "Methanol's very corrosive nature can cause serious damage to car engines. Another thing is that gas by itself is a corrosive agent and requires additives. The additives in gasoline actually place a coating on the inside metal of gas tanks to prevent corrosion. The ethanol additive neutralizes corrosive tendencies."

Enter Dols with a fuel filter to correct any problem resulting from any corrosive substances plugging gas lines. The most important factor in car performance is proper maintenance, Dols indicated.

"When you see a stall on the Interstate, it could be just about anything," Dols said. "some have run out of gas. The fuel lines freeze up. It's blown a hose."

Chances are that if the car is using ethanol, it will not be affected by a frozen gas line. "Ethanol works like gas line antifreeze," Dols said. "In fact, we seldom use gas line antifreeze in our cars."

Dols, incidentally, is not deterred by those "No Ethanol" signs at stations he frequents off the job. "I use ethanol in my personal car," Dols said. "I've replaced a couple of filters. It's a '78, and it runs just fine."

Space Research Continues Under 3M-NASA Pact

Minnesota's involvement in space research will continue far into the 1990s under a long-term agreement signed in December by St. Paul-based 3M and the National Aeronautics and Space administration (NASA).

The agreement is unprecedented because of its scope and time frame, according to Dr. Lester C. Krogh 3M vice president for rresearch and development. It provides scientists the opportunity to have 62 experiments aboard the Space Shuttle over a 10-year period.

It also may bring NASA scientists to work at 3M laboratories in the St. Paul suburb of Maplewood to mutually develop, with 3M scientists, some of the space-research payloads.

The experiments will be designed to explore the properties of chemicals in the near weightlessness of earth orbit, free from distortions produced by gravity. Creation of new products is 3M's ultimate goal, but that is not expected to come for a number of years.

3M's space research program is part of an expanded investment in research and development the company has made in the past few years. Much of the expanded R&D, like the space program, is designed to contribute to the company's growth in the long-term, Krogh said.

The value of the 3M space experiments also will go beyond commercial products that the company may develop, as it makes its findings known in scientific journals. The experiments will involve basic research into organic and polymer sciences, the sciences involved in making pharmaceuticals, plastics and other synthetics.

Negotiations leading to the 10-year agreement began about the time of 3M's first space experiment, which was flown aboard the Space Shuttle "Discovery" in November 1984. The company also had experiments aboard two shuttle flights in 1985.

NASA says Space Shuttle flights are expected to resume in early 1988. No flight dates yet have been determined for the 3M experiments.

2.5 Million Used Grounds Of State Fair During 1986

Minnesota state fair facilities were used by a record 2.5 million people in 1986, it was reported in remarks made Monday during the 128th annual meeting of the state agricultural society by state fair general manager Mike Heffron. "The year was extremely successful — not only in terms of the 12-day fair, but also in terms of the number of public events held at the fairgrounds," he said.

Heffron added that 945,000 people participated in off-season events in 1986 while another 1,565,000 attended the fair. The attendance totals, both records, represent an overall increase of 265,000, or 12 per cent, from 1985.

Sulo Ojakangas of Hibbing was elected to a one-year term as president of the state agricultural society, governing body of the state fair. A retired school administrator, he has served on the fair's board of managers since 1973 as representative of the society's eighth district.

Donald Simons, Grand Rapids, was elected to serve the final two years of Ojakangas' unexpired three-year term as eighth district manager. Simons is president of the Itasca county agricultural society and immediate past president of the Minnesota Federation of County Fairs.

Financial figures released during the meeting show that income and expenses reached record levels in 1986. Operating income totaled $8.98 million and expenses were $8.34 million, leaving the fair with a net operating gain of $637,936. All financial figures are subject to audit by the legislative auditor.

Circuit Rider Program Adds Consumer Service

Circuit Rider program is part of the attorney general's commitment to bring state government services, particularly consumer protection, to as many people as possible. While not exactly the Lone Ranger, the circuit rider is, in a sense, a roving troubleshooter prepared to offer advice or assistance as needed.

Once a month the circuit riders are dispatched on their scheduled rounds. From Duluth the rider goes to Grand Rapids. From there he loops over to Bemidji, up to International Falls and then down through Ely, Virginia and Hibbing. Similarly, the Central circuit winds its way through St. Cloud, Detroit Lakes and Brainerd while the Southern circuit takes in Lake City, Winona, Rochester, Austin, Owatonna and Mankato.

Typically, the circuit rider sets up office in one of the state agencies located in the circuit city. The rider is available either by telephone or in person and is prepared to answer all kinds of questions on consumer related issues and to offer advice on how to deal with consumer problems. These can involve a landlord tenant dispute, a car repair, a defective product or a mail order problem. Virtually any kind of situation a person might encounter in the marketplace can be brought to the circuit rider.

This is not to say the circuit rider is a panacea for any complaint consumers might have. Riders should not be construed as advocates in either a moral or a legal sense. They are not attorneys and are not permitted to provide legal advice or offer legal opinions. In point of fact, by law, no one in the attorney general's office is allowed to provide legal services to private citizens. Moreover, in some cases, the circuit rider might find himself explaining to a disgruntled consumer why a company's position is probably correct and the consumer may have to accept what happened.

However, the circuit riders are trained mediators with considerable experience in handling consumer complaints. They are also very knowledgeable in consumer law and can help identify whether there may be legal recourse in a given situation and make recommendations on the best course of action to follow. This may be advice to people on how to deal with a situation themselves, or it may be to offer the complaint mediation services of the consumer division.

If mediation services are offered, a complainant will be asked to submit a written complaint with accompanying documentation of the complaint. The company being complained about will then be given the opportunity to respond to the complaint, either by resolving it or offering its version of what transpired. Regardless, the role of a mediator should be clearly understood as being a facilitator toward a voluntary reconciliation of opposing or conflicting interests and viewpoints.

Also, in some cases where it appears that a complaint being brought to the circuit rider involves fraudulent or deceptive practices, it can be reviewed by enforcement personnel to determine if legal intervention may be necessary. This generally would be in cases where there is considerable actual harm or potential for harm and broader public protection issues are involved. However, there are many criteria considered in making the decision to use the enforcement powers of the attorney general. What is important is that complaints are by far the most significant source of information on consumer problems and that by offering the circuit rider services the attorney general's office has been able to enhance consumer protection for all Minnesotans.

Finally, the circuit rider should not be considered a kind of one stop shopping trip for all government services. There are many consumer related matters that fall outside the expertise or jurisdiction of the consumer division of the attorney general's office. However, the circuit rider is knowledgeable and in most cases can direct people to the best source of assistance.

The circuit rider's schedule is publicized through the media in the circuit communities. For more information on the circuit rider program, or for more immediate assistance on a consumer related problem, call or write the Attorney General's Consumer Division, Room 124 Ford Building, 117 University Avenue, St. Paul, MN 55155, (612) 296-3353, or in Duluth: Room 708 Government Services Center, 320 West Second Street, Duluth, MN 55802, (218) 723-4891.

Bunion Condition Is Discussed By Medical Ass'n.

A bunion is a deformity and swelling near the bone of the big toe. In this condition, the first toe bends towards the second toe and partially dislocates at the joint. The bony base of the toe is then pushed outward and forms an unattractive bump known as a bunion.

Usually bunions result from wearing pointed shoes with high heels. However, research shows bunions tend to happen more commonly in people with an inherited weakness in toe joints. The most evident symptoms of a bunion is pain while walking and a common complaint is that it's hard to find a shoe that is wide enough and still cosmetically acceptable.

If you have a bunion, the simplist way to find relief is by wearing comfortable shoes that don't constrict the painful front portion of your foot. Look for soft leather and broad, deep-toed shoes. Stretching the leather in the swollen area of your foot can help provide further comfort. Finally, put special padding around the affected joint. This will help distribute pressure from your shoe and reduce friction which can irritate the bunion.

Surgery is an option for relief from severe discomfort. In surgery, a portion of the protruding bone is removed and sectioned. A peg is then inserted to secure the remaining bone. Generally, the foot will be put in a cast for up to two months. Bone and joint tissue heal slowly and it may be some time after surgery before you can again wear shoes. Physicians emphasize that it is important to wear the proper shoes after surgery.

Expect Shortfall Of Good Quality Chipping Potatoes

Stan Erickson, market analyst for the Red River Valley Potato Growers association, estimates a potential shortfall of good quality chipping potatoes.

According to Erickson, the statistical reporting service, in its December stocks on hand release, estimated a total of 12.9 million hundredweight of white potatoes were in storage in the Red River valley. Historically, five per cent of this total should be considered shrink, leaving 12.3 million hundredweight to sell. Of this total, Erickson estimates 2.5 million hundredweight would be sold for seed and 1.7 million hundredweight would go for processing into French fries and flakes. As such, there would have been 8.1 million hundredweight of chip potatoes for sale in the valley Dec. 1, 1986.

Based on a recent trip to eastern chip growing areas, Erickson estimates that 4.5 million hundredweight of chip potatoes are in storage in South Dakota, Wisconsin, Michigan, New York, Pennsylvania and Maine. An educated guess as to the number of chip potatoes in the west would be two million hundredweight. If his estimates are close to correct, there would be 14.6 million hundredweight of chip potatoes for sale in the United States.

The U.S.D.A. in its January issue of Potato Facts, estimates that 42 million hundredweight of potatoes were used in making potato chips in 1983 and also in 1984. This equates to 3½ million hundredweight used each month in 1983 and 1984. Assuming this amount is used each month, December through mid-April, the industry would need 15.75 million hundredweight of chip potatoes.

In addition, it is expected that Canadian chip companies will need to import chip potatoes from the Red River valley.

Ag Commissioner Cautions Farmers About Fertilizer

Agriculture Commissioner Jim Nichols cautioned Minnesota farmers and other potential buyers of fertilizers and soil and plant amendments to be on guard against fraudulent sales by telephone, mail order or through personal contacts, often at group sales meetings.

"Each spring many different kinds of fertilizers and soil and plant amendments are sold in Minnesota to farmers and other potential buyers without the benefit of official registration or licensing," he said.

The department's agronomy services division has investigated several commplaints already this winter and has found promotional literature and other contacts have been made for unregistered products with unfounded claims.

Nichols warns that these illegal products may cause harm to the soil and crops and in most cases do the farmers no good. He also pointed out that a farmer should be cautious of outlandish claims for these products, such as reducing the costs of commercial fertilizer by 40 to 50 per cent, fast seed germination, better root growth, healthier plants, less disease, etc. He also suggests caution when dealing with companies promising to save you money on your fertilizer cost and at the same time offer free trips and gifts for early orders.

"The Minnesota department of agriculture has been charged by the legislature to register all fertilizer and soil and plant amendment products, also to license all companies distributing commercial fertilizer in the state. Before registration is granted, the department requires evidence to be submitted that will show that the product has been field tested and that these tests prove that it is worthy to be sold in Minnesota," Nichols said.

If you have any questions about a product being offered for sale, call the Minnesota department of agriculture. Telephone calls should be directed to Gary Braun, fertilizer administrator at (612) 296-8379.

Baldness Already Predetermined At Male Child's Birth

By the time we are born it's already been predetermined what hairs we are going to lose and when we are going to lose them. Fifty per cent of men will show some degree of hair loss by the time they are 25 years old and as men grow older 75 per cent will have some hair loss, according to the Minnesota Medical association.

While women do not go bald, they do lose their hair, usually in frontal portions of their scalp or there is a general thinning throughout the entire scalp. Occasionally a woman's hair thins about three months after she has a baby, however, the hair grows back during the following weeks or months.

Genetic and hormonal factors influence hair loss in men and women. Genes for men's baldness are carried through both sides of the family, but medical studies show the mother's side plays a more dominant role than the father's side. The second factor is male hormones. While the men who lose their hair have no hormonal abnormality, they have a certain male hormone which acts on a predetermined hair follicle.

Can medications return hair growth? There are over-the-counter medications and creams available which claim to promote hair growth. However, doctors say, there is no evidence that these products work. A new medication called Manoxidil is being tested by the food and drug administration. While this is an experimental medication which can be applied to the scalp, some physicians say their experiments show manoxidil does encourage hair growth. Doctors predict that the cost of treatment with manoxidil will far exceed the cost of a hair transplant.

Hair transplantation is an office process which takes two and a half to three hours. Beforehand the doctor reviews with the patient where he would like the hair growth. During the procedure the scalp is numbed in a similar way in which a dentist numbs the mouth. Next, the doctor removes the donor hair from the back of the head and a bald spot out of the front of the crown or the top of the scalp. This bald spot is then replaced with the growing hair graft. With the hair in place, dressing is put on for the individual to wear overnight.

The next morning the dressing is removed and the patient's hair is shampooed, blown dry and combed. It's estimated that 70 to 85 per cent of the hair transplants are successful.

DO THE YELLOW PAGES TAKE TOO BIG A BITE OUT OF YOUR ADVERTISING BUDGET

IF THE ANSWER IS YES, THE TIMES CAN SHOW YOU HOW TO TRIM YOUR YELLOW PAGE BUDGET AND STILL GET RESULTS.

Yellow Page advertising is creative, active advertising.
Fact: It's hard to be creative when you have to limit your message. Harder still when you realize you can only change that ad once a year. Yellow Page advertising by necessity is stagnant, passive advertising. Your products change. Your services offered change. Your prices change. Your customers change. So should your advertising.

yellow Pages sell products.
Fact: Yellow Pages are not designed to sell. They are intended to be a directory. That's why you can't advertise the prices of your services or products. And, often you can't advertise that you are the best or the biggest. You really can't tell the reader why he should choose you over your competitor. Plus, many consumers shop for convenience and will pick a store close to their home or office — regardless of size or ad or brand names and product. Remember, the purpose of advertising is to sell goods and services, as well as build high levels of recall.

Yellow pages create brand awareness.
Fact: Brand awareness or store image are important parts of your advertising plan. If Yellow Pages did in fact build awareness, then you would see large ads for Wards, Walgreens, Shopko, Target or even Northwestern Bell or AT&T themselves in the Yellow Pages. But, you don't see these advertisers using the Yellow Pages to create awareness of their product or store.

It's best to have your ad at the beginning of a classification in the Yellow Pages.
Fact: Yellow Pages are designed with big ads at the head of the classification, and small ads last. And you are told that in order to get to the head of the list you need to buy the biggest ad. But biggest isn't always best. See for yourself. Pick up the phone book and find your ad. Nine times out of ten, you start at the back and flip pages toward the front. When you do, you'll see the smallest ads first.

Yellow Pages reach a large audience that reads them regularly.
Fact: The actual number of copies of the Yellow Pages which are distributed is often misleading. Many households receive more than one copy, not to mention multiple books in offices which may never be used. Also, the Yellow Pages are closed about 90% of the time, and are used by the average adult about 3 times a month or 34 times a year. By comparison, look at your newspaper's total circulation. The newspaper reaches your target audience 104 times a year, giving you much greater exposure.

Thief River Falls THE TIMES

Sports

NORTHLAND COMMUNITY COLLEGE base runner Dean Brandon was an easy out when he arrived at third base only to find Fergus Falls' Bob Dockendorf awaiting his arrival, with the ball in his glove. Brandon was trying to move from second to third when the ball got by catcher John Thielen in the first inning of Wednesday's baseball doubleheader nightcap at the Thief River Falls fairgrounds diamond. The Spartans swept the Minnesota Community College Northern Division twinbill 11-6 and 13-2. It was the 1987 home opener for the Pioneers, who will host Itasca Wednesday in another 1 p.m. Northern Division doubleheader.

Spartans Sweep Pioneers

Fergus Falls swept Northland 11-6 and 13-2 Wednesday in a Minnesota Community College Conference baseball doubleheader played at the Thief River Falls fairgrounds diamond.

It was the 1987 home opener for the Pioneers, and their first MCCC Northern Division-counting games this spring. Northland, 0-7 overall, will host a pair of Northern Division opponents this week, facing Itasca Wednesday in a 1 p.m. doubleheader and playing Hibbing Saturday in a 12-noon twinbill.

"We played well in spots, but we just didn't appear that we were mentally ready to play baseball," said Northland coach Rick Nelson after the two losses to Fergus Falls. "I didn't feel our minds were on the game."

It was, however, Northland's first action in nearly three weeks. The Pioneers opened the season with a five-game series at the Metrodome in Minneapolis March 25 and 26, but were idle since then, including a weather-forced postponement of an April 4 twinbill against University of Minnesota-Crookston. The layoff, acknowledged Nelson, likely took its toll.

A pair of five-run innings in the second and fifth frames carried Fergus Falls to the 11-6 win in Game 1. Two walks, an error, a hit batsman and three base hits gave the Spartans a 5-0 second inning headstart. Key blow was a bases-loaded base hit by Terry Bork that wound up producing three runs. Same format was followed in the fifth when a pair of walks and an error were combined with run-producing doubles by Terry Olson and Chuck Mithaugen.

Northland scored twice in the third inning, got one run back in the fifth and put three runs across in the sixth. Both sides scored single runs in the seventh.

Fergus Falls out-hit Northland 13-10. Lee Hamre, Tim Borgen and Joe Blankenfeld all had two base hits for the Pioneers. Deon Schmidt was the starting and losing pitcher for Northland, going four innings. Dean Zimel pitched the final two innings. Bill Klaasen was the winning pitcher, going the first six innings for the Spartans. John Johnson pitched the seventh. Northland had three of the game's five errors.

There were four home runs hit in Game 2 — three of them off the bats of the Spartans in the 13-2 sweep-completing win.

Trevor Zastrow homered twice for the winners, who turned a 1-0 first inning lead into a 3-0 third inning edge and a 7-0 fourth inning cushion. John Thelen also homered for the winners. All three Fergus Falls home runs came on 1-ball, 2-strike counts.

Grant Grabanski hit a two-run Northland home run in the bottom of the fourth, but Fergus Falls came back with a two-run fifth, and completed a 10-run rule victory with a four-run sixth.

Bruce Geislinger pitched two-hit ball for the pitching win. Borgen went the first five innings and took the loss. Tim Nyland pitched the sixth. They surrendered eight hits. Northland also had three of the game's four errors.

"It was a terrible day," acknowledged Tim Olson, coach of the Thief River Falls boys.

Thief River Falls girls fared a little better. The Prowlers received a third place finish from Cindy Kruta with a 49.24 in the 300 hurdles; a fourth from Lynn Mueller with a 12:35.23 in the 3200; a fourth from Peggy Cruz, Christy Holthusen, Nenna Arnold, and Kruta with a 4:26.86 in the 1600 relay; a fifth by Mueller with a 5:45.52 in the 1600; and a sixth by Cruz with a 2:32.29 in the 800.

RIM Land Donations

Expansion of two wildlife management areas in the Twin Cities metropolitan area has been made possible by the private donations of land under the state's Reinvest in Minnesota (RIM) program, it was announced by the Department of Natural Resources in St. Paul.

"These recent land donations bring the total acreage donated under the RIM Critical Habitat Matching Program to about 3,600 acres since July 1986," said Program Coordinator Kim Hennings. "The donated parcels contain significant wildlife habitat or provide increased potential for habitat development, as well as opportunities for wildlife-related recreation."

Two metro area parcels donated to RIM include:

+ A 288-acre donation to the Gores Wildlife Management Area (WMA), south of Hastings in Dakota County, made by Edward and Ellen McMenomy of Rosemount, and Donald and Kathleen Fluegel and Samuel and Shirley Hertogs of Hastings.

+ A 40-acre wetland parcel was donated by Harvey and Audrey Skaar of Plymouth, which will be added to the Carlos Avery WMA in Anoka County.

"These two parcels are among six recent private land donations, totalling 1,031 acres, made to the RIM Critical Habitat Matching Program," Hennings explained. The other outstate donations include a 48.6 acre parcel donated by Carl and Verna Schmidt in LeSueur County; two donations totalling 334 acres in Crow Wing County from Donald and Beatrice Burris and Hobart and Gail Morris and Mary Lynn Nolan and a 320-acre parcel near Aitkin from First Bank System.

All private contributions to this program are "matched" with state funds to acquire and develop other critical fish and wildlife habitat in Minnesota. Donations may be in the form of cash, land, easements, or a pledge.

RIM Success Highlighted

A good turnout of state legislators attending a special conference in St. Paul on Feb. 25 were updated on why the Reinvest in Minnesota (RIM) Resources Act of 1986 has been called the most significant agriculture-natural resources legislation ever passed in Minnesota.

Reinvesting in Minnesota natural resources was proposed in 1984 by the Governor's Citizen Commission to Promote Hunting and Fishing in the state. The commission identified a critical need for renewed efforts to protect our soil and water resources, and revitalize the state's diminishing fish and wildlife habitat.

RIM program is a response to these needs — a comprehensive program to maintain and improve the quality of Minnesota's fish and wildlife resources, increase outdoor recreational opportunities, promote tourism, and directly benefit the state's hard-pressed farm economy.

RIM Conservation Reserve Program has been developed to retire up to 2.1 million acres of marginal cropland, and establish vegetative cover to reduce soil erosion, improve water quality and benefit fish and wildlife.

A total of $10 million in RIM funds was designated to develop RIM reserve easements with private landowners. The program is administered locally by SWCB district offices.

Farmers' response to the program thus far has been overwhelming. During the sign-up period last fall, SWCB districts received applications from 2,100 farmers seeking to retire nearly 60,000 acres of land. (To retire this amount of land would have required an estimated $25 million).

Using the available allocation, approximately 21,000 acres were enrolled in the reserve program for wildlife habitat.

RIM critical habitat matching program allows private individuals and groups to help fund the cost of acquiring and developing critical fish and wildlife habitat. Contributions to the program are matched, dollar-for-dollar, by state funds.

Contributions to the matching program may be made in cash, land, easements, or a pledge. Acceptable land donations will be designated as a wildlife management area, scientific and natural area or fisheries area if they meet the critical habitat criteria specified under RIM.

About 3,600 acres with a total appraised value of over $1 million have been donated under the program since July 1986. A total of $32,000 in collections has been received and over $194,000 has been pledged for development and acquistion of wildlife habitat and wetlands. (DNR staff are in the process of appraising and acquiring other potential land donations which would bring the total value of land donations to $2.5 million.)

State Awards Leases

State Executive Council recently approved the awarding of 120 leases of state-owned mineral rights to 12 mineral exploration companies. Action on awarding another five leases was deferred for further review.

The leases are to explore for gold, platinum, and other valuable minerals in northern Minnesota bedrock. The leases cover 50,307 acres in Beltrami, Carlton, Itasca, Koochiching, Lake and St. Louis counties.

Leases were awarded to the companies that submitted the high bids at the sale of state leases to prospect for copper, nickel and associated minerals held in December 1986. The bids were opened before the State Executive Council on Dec. 18, 1986. Twenty companies submitted a total of 176 bids for state leases on 125 mining units covering 52,347 acres.

After the bid opening, the bids were examined by the Department of Natural Resources to determine that the high bidders had the technical and financial capability to perform under the state leases. It was upon the recommendation of the DNR that the State Executive Council approved the awarding of the 120 leases. Action on another five leases covering 2,040 acres in Beltrami, Itasca and St. Louis counties was deferred pending receipt of information on the technical and financial capability of those high bidders to perform under the state lease.

Gold and platinum are two minerals of current interest to the mineral exploration companies, according to Elwood F. Rafn, Director of the DNR's Minerals Division. Traces of platinum have been discovered recently during a re-examination of an exploration drill core taken from bedrock southeast of Ely in 1969. DNR's analysis of glacial soil at two areas in northern Minnesota has recently revealed encouraging signs for the potential discovery of gold in the bedrock. Mary Vadis, manager of Mineral Potential Evaluation for DNR, says the bedrock geology of parts of Minnesota is similar to other places in the world where these minerals are mined.

Including these 120 leases just awarded, there are now 23 companies and two individuals holding 620 leases on over 250,000 acres in 10 counties in a search for gold and other valuable minerals.

Leases allow the exploration companies to conduct geological surveys and drill bedrock in their search for minerals. If a valuable mineral deposit is discovered, the companies would be required to obtain a permit to mine, prepare an environmental impact statement and obtain a number of state permits before mining could begin.

Companies and individuals must pay rent on the state leases they hold. If a deposit is mined, they pay a royalty to the state on the minerals that are extracted. Rents and royalties are directly distributed to the permanent school fund, counties, school districts, cities, state acquired land funds and general fund.

Twenty years ago, the state first issued state copper, nickel, and associated mineral leases. Since that time, it is estimated that nearly $200 million has been spent in Minnesota by exploration companies, of which about $45 million has been spent since 1982. The leases just awarded should result in the expenditure of over $10 to $15 million in Minnesota by the exploration companies over the next few years, and will greatly increase the chances of finding commercial deposits of minerals.

NEWFOLDEN...

Wednesday—Curt and Elaine Thompson, Ellen Hjelle, Emma Kammen and Olga Thompson went to Lenten services at Bethania Lutheran church. Afterwards they all enjoyed lunch at the Curtis Thompson home.

GRANT GRABANSKI, a Northland Community College freshman from Grand Forks, received a congratulatory handshake from Pioneers head coach Rick Nelson as he rounded third base after hitting a two-run fourth inning home run in the second game of a Northern Division baseball doubleheader against Fergus Falls at the Thief River Falls fairgrounds diamond. Fergus Falls won both games, 11-6 and 13-2 to drop Northland's record to 0-7 for the year.

MCC-Middle River Drops Opener To Crookston 11-7

Marshall County Central-Middle River cooperative high school baseball team opened its 1987 season Thursday by challenging Crookston before surrendering an 11-7 come-from-behind victory to the host Pirates.

Crookston, after owning a 2-1 lead through three innings, trailed 5-2 before coming up with a four-run fifth and a five-run sixth that offset a two-run Marshall County Central-Middle River sixth.

"We played pretty good baseball until those two innings," reported Marshall County Central-Middle River coach Sam Gebhart. "It was a fun game. Both sides hit the ball pretty well. Our pitching just isn't that strong right now to hold somebody down."

The two teams combined for 21 base hits — 12 by the Pirates. The errors were even at two-apiece.

Darin Rokke was 4-for-5 with two triples and a double for the losers. Darren Wagner and Corey Olson both had two hits. Wagner had a triple, and matched Rokke with two RBI.

Gebhart went through four pitchers during the game. Rokke started and pitched three innings. John Kragness, Casey Johnson and Tom Blazek all pitched in relief. Johnson took the loss. Kelly Madigan was the winning pitcher after he came in for starter Matt Peterson in the fourth.

Marshall County Central-Middle River has three outings scheduled this week — Tuesday at Tri-County-Strandquist, Friday at Warroad and Saturday vs. Roseau in Middle River.

Janelle Lorsung and Tricia Armstrong both had three hits in Northland's win in Game 1. Armstrong had a home run among her hits. Shari Larson and Annette Kofstad both had a pair of singles.

Elaine Hanson and Armstrong both had four hits in the Game 2 shoot-out. Armstrong homered twice as the Pioneers came up with their first sweep in four doubleheader outings. Kofstad homered and doubled, Becky Knutson doubled and had two singles, while Lorsung, Larson, Connie Geatz, and Leslie Grisanti all had two hits.

Snowshoe Rabbit

Rabbits are hairless, sightless, and virtually helpless at birth. The snowshoe hare (Varying Hare), however, can hop about soon after birth. They are born with eyes open and a furry hide. The adult snowshoe hare measures about 18 inches and weighs up to four or five pounds and females are generally larger than males.

Snowshoes are fighters, especially during the mating season. The snowshoe kicks with its powerful hind feet. Males sometime fight to death, making deep, raking cuts with their long strong claws.

Courtship antics of a hare deserve the expression "mad as a march hare." Males pursue females through woods or across fields at speeds up to 35 mph, stop, leap straight up into the air, and go careening off again. Gestation is 30 to 38 days. They have one to three litters per year, with two to four young per litter. Young hares weigh from two to six ounces at birth. The female scratches out a form up to eight inches deep, well-concealed in thick grass. She may have several nests and keep one or two babies in each. Little is known about nesting habits but it is believed they care for their young only three or four days. Although they reach adult size in two months, most hares do not breed until the following spring.

Varying hare got its name because it grows two coats of fur, white in the winter and brown in the summer. It also grows thick coarse hair on the side of its hind feet. This doubles its foot surface area, making it easier for the snowshoe to travel in deep, fluffy, snow.

Snowshoe hare lives in the north and central areas of Minnesota. An individual often spends its entire life in an area of less than 100 acres.

In summer the varying hare eats grass, herbs and other tender plants. During the winter it browses on twigs and strips of bark of many woody plants including aspen, young pine, spruce, birch and willow. Hares eat many of the same plants as deer. During population peaks, hares often consume more browse in a given area than deer. Therefore, competition for food occurs in some situations between deer and hare.

Digestive tract of a hare is inefficient and unable to extract all the nutrient value, therefore hares practice natural recycling. They deficate two kinds of droppings. One is dry and fibrous, the other is soft and mucus coated. They deposit the fibrous droppings as they move around but recycle the soft ones as soon as they have passed. Soft droppings are high in protein and B vitamins. These substances are extracted when the food passes through the digestive tract the second time (Coprouphagous).

Hares have many natural enemies. In this part of Minnesota the most important are birds of prey, (particularly great horned owls and goshawks), coyote, bobcat, fisher and lynx. Lynx are unique in that they specialize in hare predation to the extent that their population level is intimately tied to hare abundance.

One of the most striking features of snowshoe biology is cyclic and predictible population fluctuations. It appears the cause of the fluctuations is food related. At peak, densities can reach six hares per acre. This depletes the winter food supply of browse, causing malnourishment. Malnaurished hares have less chance of surviving until spring and produce fewer and smaller litters. In addition, as hares increase so do predators. Large predator populations at the beginning of a hare decline further aggravates the decline. In time, the predator population declines also. The vegetation recovers, and the stage is set for another cyclic buildup of the hare population.

Number of hares harvested by hunters also illustrates the cyclic nature of hare populations. An examination of harvest figures from 1979 to 1985 shows a peak estimated harvest of 286,000 hares in 1980 followed by a sharp decline to a low of 12,000 in 1985. Currently, the hare population is still low but believed to be increasing. The next peak is expected in the early 1990's.

For more information on hares and other specific wildlife, write to the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources, Bureau of Information and Education, 350 Centennial Office Building, St. Paul, MN 55155.

Funds are available to guarantee loans for Minnesota residents for use in creating new business or expanding existing enterprises, Russ Bjorhus, FmHA state director, said today.

"Although the Farmers Home administration guarantees a loan made by a commercial lender, we are interested in the economic health of our community and welcome inquiries about this program," Bjorhus said. "Our business and industry program was created primarily to provide jobs in smaller towns in rural communities."

"There are probably many people in the community who are not familiar with the opportunities available under the business and industry program, especially the fact that we can make loans to a variety of sizes of businesses, including family-size enterprises," he added.

"We are especially interested in anything we can do to help improve job opportunities for farmers who are trying to find new occupations.

Information about the program can be obtained from the FmHA office located at 316 North Robert Street, St. Paul, MN 55101, telephone number (612) 290-3842.
